Girl Scout News

Vacation camping with the Girl Scouts.

The real Girl Scout camp is a kind of Utopia, where there is no buying or selling, no rivalry even in clothes, no competition even in athletics, no straining after any goal. It is a place where only things count that have enduring value, the kind of things that are at once the substance and the sauce of life.

Meals, sleep, and exercise for mind, soul and body are the main ingredients of the camp program. The exercise mental and otherwise, includes dramatic, nature lore, nearly all the arts, athletics, and other things indefinable, such as watching the clouds drift on a windy day, or waiting hours in the woods to photograph a wood-chuck.

Water sports are a feature of the girl scout camp program The plans is to make every Girl Scout a swimmer, this summer. Life saving is taught under the American Red Cross rules, and every camper is encouraged to be as much at home in the water as on land. No elaborate physical set-up is necessary as a rule for the study of anything else. The best materials for nature study, for example, can be found on the camp site.

The simplicity of the camp equipment, it is believed, acts as a spur to the imagination, that is why a girl needs her wits and enthusiasm in camp. Resourcefulness is a quality cultivated by the Girl Scouts. There is no such word as "impossible" in there vocabulary.

Suppose a girl wants some special color of gauze for a play and there is no time or opportunity to purchase same from a store. Does she simply do without it, certainly not. The nature counsellor or other camper will be able to direct her in making dye from poke berries or sumac leaves etc.

Life in camp, divested of all that is artificial, presents its problems in the raw, so to speak, and one cannot solve them by running to mother or to the nearest telephone. A girl who has been to camp usually discovers what she is made of; whether she is dependable and rsourceful as an individual and whether she is kind and cooperative as a member of a group. this is excellent training for citizenship as well as for a happy life.

After all, the main point at camp for the girl is that she should have a good time.

The cost of a vacation at camp is a minimum, there are no luxuries, yet no essential for safety and health is overlooked.

Mrs. O. B. Cooper is camp chairman of the Girl Scout Council of Montevallo, and any girl who is interested in camping for the coming summer may procure information from her, or any one of the Girl Scout captians.

Ala. Baptist To Stage Campaign

The Baptists of Alabama are in a campaign to raise $5,000.00 on Mother's Day for their orphans home.

What can be more appropriate on Mothers' Day than a CASH OFFERING "in memory for Motherless children?" There are 171 children in the Baptist Home who are deprived of Mothers' love and care. They are the awards for Baptists of Alabama and are supported by free will offerings of the state. This day has been set apart offically by the Baptists of Alabama for a cash contribution. It is expected that they will respond liberally.

Senate Committee Defies President and Richberg on NRA Extension—Roosevelt Lists "Must" Bills and Business Opposes Them.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.

DISREGARDING the wishes of President Roosevelt, the finance committee of the senate adopted and reported for passage a simple resolution continuing the national recovery act until April 1, 1936, and at the same time making these provisions:

Donald Richberg

1. No price fixing shall be permitted or sanctioned in codes, except in those relating to mineral or natural resources which now have price fixing provisions.

2. No trade engaged in intrastate commerce shall be eligible for a code.

3. The President is given specified time in which to review present codes to carry out the conditions laid down in the first two exceptions to the resolution.

Both President Roosevelt and Donald Richberg, head of the NRA, had urged the passage of a new two year NRA bill which would set up a stricter dictatorship over business and industry. The senate finance committee, however, would not consent to this and instead passed the resolution, which was drawn up by Senator Clark of Missouri and approved by Chairman Pat Harrison. Twelve senators first called at the White House and the President seemed willing to accept the continuing resolution until Mr. Richberg came in and protested urgently; whereupon Mr. Roosevelt turned it down. The committee then took the action noted by a vote of 16 to 3, defying both the President and Richberg.

Senator Harrison said he had no doubt the senate would adopt the resolution with little debate.

HIGH optimism marked the "fireside chat" which President Roosevelt delivered over the radio to the people of America, which people, he said, are, as a whole, "feeling a lot better—a lot more cheerful than for many, many years." He asserted we are already on the unmistakable march toward recovery, and told how he means to promote the return to normal conditions with his works relief program. He promised to put to work three and a half million persons now on the relief rolls, and to press for enactment of legislation he considers necessary for carrying on the New Deal.

President Roosevelt

Only once did Mr. Roosevelt allude to such critics of his administration as Senator Long, Father Coughlin and Governor Talmadge. He said:

"The overwhelming majority of people in this country know how to sift the wheat from the chaff in what they hear and what they read. They know that the process of the constructive rebuilding of America cannot be done in a day or a year, but that it is being done in spite of a few who seek to confuse them and to profit by their confusion."

These six "fundamental principles," said the President, must guide the work relief program: Projects must be useful, most of the money must go for labor, "a considerable proportion of the costs" must be returned to the treasury, only those projects which can employ persons on relief will be approved, and projects will be approved in a given area in proportion to the unemployed in that area.

LEGISLATION which the President said, in his radio talk, should be enacted by congress immediately included the old age and unemployment insurance bill, the NRA extension bill, the public utility holding company bill, the transportation control bill, and the banking bill.

Here he comes into conflict again with the views of business leaders of the country. The National Association of Manufacturers has just issued its economic analysis of conditions, which says recovery is "within our grasp" and that the nation is closer to breaking the back of the depression than at any time for years, but asks that, in order to stimulate business, the administration and congress temporarily shelve as "disturbing" such legislation as unemployment insurance, the omnibus banking bill, the utility holding company bill, the 30-hour work week, the Wagner labor disputes bill, the Guffey bituminous coal measure and proposed changes in railroad laws.

Of tied-up capital, the analysis said this:

"Surveys indicate that close to $20,000,000,000 in expenditures, which would give employment to 4,000,000 men for two years, is pent up in the field of factory expansion, renovation and rehabilitation alone.

"The release of this flow of private capital by removing political uncertainties would dwarf the billions appropriated by congress for relief and make unnecessary the expenditure of much of the taxpayers' money."

This document was given out as the members of the United States Chamber of Commerce were gathering in Washington for their twenty-third annual convention, and naturally their speakers endorsed it and attacked much of the proposed legislation mentioned as unwarranted intrusion of the government into business.

Before it adjourned the chamber adopted resolutions condemning abolition of utility holding companies, opposing the banking bill, asking for relaxation and extension of the NRA instead of the administration bill, and postponing "for further study" the question of social security.

Henry I. Harriman, who has been president of the organization for three years, retired from that office in favor of Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y.

HOW the New Dealers propose to redistribute wealth by double taxation of large estates is revealed by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in a letter to Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the senate finance committee. Mr Morgenthau outlines a plan of imposing inheritance taxes and also retaining the existing estate taxes, asserting this is in line with "our fundamental objectives." That this would result in the dissolution of large properties, the secretary recognizes, for he says:

Secretary Morgenthau

"To prevent the necessity of hasty liquidation of large properties in order to pay the tax, it might be provided that inheritance taxes be payable in a convenient number of installments."

The plan as outlined by Mr. Morgenthau is to impose graduated inheritance taxes on estates, with rates following those of the present income tax rates, which approximate 60 per cent on incomes of a million dollars or more. The present estate taxes have a maximum of 60 per cent over ten million dollars.

Thus there would first be a tax of 60 per cent upon the estate or gift, and then another tax of 60 per cent to be paid by those inheriting or receiving it. This would amount to a combined rate of 85 per cent on an estate of one hundred million dollars.

If all this money were handed out to the poorer people, even Huey Long might be satisfied.

SECRETARY ICKES' Department of the Interior has now been elevated to the level of the State, Treasury and Agriculture departments, for congress has granted one of Harold's dearest wishes and given him an undersecretary, whose salary is to be $10,000 a year. This was a senate amendment to the Interior department appropriation bill, and was accepted by the house, 243 to 92, only after considerable pressure had been applied by the administration. Many of the house Democrats have asserted that Mr. Ickes snubbed them, and they would have liked nothing better than to administer a rebuke to him by defeating the amendment, but the party leaders drove them into line.

ARIZONA'S victory over the government in the Parker dam case ruled on by the Supreme court alarmed the New Dealers for the safety of some of their other big projects of the same nature. The court decided that Secretary Ickes, as public works administrator, was without authority to dam navigable rivers unless specifically ordered by congress and that the law creating the PWA had not listed any such specific projects as the Parker dam. The same applies to many huge reclamation projects that have received PWA funds, and it is not unlikely that suits will be brought to stop some of them. Mr. Ickes said congress would be asked to authorize specifically the construction of the Parker dam.

FEDERAL Judges Woodward, Wilkerson and Lindley of Chicago are not going to be impeached, for the house subcommittee investigating equity and bankruptcy receiverships and practices reported the evidence taken did not warrant such action. The report said that in several instances "conduct prejudicial to the dignity of the federal judiciary" was disclosed, but that substantial improvements had been made both in the rules of the court and in the law applicable to the administrator of receiverships and bankruptcy litigation.

CHAIRMAN JOHN J. M'SWAIN of the house military affairs committee sent to the President a letter of apology for disclosure of defense plans outlined in executive sessions of the committee, and assumed full responsibility for "the unfortunate incident."

McSwain was rebuked by letter from the President for the publication in a house document of possible defense plans against Canada and British and French islands in the Atlantic and the Caribbean in the event of war. Brig. Gens. F. M. Andrews and Charles E. Kilbourne had outlined the program before a secret meeting of the committee.

Three-Ring Circus

Washington.—In the last two weeks the National Capital has been under the tent of a three-ring circus, if ever one existed. At the Capitol building, there has been utter confusion as Democrats fought among themselves and Republicans and Independents sat on the sidelines and said "sic 'em." At the other end of Pennsylvania avenue, business activity has been amazing. The President was beginning to start to commence to spend five billion dollars. In between has been the largest hangover of Easter visitors the Capital city has known in recent years.

Mr. Roosevelt, having complete control of the largest sum of money ever turned over to one man, has been running his brain at lightning speed to make good on his promise that actual spending will begin in two months. He has announced that some sixty agents of the government will participate in the spending function but roosting on top of the various spending groups are to be three newly created boards, each responsible to his direction and each enjoined to bear down in order that the public works and relief funds in his charge may flow freely.

I hear general commendation of the President for selecting Frank C. Walker of Montana and New York to head up the spending operations. Mr. Walker, a lawyer, is experienced in a big business way and is accepted everywhere as a man with capacity to do the job. The fly that is floating around and threatens to get into the ointment, however, is the existence of two schools of thought in the administration. This condition may undo the good work which Mr. Walker is regarded as capable of doing.

* * *

President Will Guide

The five-billion-dollar spending machine will be guided first by the President, second by Mr. Walker and third by the various agencies now in existence. They are supposed to present plans and Mr. Walker will be expected to analyze and determine their values.

Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, undersecretary of agriculture, will have something like nine hundred million dollars to spend in remaking the rural districts of the nation in a job variously described as "rural resettlement" and other similar short titles. This program contemplates expansion and intensification of work now being done by the Agricultural Adjustment administration and the Federal Emergency Relief administration, including attacks on the problem of dust storms and other types of soil erosion. Although Professor Tugwell has no plans complete, he is working in the direction of transplanting many farmers from poor land where living is hard to more fertile fields. Under his jurisdiction also will be reforestation and a general examination of land uses.

A second agency that is new in the current set-up provides for development of rural electrification. The third new spending movement is directed at dangerous railroad grade crossings. The funds that will be set aside for these latter two, however, will total only about one-fourth as much as Professor Tugwell will spend in his orgy.

Other scheduled programs for expenditure include:

Assistance to clerical and professional workers—the white collar folks.

Loans and grants to states, cities and counties.

Development of new housing construction in cities and rural districts and general reconditioning and remodeling of homes already existing.

Extension and expansion of the Civilian Conservation corps to a maximum of six hundred thousand workers.

Ickes a Target

Although the President assured congress that he himself would administer the five-billion-dollar fund, and succeeded in quieting criticism to some extent by the statement, official announcement of the allotment board shows the name of Secretary Ickes as chairman. Many caustic darts were fired at Mr. Ickes during the two months while the public works bill was held up in congress, because members did not like the Ickes policy as public works administrator. Of course, as the set-up now stands Mr. Walker will determine the character of spending and Mr. Ickes and his allotment board will determine how much money each may have. That would seem to eliminate the causes of trouble experienced heretofore by the members of congress and the Ickes organization. Nevertheless, critics of the secretary have begun to suspect something.

Mr. Roosevelt has said in White House press conferences several times lately that he would permit no delay in getting the spending machinery in motion. He assured the country in his radio speech the other night that his policy was to be speed and assistance where the money will do the most good. The President certainly has made clear that he is anxious to get things going.

Amuses the Press

Newspaper correspondents reporting Capital news had a good laugh the other day at the attempt of the Democratic national congressional committee to satisfy all sections of the country in an announcement made by the committee respecting its organization. I can conceive of no better way to tell the story than to quote opening paragraphs from four statements issued simultaneously by the committee on the subject mentioned. The paragraphs which follow are taken from statements which were delivered to my office in one envelope:

1—"The West will play an important part in the direction of the campaign of the Democratic national congressional committee, now being organized by Chairman P. H. Drewry of Virginia. Representative Abe Murdock of Beaver, Utah, has been selected as a vice chairman of this committee, and, under plans proposed, will have general supervision over the campaign in the West."

2—"In the organization on for the coming campaign of the Democratic national congressional committee the South will play a very important part. Not only is Congressman P. H. Drewry of Virginia chairman of this committee, but he has selected other southern congressmen to aid him. Representative Virgil Chapman of the Sixth Kentucky district has been chosen as chairman of the very important executive committee. His is what is historically known as the Henry Clay district, and has been a political battle ground of the nation for considerably more than one hundred years."

3—"Unless all signs fail, the Middle West will be an important battle ground in the congressional elections of next year. Representative P. H. Drewry of Virginia has recognized this when, as chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee, he aided in the selection of Congressman Eugene B. Crowe of the Ninth Indiana district, as first vice chairman of the Democratic national congressional committee. Representative Crowe will have general supervision over Democratic campaign activities of congressional candidates throughout the central part of the country. His jurisdiction will extend from the Ohio to the Great Lakes. Practically every national election for the last one-half century or more has been won or lost in the states comprising this district."

4—"In the reorganization of the Democratic national congressional committee Chairman P. H. Drewry of Virginia has sought to give additional prominence to members from the East. Representative William J. Granfield of Massachusetts has been selected as one of the vice chairmen and will have general supervision over campaign activities throughout the North and East. Associated with him will be Representative William N. Rogers of New Hampshire, who has been named a member of the executive committee. Congressman Rogers represents the district which boasts of Daniel Webster, the great orator of one hundred years ago."

Of course, it was intended that the statements should be distributed to correspondents from the various sections of the country so that western newspapers would have been told how important their section was and eastern newspapers would have had information to the effect that the eastern section was all important. It was not an unusual procedure but it happened that the statements were distributed together and that afforded the butt of the joke.

Bankhead's Idea

Senator Bankhead (Dem., Ala.), of cotton production control fame, has another idea for legislation. This time the senator is seeking to make it possible, he says, for every tenant farmer to become a land owner. He has legislation pending in congress to carry out his program and it appears now that it may go through.

It is proposed to create another government-owned corporation which would have power to issue one and a half billion dollars' worth of government-guaranteed bonds. These bonds could be sold by the corporation and the proceeds used to buy land for present landless farmers. They would become owners in name and would have the millstone of that debt around their necks for twenty years if they succeeded in earning enough income to pay off the debt in that time. It is true the measure would open the way for land ownership and would make the terms of ownership about as easy as is possible when one borrows another's money. Those facts, however, do not remove the conditions which a good many observers hold are bad.

For instance, it is difficult to see how the tenant can make a living and sufficient profit to pay off the debt to the government if he has been unable to accomplish that same purpose with money borrowed commercially. It is being said freely that such legislation will serve only the purpose of relieving present owners of land which they do not want by its transfer through the government to others who may not be able to pay for it. In other words, it is another bill to put more people in debt.

Explaining to Canada
Mr. Morgenthau's Work
A West Point for Crime
Alfred du Pont

Canada, hearing of a proposed United States "camouflaged military airplane base near her border," asks for information. The State department will gladly supply it.

Arthur Brisbane

No military forts separate the two countries, no battleships on the big lakes. Inhabitants on both sides, being civilized, have no idea of attacking each other; neither craves what the other owns.

Some day, let us hope, the two countries will be one, by mutual agreement, or Canada might annex the United States in a friendly way, if that were more acceptable, a majority of voters ruling.

The North American continent, from the Mexican border to the North pole, should be one nation, or if Mexico and others would come in, all the way down to the Panama canal, so much the better.

There will be no war between this country and any part of the British empire. Common sense forbids it. Any air base of ours would probably be as useful to Canada as to ourselves, and we should be delighted to see Canada establish a string of air bases to the north of us, especially along her Pacific and Atlantic coasts.

Secretary Morgenthau, never in business as a banker, interested, personally, in farming more than in money, has shown the outside world, to its surprise, that he can make the American dollar keep its place in the procession, regardless of many billions of bond issues, no gold basis, and other novelties.

Gamblers that ordinarily enjoy speculation in "exchange" are afraid of the American dollar. And curiously, while some Americans are sending money to other countries, to make it "safe," foreigners, and especially Britishers, are investing more and more heavily in the United States.

Washington discusses a "West Point for war on crime," a semi-military school under the attorney general to train fighters to meet the national crime army, that collects almost as much money as the national government itself takes in.

The war would be simple if government would treat crime as it would an outbreak of yellow fever, or Asiatic cholera, taking it really seriously.

Habitual criminals are known, men of ten or fifteen convictions, racketeers, gunmen. Make it clear that once locked up they would never get out as long as they lived and you would see the crime fade away.

Very bad news for this country, in which efficiency and energy count as public asset number one, is the sudden death of Alfred du Pont, stricken with heart disease in his residence near Jacksonville, Fla. At seventy years of age Mr. du Pont was planning, as he should be, all sorts of new enterprises that would have been interesting to him. He needed no more money, wanted to be useful.

Great Britain is excited about the Germans building submarines, especially annoyed to learn that the submarines are of a "super" type, carrying guns as well as torpedo tubes, able to hunt British or other ships anywhere on earth, some alleged to carry a small airplane, easily launched. Britain has plane-carrying submarines, but that is different. German submarines now finished are about to start maneuver practice off Wilhelmshafen.

Nations rise to great heights, glorious power, then crumble, disappear; desert sands cover their streets and temples. Patient archeology digs them out and wonders. Read Volney's "Ruins of Empires" to find that process well described.

What causes it? Do nations grow old and die "naturally," inevitably, as individuals do? Sometimes plagues wipe them out: the black death nearly destroyed Europe. Malaria tore down the power of Rome and recently killed some 50,000, following a sudden mosquito attack in the Far East.

You are not surprised to learn, in spite of pacifist protests and protests from certain Japanese who are not pacifists, the President thinks it wise to explore around and see just what this country needs in the way of "defense methods" on the Pacific.

A crime, unbelievable, has been reported from Texas. Howard Pierson, aged twenty, killed his mother and father, then shot himself in the arm, pretending that bandits had done it.

After police had kept him awake for awhile he confessed, said he did it "for revenge."

He did it actually, authorities declared, for $17,000 insurance on his father's life. He killed the mother because she would have got the insurance.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave, and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Judge Able Armitage hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, when the flames are subdued, discovers it was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time is set. Ben discovers Dawn McManus is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare. Brandon compels a woman (known as "Lydia") who is in his power, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl. At a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn, Lydia makes public her charges. Overwhelmed, Elliott can only make a feeble denial. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for him. While in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead, but his fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe him dead. The would-be killer is proved to be Red Bart Delaney, notorious desperado. "Aunt Emma," Dawn's closest friend, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation.

"When a man loves a girl, that girl can't let herself love him, can she, when she's under a cloud herself? She can't bring a man's children into the world and have them whispered about as the grandchildren of a murderer?"

"Dawn! Dawn, girl, don't think that! Why, it's—"

'But it's so, Able! I don't wa-want to talk about it. All I can do for Ben now is to let him know how weak I was to doubt him and to use any influence I may have to protect him from this terrible danger. I will do that; I must do that because it is duty. But it must stop there. It can't go on, you see. Not while I have nothing more than just my faith in my father's good name."

Able, the wise man that he was, did not force the argument. He brought his team to a halt before the Hoot Owl office, gave the reins to Dawn and stepped out.

"Where's Ben?" he asked.

The bearded man looked over his shoulder, recognized Able and then his gaze went past the man to the waiting cutter where Dawn sat.

"He's . . ." It seemed as though Martin's voice failed after that word. He half started from his chair and the pen, dropped from flexed fingers, rolled across the ledger sheet. He made a faint sound and in his eyes appeared an expression that startled Able.

"What's wrong, Martin?" he asked in alarm, stepping quickly into the room. "Sick?"

"No . . . all right, now," the other said, as if with great effort. "Ben? In the mill, I think."

He picked up his pen, then, and bent over his work.

Able crossed the mill-yard looking for Ben and as he went Martin rose cautiously from his chair, moved quietly to be in line with the window and stared for a long interval at the girl huddled in the robes. His hands worked and his breath was uneven.

"Dawn is here to see you," Able said simply as he encountered Ben. "She had me bring her out so she could talk to you. She's waiting over by the office."

Elliott stood hesitant for an instant; then turned and walked swiftly along the pond. Able watched him go but did not follow. What was to be said by the girl was not for his ears, he knew.

Ben gave no sign of recognition as he approached the cutter; made no salutation as he came near the girl who sat watching him so steadily. He only spoke her name, when he was at her side. She gave him a small, gloved hand and smiled wanly.

"I have come to say many things, Ben," she began in a strange, strained voice. "To beg forgiveness, to beg other things . . . perhaps to explain a little.

"A week ago tonight,"—struggling, now, to hold her voice steady—"I ran out of the dance hall and on home, thinking that that woman was honest. The time since then, until noon today, has been a nightmare.

"Lydia came to my house at noon. She explained everything. Aunt Em brought her. Aunt Em went to her house and convinced her that she had done a terrible thing to you and that an explanation to me was the only way to right the wrong. Lydia told me everything. . . . It was Mr. Brandon who thought out the plan and forced her to do it under threats of some sort. She didn't tell us what the threats were but left our house for the train and is gone from Tincup forever. . . . And I've come to tell you how miserable I feel to think that I was weak enough to act as Mr. Brandon seemed to be sure I would act. . . ."

"Oh, I'm glad!" he said earnestly. "I've . . . Why, it completely knocked me off my pins! Dawn, it's been terrible for you but . . . but this makes me so happy!"

"I'm happy because you are happy," she said, but something in her tone and expression dampened his enthusiasm, checked his soaring spirits. She was so calm, so steady, so restrained; her mood was not at all that of one who comes joyously to wipe out heartbreaking misunderstanding. "And I'll never forgive myself for . . . for falling into the trap that was set for me, Ben!"

"Why shouldn't you? Any girl would have felt as you did. . . . But it's explained, now. Let's forget it and begin where we left off and find peace and—"

"There are sterner things to think of, first; quite different things, Ben. That is why I came out here, to talk to you about Bart Delaney. Able has told me what happened yesterday. You don't take it seriously enough. Keep safe until you're certain that the danger is past."

"Hide and skulk while other men protect me? A man can't do that, Dawn! I'll be on my guard, of course. But I can't run away from anybody who is trying to strike from behind. What would these boys here on the job think of me if I did? This man Delaney may be a hobgoblin for the rest of the country, but I can't let him be for me. If I do the safe thing and think of my own skin, some of our workers will tumble to the fact that I've no more courage than most of them, less than plenty. I can't let them down, you see, and still keep my standing in their eyes.

"It isn't worth it, Ben! It's my job, my property you're taking these risks for. It isn't fair to me!"

"I can argue that. I'm not anxious to be put out of the picture yet a while. I'll keep my eyes open. I've already made the move that should stop Delaney from trying me again. Able and the others have gotten you all in a flutter, Dawn. Don't worry. I'm coming to Tincup tonight and I'm going to appear to be thinking about nothing but the errands I have to do. Every second, I'll be on the watch for a crooked move from anybody. I promise you that. And when I've shown myself to people I'll come to see you and talk you into the same way of looking at this situation."

"Don't," she begged.

"But I can't keep away from you, now that this other mess has been explained!"

She shook her head.

"I'm asking two things of you. The first is to stay here; the other is not to come to see me. . . . Please!"

She put a hand on his with that plea, and he frowned.

"I can understand your being a little timid about having me around town but I can convince you that I'm right. It's Brandon or me, now, you see. If I run, he wins. . . . But this other: Dawn, don't you want me to see you?"

The girl's lips worked.

"No," she said, ever so faintly. "No. . . . Oh, please don't argue with me, Ben! Please don't come to see me. You don't understand. You may never understand. . . . But I'm begging you from the bottom of my heart not to come and see me again!"

"No, I don't understand. It's . . . Why, it's . . ." He laughed aloud at his own bewilderment and Able, in the near distance, mistook that laugh born of distress for one of relief and came toward them.

"Well, have you two got matters cleared up?" he asked.

Dawn nodded silently.

"Some things are cleared up," Elliott said. "But there are others. . . . Dawn, won't you explain?"

The girl turned her face to Able.

"I'm ready to go home now," she said weakly.

CHAPTER XII

Teams drove from the Hoot Owl toward town through the falling snow that evening. First went Ben Elliott, alone and sending his drivers at a spanking trot, wondering and at odds with himself.

Why was Dawn so obdurate in this matter of having him see her? Why that odd repression, as though she struggled to keep from saying the things that were bursting her heart?

His inability to answer those questions drove him into a dogged mood. He felt like blaming Brandon for this, as well as other troubles.

A half hour behind him came a team from camp, driven by Bird-Eye Blaine. A figure ahead stepped out of the ruts and awaited his approach.

"Yup. . . . Hello, Martin! Whoa. . . ."

"Misther Elliott gone in?" he asked. "He has, eh? . . . 'Nd Misther Red Bart Delaney still persecutin' th' country with his presince, loikely. Ah, th' b'y, th' b'y!"

Martin proved to be uncommunicative, however, and they drove much of the way in silence.

Ben turned his team into an alley, hitched and blanketed them, and then made his way between buildings to the town's principal thoroughfare which was lighted by glaring store fronts. He purchased some articles in a clothing store and did not see Dawn McManus enter, observe him, and then withdraw. When he went out again he did not notice that the girl followed him, waited outside while he bargained for a month's supply for camp in a butcher shop, and trailed along behind when he emerged.

From place to place he went, Dawn behind him in the flying snow and when she had been following so for half an hour, her eyes alert for others who might be watching Elliott, another fell into the train ahead of her. She saw this man step from a store entrance and follow Ben. She hastened to be close and not until she was abreast of him did she recognize John Martin, whom she had seen but once before. He did not turn his head and she dropped back. She had no doubts of his loyalty from what Ben had told her of his bookkeeper.

When Elliott went into the drug store she stood out of the light from the building and noted that also Martin loitered near. When Ben reappeared, Martin followed. . . .

For the better part of an hour this double stalking continued while the snow fell thicker and then Elliott turned into a side street and made the next turn into the alley where he had left his team.

Two figures followed him, hastening a bit as he disappeared into the gloom. Martin followed Ben, as Dawn trailed both.

And then, as Elliott drew close and spoke gruffly to his horses, another shadowy figure appeared: it was only a blur in the shadows, crouched and stealthy. The figure swept forward; an arm drew back and upward; it struck and with a muffled grunt Ben Elliott turned, falling sideways and backward under the impact of a blow.

Another voice lifted then in a sharp cry as John Martin ran forward and the indistinct figure which was poised over Elliott, about to strike again, turned, hesitated, whirled and fled.

"What is it, son?" Martin cried as he dropped to his knees beside Ben. Before a reply could come Dawn was there, moaning his name over and over.

"Knife!" Ben gasped. "In the neck . . . here . . ."

John Martin unbuttoned Elliott's thick jacket, ripped open the shirt and his fingers encountered a warm, sticky gush as he thrust them across the back.

"Knifed you! . . . Ah, son!"

Dawn peered close into the bearded man's face as though fearful of what he might say next.

"My house is just around the corner!" she cried. "Bring him there. . . . Oh, hurry!"

Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He could feel blood smearing over his side and back. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him.

"Hurry!" she said. "He's so weak!"

He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gush of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to be all about, warm breath fanned his face . . . and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply:

Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair."

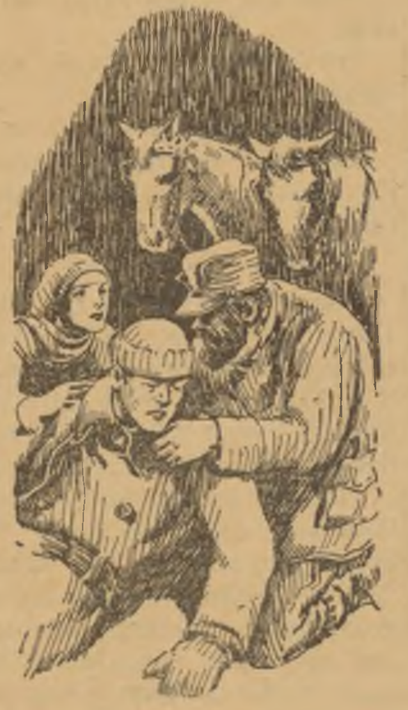
The wound was only a slender slit in the skin but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Elliott's face, the strength from the splendid muscles that lay relaxed now beneath clear skin.

"Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes closed. "I guess he'll be all right in a few days. . . . But what an escape!" He shrugged.

Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit; he seemed to lean forward and blinked slowly, incredulously. Then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation.

"Yes, a close shave," Martin muttered under his breath. "But now . . . He's in the best possible place in the world."

The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture. He did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He did not look at her until the woman gasped. It was a light, light gasp; so light that Emory Sweet did not hear. But Martin heard and turned and stood as though frozen in the posture. Aunt Em's head was held rigidly back, one hand pressed against a cheek.



"Knife!" Ben Gasped.

Quickly, Martin's finger went against his lips in a sealing gesture. He held so an instant and then slowly shook his head, a movement of unmistakable warning.

Dawn entered the hallway from the living room and these two relaxed from the rigidity of their strange pantomime. Em bustled out into the kitchen and Martin smoothed the covers of Elliott's bed with a hand that trembled slightly.

"Now, the boy's going to be all right," the doctor said. "I'll look in tomorrow. Quiet is going to be essential for a few days. You two women all right?"

A close observer might have noticed that Aunt Em's eyes were oddly averted from John Martin's searching gaze and that her breathing was quick.

"Why, it might be handy to have a man in the house tonight," she said, evenly enough. "I'm . . . I'm wondering if Mr Martin would stay. He could sleep on the couch in the living room."

"I'd be glad to," the man said and cleared his throat sharply. "There might be something I could do . . . for you."

He had looked at Dawn on this last and it seemed that his voice caught ever so slightly.

So it was arranged that he should stay through the night and the doctor left.

Aunt Em carried the light out of the sick room and placed it on a table in the hall. She bustled here and there, occupied with a variety of minor errands and finally drove Dawn to bed despite the girl's protests of sleeplessness.

Alone, she fixed blankets on the living room couch while Martin sat in the darkened bedroom. That done, she beckoned to him from the hallway.

They confronted one another there a long moment. The woman's face worked queerly and she seemed at a loss for words.

Once England's Nazareth

The Shrine of Our Lady at Walsingham, England, is where Henry VIII walked barefoot as a pilgrim. In a few years the ruler destroyed the Priory, confiscated the lands and treasuries, burnt the shrine and executed five of the Priory canons for treason. Another shrine was built in the Slipper chapel, so named because in ancient days pilgrims removed their shoes when visiting it. Walsingham once was England's Nazareth, which brought it immense fame. It was founded about 1061. Like Lourdes, it had its holy wells, and became famous for the many miracles which were believed to have been wrought there.

The Baby's Faculties

The ages when certain faculties first appear in average infants and children vary considerably. Memory and simple consciousness come soon after birth, curiosity at about ten weeks, the senses of shame, remorse and the ludicrous at fifteen months, self-consciousness at three years, the color sense at four years and the sense of fragrance at five years.—Collier's Weekly.

DOLLS OF MANY LANDS SHOWN IN PUBLIC LIBRARY

In the children's room at the public library at Westfield, Ohio, called the Atheneum, various dolls, illustrating well-known historical characters and others appearing in children's books, are on display.

In the dolls representing characters from literature group an interesting figure is that of Tiny Tim, created by Dickens in his immortal "The Christmas Carol." The small bit of Royal Doulton china shows an amazing likeness to one's conception of Tiny Tim. Then, too, in the group of literature characters are found the Little Women dolls, by Mme. Alexander. They are Meg, Beth, Jo and Amy. Little Red Riding Hood is another character portrayed in this collection.

Among the dolls representing foreign countries is a Sardinian doll in native costume of authentic color and style; a Swedish peasant woman, dressed in clothes made from homespun; a Czechoslovakian doll with ball joints making it possible to move her arms and legs and dressed in the native costume of the country, and Rosika, a Hungarian doll, dressed in the authentic girls' costume of her country.

Two Russian peasant dolls add interest to the group. These latter are Tanka and Vanka. The foot coverings of these two are made from strips of bark woven into sandals.

Two of interest are the Scottish dolls, dressed in Highlander costumes, one wearing an authentic royal Stewart tartan and the other dressed in the native costume of the from Ireland also are among those in the collection.

Among the dolls dressed to represent the United States are George and Martha Washington, dressed in costumes copied from pictures of the period. The silk of Martha's dress is about one hundred years old; John Alden and Priscilla, dressed in Pilgrim garb, and Lucy Rodgers, a china doll of the Civil war period.

Washington Kin

Miss Anne Washington, Middleport, Ohio, asserts she is a closer kin to George Washington than Miss Anne A. Madison Washington, who flew with Maj. James Doolittle over Washington's Colonial trails recently. Miss Washington bases her assertion on the fact that she is a granddaughter of Andrew Park, Baltimore merchant, who married Harriett, favorite niece of George and daughter of Samuel, George's full brother.

WHEN SPRING IS IN THE AIR

This is the time of year hen that seasonal "disease," spring fever runs its course. One of its more common manifestations is an urge to clean-up one's property, in order to get rid of winter's accumulation of rubbish, both indoors and out.

These individual clean-up campaigns are usually inaugurated for the purpose of improving a homes physical appearance—but, whether the property-owner realizes it or not, they like contribute toward fattening his pocketbook, in as much as they eliminate many ordinary and unnecessary fire hazards.

Closets and other places in the home where odd and ends accumulate are among the commonest starting places for residential fires. That accumulation of ancient newspapers—those dog-eared magazines—those old clothes which you will never wear again—that broken down furniture, all offer an invitation to fire. Start your clean-up campaign by giving these cast-offs to the needy, either directly or through some local charitable organization, where they can give comfort and use again. Then burn the sheer rubbish—and be sure to accomplish that latter task on a windless day.

Spring is likewise an excellent time for house and furniture re-painting. Another worth-while job is inspection of electric wiring—old, defective and sub-standard wiring start many a fire

"THEY STILL RING THE BELL."

The eternal question of why keep on advertising bobs up every week in discussions among local merchants. It's easy enough to see the need for advertising a sale. It's fairly easy for them to see why to advertise the arrival of new goods or the installation of a new service to the public.

The big question, though, is why advertise regularly.

An old timer comes up with this story.

"There was once a small dilapidated church on an old rundown corner in a certain town. The congregation was small and the preacher could barely exist.

"One day a bright young chap—one one of the few in the congregation — conceived the idea of advertising the church. In spite of the great shock to the elders, this chap during the coming years managed to carry out his idea. The church advertised in every way possible for a number of years.

"Now the small church is a huge edifice of stone, with beautiful windows, an organ, a vester choir and has the largest and most influential congregation in that city.

Somebody interrupted the story teller just here and said, "Uh-huh, and they don't advertise any more. They don't need to, They are well established and everybody knows about them. They are fixed for good."

"Oh yeah," said the teller of the story (the once young man in the congregation who had started it all years back), "so you think so. . . .

Ther's your answer, merchants. No matter how much prestige you have, no matter how many years you have been in business, you must still ring the bell every week to get your customers.—Exchange.

Cotton has become a very considerable problem. Some mills are closing because they can't make any money. Others are threatening to close.

Actually, cotton is suffering most from competition of other fabrics. Over production of wool, for example, has resulted in driving cotton from the field of a wool substitute. But most dangerous of all has been the invasion of it's field by rayon, a chemical product derived from cellulose. It is not literally true that you can stuff a pine log in a chute at one end of the plant and listen to a few chuggs from the machinery inside and see a finished garment come out neatly packed in a box. But rayon has accounted for the nonconsumption of millions of bales of lint each year for some time. Only a mechanical or chemical revolution can meet this competition.

We have a fine town and it will take the best efforts of all to develop it to its fullest. Let's get busy about this business of bringing Montevallo into its own, and making of this community a center of distinctive leadership of some kind of endeavor. If a community is going to seek leadership in some particular line, let it be a real leader and set a pace that will set it apart from other communities.

Like a lot of other people we know, we have the habit of finding old newspaper clippings and reading them. It is refreshing and brings to memory items and events long ago relegated to the limbs of those things forgotten.

This week, for example, we were looking through an old scrap book and found this little poem by Edgar A. Guest, clipped from an Atlanta paper dated 1923.

"The test of the game isn't skill,
But how do you stand the strain;
When the skies are all fair
You have courage to spare.
But how do you battle the rain?"

(Mrs. John Hardy)

One of the visitors to the Times office this week was talking about the New Deal. His observations were right in line with some of the opinions that have been expressed here.

"The big success of the New Deal has been in the field of human happiness," he said. "The Administration has fed a great many hungry people, and provided education for many children. That is important in evalluating its success or failure."

THE NEW 1935 FORD V-8 PICK UP
PICKUP $480 F. O. B. DETROIT

The proved power, speed, economy of the V-8 engine . . . plus improvements that make it a more rugged hauler than ever

The Ford V-8 Pickup has always been a car that could take punishment.

Try this 1935 job—whether you want something that will stand the abuse of farm work, or a tough, speedy unit for town hauling or use around a plant. This year, improvements have been added that enable you to use the Ford V-8 Pickup harder than ever—and to do it at less cost.

Even the proved V-8 engine has been made more economical, more dependable. It has new crankcase ventilation that rids the engine of water vapor, minimizes sludge, reduces oil dilution and corrosion. It has copper-lead connecting rod bearings that resist burning and pounding out. It has cast alloy camshaft and crankshaft that outwear forged steel.

The front axle is stronger—20%. The frame has been strengthened—with a new X-member, double reinforced side rails, new cross members at front, center and rear. The chassis is mounted on the Ford Full-floating Springbase—giving more uniform tire wear, longer brake life, better brake action, improved over-all operation, easier riding and handling. Brakes and clutch are new—stronger, sure-acting, easier to operate.

But the way to find out what this new Ford V-8 Pickup will do for you—and save for you—is to put it through a tough trial on your own job. Your Ford dealer will let you have one any time you say.

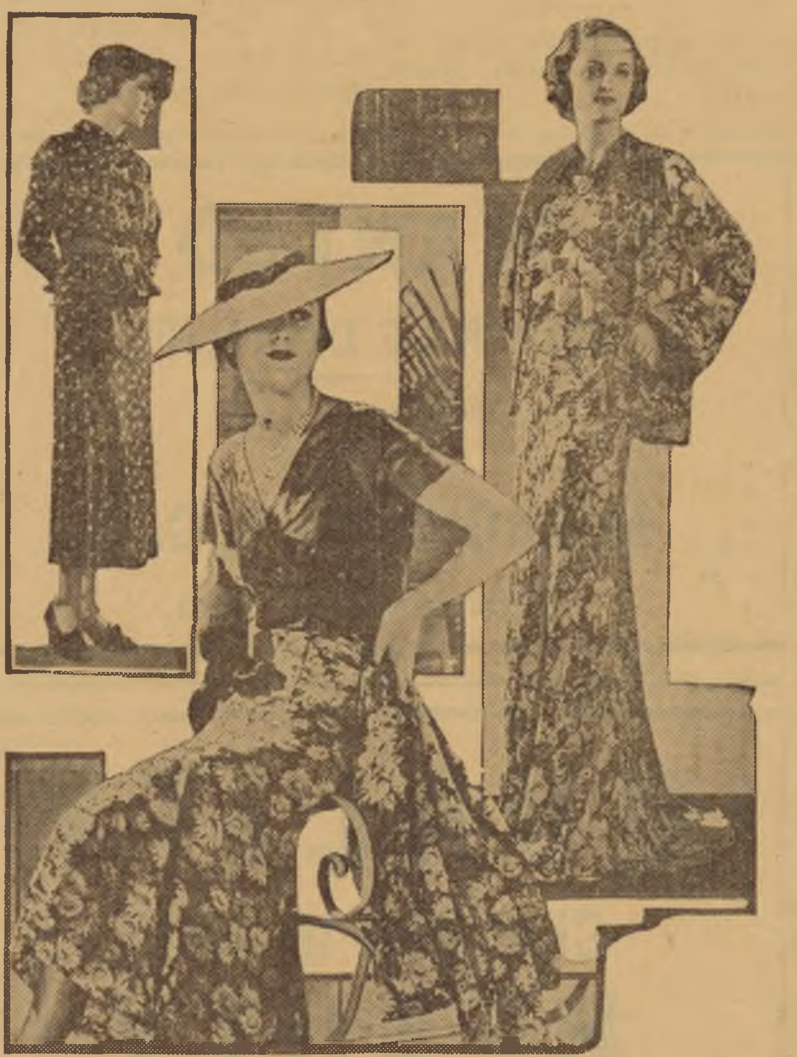
Charming Print Jacket Costumes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



FANCY a two-piece suit or a jacket-and-frock costume made exactly as if tailored of cloth, only instead of being of tweed or broadcloth or serge or a novelty woolen, it is fashioned of a gay print, either crepe or taffeta. It's news we are telling you, for the print jacket suit is fashion's big headline feature this spring.

Perhaps you have already acquired one of these attractive and wearable print suits. If not, why not, and if you haven't, hurry up and take a look at the charming types which the shops are showing.

The print may not be expensive. In fact, some of the most successful models are of simple, unpretentious patternings and weaves. Small figures on dark backgrounds are favored for practical daytime wear. The skirts are either gored or cut straight and slim with a slit hemline or, if you take delight in being very ultra, choose one of the new circular flare skirts with its widened hemline such as Paris designers announce as the newest silhouette. The jacket that is smartest is tailored along classic lines, is fitted in slightly at the waist and buttons up the front and is only hiplength. However, any style is in good form from swagger to cape-jacket style.

If you want to simulate a jacket effect, that is wear a one-piece dress that has a jacket and skirt "look," the charming model to the left in the picture is the answer. This soft taffeta frock has intriguing little style touches adapted from the utterly feminine regency period. Bows and belt of scarlet velvet ribbon pick up one of the colors in the print. The hat is of onion skin straw with a chou of velvet ribbons at the front.

This idea of employing little velvet bows instead of buttons is a note worth keeping in mind when you plan your new frocks and blouses. It is an important this-season fashion gesture. It is not unusual for these sprightly wee bows to travel up and down the front of a one-piece dress (perhaps cut in the new princess lines) from neckline to hemline. Then, again, they may even fasten a bodice up the back or pose in little groups on one's blouse. In fact, whenever a decorative touch is needed, just scatter a flock of little velvet bows over your costume for effect and up-to-the-moment chic.

Printed chiffon suits for dressy daytime wear are making fashion history. They are really the most flattering costumes one can wear at an afternoon social gathering. The young woman seated is wearing a striking ensemble, the jacket and skirt of which are fashioned of a printed chiffon which shows cornflower blue, beige and yellow flowers massed on a black ground. The classic tailored jacket has a boutonniere of cutout chiffon posies. It is lined with black taffeta to match the slip. The blouse is of handsome black lace. Black trims and faces the wide-brimmed shallow beige straw hat.

VOGUE FINDS NEW USES FOR PIGSKIN

The uses for pigskin leather have steadily been increasing. So many new things have been fashioned of it, that the range in accessories mounts into numbers.

First of all, are pigskin shoes, and there is nothing that wears better than this leather, or looks any finer with sports clothes. It has been dyed to black, brown, navy . . . any color desired and is excellent in white shoes for summer.

The pigskin handbag is certainly a smart accessory, holds its shape exceptionally well, and has a grain that doesn't show markings which often mar the appearance of smooth leathers.

Pigskin gloves are the perfection of the sports world. In natural, white, brown, navy and black, they can be found to accompany any tweed, and do it in the grand manner.

Frothy Fabrics Are Used for New Dancing Frocks

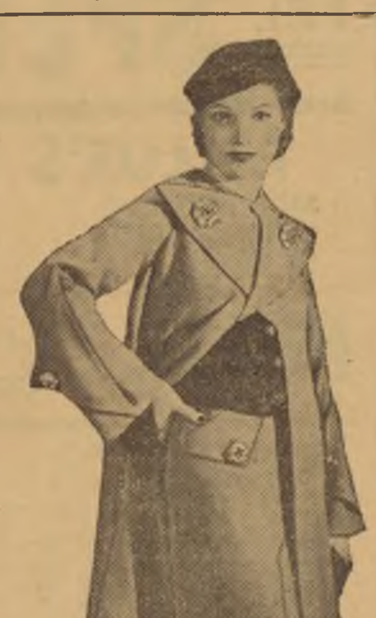
Dancing frocks continue to add charm and color to the evening scene. Almost everything goes but lately there seems to be a fresh interest in frothy fabrics rather than in the stiff moires, satins and lames that have obtained for so long. Many of the frocks planned for resort wear are masses of tulle and there is more lace than has been the case for some seasons. Pleatings are generally seen when it comes to frocks done in a sheer medium. One frock of soft blue tulle embroidered in silver stars has the skirt entirely knife-pleated as is the peplum. Soft brown lace with touches of rose pink velvet makes another delightful frock for southern or cruise wear.

Vogue for Gold

The vogue of gold metal is still in full swing, but most of the new models in clips, dress ornaments, fancy bracelets or necklaces often show gold metal combined with either black metal in onyx effect or with transparent plastic materials.

BUTTONS ON SUITS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS



On account of the importance of buttons this season many stores are devoting extra space to their display. The types of buttons in favor are legion. Novelty enters largely into the scheme of things. Very new and chic for the dressy blouse or frock are stars cut out of mother of pearl or set with tiny rhinestones. Clever, too, and exceedingly attractive are the new flower buttons made of an ivory-like composition and tinted realistically. The buttons which enhance the good-looking suit pictured are woven of green straw. The cloth which fashions this softly tailored two-piece has the smooth finish for which best designers are expressing preference. The coat front may be thrown open in a way to achieve big revers. Many of the smartest dresses and coats sport huge revers this season.

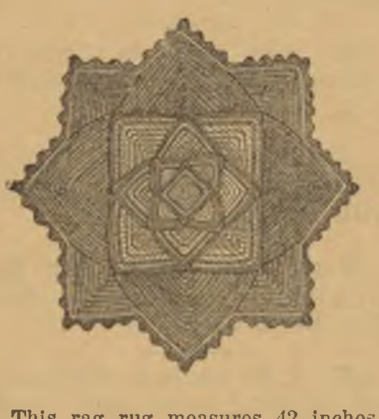
Unique "Primrose" Rug to Crochet

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



This rag rug measures 42 inches and requires about three pounds of material to finish. It appears to be made of six squares each of a different size, with the horizontal positions alternating. Work is started with the center square about 5 inches in diameter. Triangles are then crocheted on the four sides of inner square forming the second square. Continue same way for third, fourth and fifth squares. The sixth square is the same size as fifth square and therefore requires smaller triangles on sides than the others. Colors should be so arranged that center is in light shades of yellow, while outer triangles represent the petals of flowers, and may be shaded in color desired. This can be made into a very attractive and unique rug, depending very much on the color scheme used.

This is one of the twenty-six crocheted and braided rugs illustrated with instructions in Grandmother Clark's rug book No. 25. Detailed instructions are given in this book for the "Primrose" rug, and if you are interested, send 15c to our Rug Department and we will send it to you by mail.

NATURAL TASTES BEST GUIDES TO CORRECT EATING?

We Americans have become health-conscious and in a subtle way it is a psychologically bad point of view. In the first place we are losing interest in the taste of food and in good cooking. All we think of is whether our food contains the right number of calories; whether it is sufficiently endowed with vitamins A, B, C, D and sometimes W and Y. Whether it has enough minerals, and roughage; whether, in other words, it is good for us.

It is a dismal point of view to sit down at the table and say to oneself, I must order this because it contains vitamin XYZ, I must choose that because it will give me my daily dose of iron and if I don't get it Lord knows what dire thing may befall me in the future.

However, we are perfectly correct in feeling great interest in the new and constantly growing knowledge about vitamins. This knowledge represents a tremendous addition to our understanding of the why of things. But this does not mean that it is obligatory on the part of lay folks to burden themselves with this information except as a matter of casual interest.

One's natural taste will lead one fairly accurately to a hygenic selection of food. And by natural tastes I mean tastes that have not been corrupted by dietetic pedantry or by overindulgence in sweets. Assuming that these and analogous distortions are ruled out, an enlightened laissez-faire is a pretty safe policy on which to order one's meals.—Arthur F. Kraetzer, M. D., in Esquire.

CLOTHED IN NEW

BEAUTY

When you fall in love with a handsome refrigerator, don't let it's good looks blind you to it's other qualities or make you forget its real purpose.

The 100-Lb. McKEE DUO-DRAFT ICE Refrigerators have a food compartment six cubic feet in size. And the price only $64.95. Mechanical Refrigerators with the same food storage space cost on the average of $200. Thats a difference in favor of the ice refrigerator of about $135.00 enough to pay your ice bill for about 5 years.

But the first saving is not all. The new McKEE saves ice, because the DUO-DRAFT attachment makes re-icing necessary only 5 to 9 times a month. The new McKEE saves food, because its air conditioned. And the new McKEE saves all those upkeep worries and expenses.

POPPY DAY TO BE OBSERVED IN CALERA

Calera, Ala.—Saturday May 25 will be Poppy Day in Calera. On that day the women of Ware-Crim Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute little red poppies on the streets to be worn in honor of the World War dead. The observance here will be part of the annual nation-wide observance of Poppy Day, during which millions of Americans will pay tribute to the memory of the war dead by wearing memorial poppies.

Poppy Day activities here will be directed by a committee from the auxiliary headed by Miss Lucy Norwood chairman.

The poppies which will be worn here are made in government hospitals and convalescent workrooms maintained by the Auxiliary in many parts of the country. Each of the little red flowers has been made by hand by some disable veteran in need of employment, for each poppy the Auxiliary has paid its maker one cent, enabling hundreds of veterans to support themselves and their families through the winter and spring.

In exchange for the poppies the Auxiliary women will ask each person to make a contribution for the welfare of the War's Living Victims, this money will be used entirely in the welfare work of the Legion and Auxiliary, the bulk of it right here in our own city. Thus the little poppy will give us an opportunity to prove that our memory and gratitude for the sacrifices made for America.

Reynolds Explains Gas Tax Bill

Montgomery—J. B. Reynolds, representative from Dale County and author of the bills for uniform gasoline taxes throughout the State, told a delegation of automobile men Friday, that his measures, if adopted, will not increase the average of taxes paid on motor fuel in the State as a whole, but wold correct the many inequalitics that now exist in various counties and cities.

Mr. Reynolds also stated that the situation is rapidly growing worse, and if uniformity is not obtained by legislation at this session, it will be difficult or impossible to remedy the situation when it becomes more complicated with special county and city gasoline taxes.

One of his bills, introduced last week, proposes a constitutional amendment designed to check this kind of local gasoline tax legislation. The other is a lengthy measure to make the gasoline tax a uniform 7 cents in all parts of the State; adding one cent to the present State tax. When this added 1 cent is collected in all incorporated municipalities and their respective police jurisdictions, the proceeds to go to the municipality. The balance collected outside the municipalities goes to the 67 counties in equal shares.

Under this Act, the first six cents of the state tax would continue to be divided between the State Highway Department and the 67 counties, with each county receiving a like share of the 3-cent tax allocated to the counties.

All Acts permitting taxation of gasoline by counties and cities are specifically repealed, but special provision is made for those that have pledged their share of these special funds to secure bonded obligation.

Mr. Reynolds stated that some counties having highest local taxes on gasoline are strongly supporting his bills.

DR. O. C. CARMICHAEL

(EDITORIAL)

The announcement that Dr. O. C. Carmichael has resigned the presidency of Alabama College was received last week with deep regret that he is to leave but at the same time gratification that his merit has so clearly achieved recognition through his new appointment. His countless friends throughout the State thus rejoice in his new opportunity even as they realize how greatly he will be missed.

Through thirteen years Dr. Carmichael, as dean and president here, has been a forceful leader and an influential scholar on the campus and in the community; in Alabama and in the South. His attainments are broad as they are big. They represent true educational statesmanship.

The ideals of scholarship, for which he stands, now seem engraved at Montevallo and in that there is retribution as he goes to Vanderbilt. He leaves behind achievement and the framework for further achieve ment.

Alabama College has in his administration gained a greater, a loftier reputation for scholarly standards of service. We have watched the institution grow in strength and spirit, interwoven qualities that must be sustained. Even when education faced such severe hardships, Alabama College steadfastly went forward until in the eyes of Southern education it stands high above any semblance of academic grindstone characteristics, which all are too prevalent today.

This standing is a tribute to the man who is leaving. It is felt by faculty, alumnae and students. It must be upheld.

In the choice of a successor to Dr. Carmichael. it is therefore imperative that the only consideration be true capacity to carry on.

The college has assumed a leadership that is widely respected. It has a challenging curriculm and many other new programs on foot, designed for service now and in the years ahead. They represent education's assertion of duty to provide methods to meet needs.

The Alabama College program and the Alabama College presidency together call for and demand a scholar, an experienced college executive versed in such duties, and a personality suited to the Montevallo tradition.

This sentiment has been voiced before editorially, but it comes now from the home of Alabama College. And it is representative of the feeling in the County and in the State.

The logical step would be the appointment of Dean T. H. Napier, distinguished as an educator, thoroughly familiar with the college program and heartily endorsed by students, alumnae and faculty. The people of Montevallo add their endorsement.

Holder of the highest degrees, he has taught for many years in institutions of higher learning. He has served Alabama College wisely and well for ten years. He knows college work.

His election would be a popular one. It is known what he could do at Montevallo. A political election would be not only disappointing and disheartening, but in fact disillusioning. The office of Dean equipped Dr. Carmichael for the presidency just as it has Dr. Napier; and just as Dr. Carmichael's appointment now means recognition of merit the appointment here must now recognize merit.

It is difficult to think that education in Alabama could become a mere political automoton at the expense of its true self. It can't afford to be so, and for that resaon we look to the future of Alabama College and share with students and alumnae—those who are to be served—the endorsement of Dr. Napier for the presidency.

ALABAMA COLLEGE YEARBOOK DISTRIBUTED

The book is the work of Misses Jessie Forrest and Agnes Postell, both of Birmingham, as editor and business manager, respectively, and their staff of assistants. It pays tribute in word and picture to leading American Institutions and their service. The sections include photographs from the campuses of University of Minnesoto, Harvard, University of Southern California, Oxford, Gulf Park, Northwestern, West Point, University of Alabama, Princeton, and Washington and Lee.

Opening with the feature section, the book announces for the first time the names of the beauties selected some time ago by Octavus Roy Cohen. They are Misses Mackey Ard, Ozark; Josephine Bailey, Gadsden; Billie Hill, Saginaw; and Aline Blair, Hartselle. The winners of the campus election of types, also announced, are Misses Aline Blair, "personality;" Dorothy Davis, "sophisication;" Carolyn Reddock, "executive;" Alice Green, "actress;" Clara Dale, "artist;" Bebe Fant, "writer;" Ruth Lehman, "athletics;" and Bertie Gammill, "musician."

Last year the annual won all American honors in a national contest and the new issue is already being regarded as a worthy successor to the praise which the 1934 edition received. The six divisions of the volumes give a well-rounded survey of the year's campus activities.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.

Rep. Patman

BECAUSE the Patman inflation bonus bill would be easier for the President to veto than the Vinson measure, some of the administration senators joined with the Patman followers to put the former bill through the senate by a vote of 55 to 33. Previously, for some devious reason, the senators put aside the compromise measure offered by Pat Harrison's committee with the assurance that Mr. Roosevelt would sign it. That the President would veto the Patman bill was taken as a certainty and it was believed the inflationists could not gather enough votes to override the veto in the senate, though they had enough in the house.

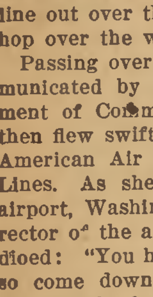
Rather surprisingly, Senator William G. McAdoo of California, a former secretary of the treasury, advocated the Patman bill, asserting that it was "a mere conjecture" that the issue of $2,200,000,000 in noninterest bearing notes, or greenbacks, would be inflationary.

"We have nothing in the United States today but greenbacks," he said. "Is your money redeemable in gold? Is it redeemable in silver? No. It is redeemable in nothing but the honor and good faith of the American people.

"What constitutes inflation is a matter of conjecture. It is also a mere conjecture that we must have a so-called specie basis. The best proof of that is that, since going off gold, the dollar is as sound as it ever was.

"The issuance of $2,000,000,000 in new currency would affect the credit of the United States about as much as if I threw a shovelful of sand into the ocean and tried to stop the incoming tide."

TWO billion dollars of the works relief fund were segregated for immediate distribution by the works allotment division at its first session. The sum was divided into works classifications as provided by the works relief act, these including road construction, grade crossing elimination, rural rehabilitation, rural electrification, low cost housing and general construction. Allotments for specific projects were to be made later, a list of these contemplating expenditure of $100,000,000 being submitted by Mr. Ickes as approved by the PWA and referred to Frank Walker's division of applications and information.



Amelia Earhart

FROM Mexico City to the Metropolitan airport at Newark, N. J., nonstop, 2,100 miles in 14 hours and 22 minutes. That is the new record set up by Amelia Earhart in her red monoplane. Her husband, George Palmer Putnam, and more than 3,000 other enthusiastic persons were at the airport to welcome her, and she was almost mobbed by the throng.

After her start from Mexico City, Mrs. Putnam was not heard from nor reported seen for more than six hours. Her course took her straight east at first, high over the mountain peaks between the Mexican capital and Tampico. She was not seen at the oil port, nor was she reported by radio. Observers knew, however, that she expected to be above 10,000 feet as she crossed the shoreline out over the gulf for her 690 mile hop over the water to New Orleans.

Passing over New Orleans, she communicated by radio with the Department of Commerce station there, and then flew swiftly along the airways of American Air Lines and Eastern Air Lines. As she swooped over Hoover airport, Washington, Eugene Vidal, director of the air commerce bureau, radioed: "You have done a splendid job, so come down." But Amelia replied, with thanks for the invitation, that she was going on through. And that is what she did.

GOLD medals of the National Institute of Social Science were awarded to four American humanitarians at the institute's annual dinner in New York, and no one will say they were not deserved.

One was given Senator Carter Glass of Virginia "in recognition of distinguished services rendered to humanity as one of the leaders in the planning and creation of the federal reserve banking system, as secretary of the treasury, as United States senator, and as one who, through a long life, consistently and unsparingly devoted his abilities and energies to public service."

Dr. Harvey Cushing of Boston received a medal for his "distinguished services rendered to humanity as a leader in surgery and social medicine."

Dr. George E. Vincent was honored for services "as professor of sociology, as president of the University of Minnesota, as president of the Rockefeller foundation. as president of the Chautauqua institution, as one of the leaders in the development of community chests in the United States, and as an educator whose life and addresses have been an inspiration toward unselfish public service."

To Cornelius N. Bliss, former president of the institute, was presented a medal for his work "as a director of the Julliard School of Music, as a director of the Metropolitan Opera association, Inc., as a member of the central committee of the American Red Cross, as a governor of the New York hospital, as a director of the Milbank Memorial fund, as a trustee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and as a member of the board of managers of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor."

George N. Peek

GEORGE N. PEEK, in his capacity of advisor to the President on foreign trade, has just made public statistics that tend to show the United States is losing its position as the world's chief creditor nation, and makes recommendations that are in accord with the growing trend against internationalism in the administration and in conflict with Secretary Hull's program of removing barriers to international trade by reciprocal trade agreements.

Stating that whether or not this country still owes less to other nations than they owe to it appears to depend on the true value of defaulted war debts, Mr. Peek recommends these immediate steps:

"1. The inauguration of a detailed study of our direct investments abroad and foreigners' direct investments in the United States, to supplement the studies now in progress of capital movements.

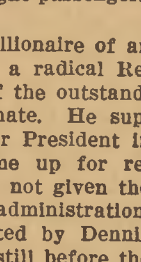
"2. A review of all national policies based in whole or in part upon our international creditor status."

The proposal seems to lead toward high tariffs and a policy of allocating our foreign trade among other nations, as is done by many of the European countries.

Figures compiled by Mr. Peek indicate that the United States is a net international creditor by $16,897,000,000, but this includes $10,304,000,000, principal amount of war debts owed by foreign governments, and also foreign bonds held by private investors in the United States invoiced at their face value, and a pre-depression estimate of the value of American branch factories abroad and other direct investments in foreign countries. Mr. Peek strongly infers that a re-estimation of these "assets" will result in such a scaling down that this country will no longer be a creditor nation and need not act as such.

FOLLOWING a lively debate the house passed the omnibus banking bill, which rewrites the federal reserve act so as to make a virtual central bank out of the reserve system, with power to manipulate monetary policies for the purpose of promoting business stability. The final vote, after various amendments had been rejected, was 271 to 110.

In the senate the measure will be strongly combatted, with Senator Carter Glass leading the opposition. Glass wrote the banking bill during the Wilson administration, and he objects to having the system tampered with by Federal Reserve Gov. Marriner S. Eccles.



Senator Cutting

IN THE crash of a transport plane of Transcontinental Western Air near Atlanta, Mo., Senator Bronson M. Cutting of New Mexico and four other persons fell to their death. The pilot was unable to land at Kansas City because of a dense fog and his fuel gave out before he could reach an emergency landing field at Kirksville. Besides Mr. Cutting those killed were Miss Jeanne A. Hillias of Kansas City, Mrs. William Kaplan of West Los Angeles, and Harvey Bolton and K. H. Greeson, pilots, both of Kansas City. Eight passengers were seriously injured.

Bronson Cutting, a millionaire of an aristocratic family, was a radical Republican and was one of the outstanding members of the senate. He supported Mr. Roosevelt for President in 1932, but when he came up for reelection last fall he was not given the endorsement of the administration. His victory was contested by Dennis Chavez and the case is still before the senate elections committee. Mr. Cutting was born on Long Island in 1888, graduated from Harvard and thereafter went to New Mexico. In the World war he was an infantry captain and assistant military attache at the American embassy in London. He was appointed to the senate in 1927 to fill a vacancy and was elected next year to a six year term.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT strongly resented the criticism of his New Deal policies by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and retorted by calling to the White House Secretary Roper's business planning and advisory council for an endorsement of NRA extension and the social securities program. Then to the newspaper correspondents Mr. Roosevelt scored the action of the chamber, asserting that in too many cases so-called business organizations misrepresent the business men for whom they claim to speak, and that he did not believe a single speech made at the chamber's meeting contained any mention of the human side of the picture. He declared the business organizations were not indicative of the mass belief and that he would go along with the great bulk of the people.

Several members of the business advisory council were also members of the Chamber of Commerce, and it is said they resented the President's action in seemingly using them to offset the attack by the chamber.

King George

ALL the vast British empire celebrated the silver jubilee of King George V and Queen Mary—the twenty-fifth anniversary of their accession—and for three months there will be a continuous series of fetes in the United Kingdom and all the dominions and dependencies. London, of course, was the scene of the chief celebration on the opening day, and the metropolis was thronged with visitors. Hotels and rooming houses were overcrowded and the king ordered that Hyde Park be kept open so some of the overflow thousands could sleep there.

There were seven state processions the first day. The first was that of the speaker of the house of commons, Capt. Edward A. Fitz Roy, with five ancient gilded coaches; the second, that of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, with six coaches in which rode the dominion prime ministers. Then came a two-coach procession of Lord High Chancellor Sankey, and one of the lord mayor of London, Sir Stephen Killik. The fifth procession was that of the duke of York, from Buckingham palace, two carriages with a captain's escort of the magnificently appareled royal horse guards.

The prince of Wales, as heir to the throne, came sixth. He had with him a captain's escort of the Life Guards and two carriages, in the first of which he rode with Queen Maud of Norway and his brother, the duke of Gloucester, like him, a bachelor.

Finally, in the most gorgeous parade of all, came George and Mary, and as their ornate coach, drawn by the famous grays, passed, the voices of all loyal Britishers rose in a roar of "God bless the king and queen." The rulers, accompanied by all the other notables, went to St. Paul's cathedral to give public thanks to God.

Senator B. C. Clark

THE senate committee named to devise a means of curbing such attacks on the President as are frequently made by Huey Long on the floor of the senate has not yet reported, but it is said Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri has figured out how it can be done. Clark is the upper chamber's chief expert on parliamentary procedure and for four years he was parliamentarian of the lower house. His plan is to rewrite rule 19 of the senate rules to include the President and so protect him from unwarranted attacks and slanders. That rule reads at present:

"No senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator."

One of Long's favorite ways of launching his diatribes is to rise to a question of personal privilege, and Clark proposes that in this respect the senate rules be changed to conform with those of the house. In that body when a member feels he has been aggrieved he must explain exactly how he has been injured before he is permitted to speak. The speaker decides whether or not his injury is justified.

Senator Glass of Virginia has failed at various times to silence the "Kingfish" and he, too, has a plan he thinks might help accomplish that end. He recommends a requirement that all amendments offered to an appropriation bill be germane. Such a requirement would affect other senators, but Glass' move admittedly is directed against Long.

AFFIRMING a decision of the Supreme court of the District of Columbia, the United States Supreme court held unconstitutional the railroad retirement act, ruling that many of its provisions are invalid. The act provided for a system of old age pensions for all railroad workers. The decision was read by Justice Owen J. Roberts. It condemned many provisions of the law as "arbitrary," placing an undue burden on the railroads and having no relation to safety and efficiency in the operation of the railways.

The act was passed by the Seventy-fourth congress just before it closed, and had the tacit approval of the new administration, although President Roosevelt said he believed it would have to be perfected by amendment. It set up a compulsory pension plan, requiring contributions by both the carriers and the benefited employees.

Blast at New Deal

Washington.—Probably the most notable incident of recent days in Washington is the explosion of a bomb by business. It is significant and important that the business voice, as represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has spoken in such emphatic terms about the New Deal. It is further a matter of significance that the business voice critisized the New Deal generally as well as specifically, because it is the first time in the period since President Roosevelt took charge that anything like unity in business thought has been presented.

The reaction was instantaneous. First, Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce mustered 21 members of his business advisory committee for a counter attack. It was almost drowned out by the chamber's roar. Such was not the case, however, with the President's reply. He waited until the convention had ended to let loose a charge that the business interests were selfish. It made all the front pages.

This brings us to the crux of the condition precipitated by the outburst of the Chamber of Commerce convention. It is seldom, and I believe the record shows this statement to be absolutely true, that annual conventions of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States have been taken seriously by the newspapers. The business men have been looked upon as possessors and promoters of rather antiquated ideas. Their interests have been and are of a selfish character. That is quite obvious and quite natural. But at this time, the voice of business speaks more than just business views. It speaks politically. Hence, when business spoke this time the newspapers of the country paid heed. The result was an unprecedented amount of publicity was obtained by the chamber through the medium of its convention this year.

Whether this represents a change in the thought of the country, surely no one individual of any group is able to say definitely. It must be recognized, however, that for many months a highly vocal minority of politicians has been accusing the administration of throttling criticism. Although this group fought vigorously and charged the administration with having the greatest propaganda machine ever to exist, it obtained little publicity for those views. Most newspapers dismissed them by publication of three or four paragraphs, buried on the inside pages of the metropolitan dailies. So, necessarily, significance attaches to the fact that when the business voice was raised in apparent unity the newspapers accorded columns of space to it. It can be construed in no other way than as meaning there is a larger opposition to some phases of the New Deal at least than most of us had expected.

Opposition Unified

For quite a while such groups as the American Liberty league have pounded away at certain phases of the New Deal. To the Washington observers it appeared that these groups were getting nowhere and getting there fast. Of a sudden, however, the voice opposed to the New Deal seems to have found itself. Certainly at the moment and for the first time, there is an approximation of unity to New Deal opposition and that fact is reflected in a rather important way. I refer to the courage exhibited in congress where there is more and more evidence of a decision on the part of the legislators to assert their independence in contradistinction to previous silent obedience to the White House.

I believe it is too early to attempt a prediction whether the Chamber of Commerce leadership will last. If I were to make an individual guess I would say that leadership of this type will crumble. That guess is predicated upon the record of the past because heretofore it has been true that business always suffered defections and presently there was bushwhacking in its own camp. Regardless of whether that condition develops again, the explosive character of the speeches in the chamber's convention have added a momentum to Roosevelt opposition which it has lacked heretofore. It is just possible, therefore, that even if business leadership fails in its efforts to curb radical tendencies among the administration group, a well knit opposition may now be developing.

Pursuing this assumption further, one hears suggestions around Washington to the effect that a genuine and basic issue for the 1936 campaign may be in the making. It would seem that Mr. Roosevelt will be forced into the position again of appealing to the forgotten man of his 1932 campaign who has since been forgotten. The conservative thought of the country meanwhile will marshal behind the home owners, the possessors of property and capital and the workers whose income must be taxed heavily in subsequent years to pay for the program of spending our way out of the depression.

Some support is seen for this theory of probable issues in 1936 in the recent statement of Postmaster General Farley who spoke politically as chairman of the Democratic national committee. In almost so many words, Mr. Farley declared that the business interests had not been favorable to Mr. Roosevelt; that they were not now favorable to him and that there was no reason to expect the support of business hereafter. Mr. Farley, clever politician that he is, recognizes that under present conditions there are more votes on the side of the man who appeals to those who have not than there are on the side of the man who appeals to those who have.

On the other hand, government statistics show that something like 65,000,000 persons hold life insurance policies; that something like 20,000,000 have saving accounts in banks; that there are around 10,000,000 home owners in the nation, and that even at the lowest point of the depression there were more people working for salaries and wages than there were unemployed. Mr. Farley's guess apparently is that so many of these workers have had their incomes reduced that they will support a candidate who promises to improve their condition. In their numbers lies the difference between victory and defeat.

In addition to these factors, there is to be considered the probability of defections caused by such demagogic leadership as the Longs and the Coughlins. Saner thinking people know, of course, that the programs which Senator Long and Father Coughlin have been preaching far and wide are as impossible of fulfillment as was the EPIC program advanced by Upton Sinclair in his California campaign. But it may not be overlooked that these men can and will pull together several million voters.

NRA the Hot Spot

No discussion of the controversy between business and President Roosevelt would be complete without consideration of the NRA. It is the hottest spot in congress right now. The situation is of such a character as to be comparable to a carbuncle on your neck. Those who have had carbuncles will fully understand.

A few days ago, Mr. Roosevelt called the most obstreperous of opposition senators to the White House for a conference on the question of what to do about extending the national industrial recovery act. It is due to expire by limitation of law on June 16. He cleverly invited Miss Perkins, the secretary of labor, and Donald Richberg, the guiding hand of the Recovery administration, to sit in on that meeting. It was only natural that two such avid New Dealers as Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg should hold out for continuation of NRA for a two-year period. And it was only natural for senators who do not believe wholeheartedly in all of the NRA principles to insist on a makeshift, or temporary continuation. The President put them into a cockpit to fight it out. The resulting disagreement was perfectly logical but the President had put himself in a position to trade with congress.

Since the NRA opponents in congress did not yield, they naturally went back to the Capitol and framed their own program. They propose to have NRA continued, with some of its unsatisfactory features eliminated, to April of next year. They probably will be able to muster enough support to pass some such legislation. If they do, the President will accept it. Actually, he has no choice. He cannot allow the policy represented by NRA to crash completely. It would mean a political defeat which the President, strong as he is, probably could not withstand.

Wiser Blue Eagle

It is a wiser and sadder Blue Eagle that is proposed in the senate resolution continuing NRA. That resolution is equipped with scissors to trim the tail feathers of the famed eagle so that it cannot operate against businesses whose traffic is wholly within a state—intrastate—nor will it permit price fixing.

The senate finance committee which drafted this resolution reported it to the senate by the overwhelming vote of sixteen to three. That shows better than any words of mine how thoroughly determined that senate group was to override the Richberg-Perkins views on administration policy. Succinctly, the continuing resolution provides for changes in the current law as follows:

1. No price fixing shall be permitted or sanctioned under any code except in codes covering mineral or natural resources industries that now embody the price fixing principle.

2. No trade engaged wholly in intrastate commerce shall be placed under code.

3. The President will have 30 days in which to review present codes of fair practice in, order to revise and adjust each so that it will conform to the provisions of the new NRA.

"I think this is the best way out," said Senator Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, chairman of the committee.

"I feel certain we can pass this resolution without a great amount of debate and it will give NRA time to adjust itself and give the courts time to rule on the various questions of NRA validity."

Pass the Patman Bill
They Love King George
Parachutes?
Puzzle for Solomon

Arthur Brisbane

The senate votes, 55 to 33, to pay the veterans their bonus in cash. That vote, not being a two-thirds vote, would not overrule the Presidential veto, which is expected.

The Patman bill, wisely approved, gives the veterans their money to spend in their way for things they want. Under that bill veterans are to be paid with new money. That money as soon as received would all vanish, in purchases in every corner of the United States.

New United States money is exactly as good as new bonds, since paper dollars and paper bonds get all their value from the name of the government printed on them. There are no longer any gold payments promised or implied. If government money is not good, government bonds are not good.

President Roosevelt, congratulating King George, says: "It is gratifying to contemplate the wise and steadfast influence which your majesty has exerted for a quarter of a century." That was about all that the President, with the best of intentions, could say, for the British ruler's popularity is based on sticking to his job, which is, letting his people alone, while they attend to their business in their own way.

The king seems to think that those who have built the greatness of the British empire to its present height may be trusted to continue building it.

Some "best minds" here feel that any success or progress in the United States has been more or less of an accident, under bad management, and needs to start again on a new plan.

Time will tell whether a government policy of "let them alone" or "tell them how" is better.

Five killed, eight injured, in an airplane crash. The dead include Senator Cutting of New Mexico, who will be deeply regretted by his state and by the senate.

Both pilots were killed; they did their best.

An occasional disaster will not discourage flying, but this particular accident raises again the question, Should not airplane builders concentrate on parachute protection for passengers?

King Solomon never solved any such problem as this: A New York manufacturer wished to advertise "invisible panties," in usual words—small trousers worn by modern women. NRA rules say that if the article advertised is not invisible, the advertising is "false and misleading and violates the code." If those panties are invisible, NRA cannot pass on them, and their manufacturer must not attempt to display them on models, for evident reasons dealing with morality.

Eight million young women in Germany are unmarried. The government invites 333,000 of them to marry "healthy, virile, hereditary farmers."

To lead the unmarried German girl to the "virile, hereditary farmer" may be easier than making her marry him.

A labor law compels women under twenty-five years of age to serve one year on farms before they can take other jobs.

Once you begin to tell human beings how they must live, life becomes complicated.

"They wish in the name of so-called positive Christianity to dechristianize Germany, and they wish to conduct the country back to barbaric paganism, and nothing is left undone to disturb Christian and Catholic life."

The pope's words referred to the unpleasant welcome home of 2,000 young German pilgrims that went to Rome to receive the papal blessing.

Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, uses language as plain as that of Mussolini or Stalin. He finds that we have in America a class of "oppressors," rich men, and promises that that small, oppressive, business minority "who extol poverty and profits in the same breath" shall be made outcasts in the "new order" that is coming.

One English town will celebrate the king's jubilee by distributing free beer. Might it not be a good idea to make light beer part of the regular food supply of men in this government's CCC camps?

Minus government tax, it would cost little, keep men contented, abolish or diminish complaints of some workers spending their small supplies of money with bootleggers.

"What shall I say?" she asked, in a whisper.

"Nothing," the man replied. "There is nothing at all to be said . . . is there?"

"Oh, you gave me such a start!"

"You're the first one. . . . I'm . . . I'm too full of things to talk, now, Emma."

He made an odd gesture toward the wall and looked about.

"We're in the upstairs front room if we're needed," she said. "Is . . . Is there anything you need yourself?"

He did not reply for a moment. Then, heavily:

"Yes. . . . Your help, likely. . . . A little later. . . ."

The woman did a strange thing, then. She snatched up her apron and pressed it tightly against her eyes.

"She didn't remember!" she sobbed. . . . "Oh, what'll happen in this house next?"

"I wonder,' Martin muttered. "Yes . . . I wonder!"

She left him, and he moved almost hesitatingly into the living room. He stood a long time just within the threshold and then went slowly about, from picture to table, from book shelf to mantel, hands in his coat pockets. Before this old photograph he stood for a long interval; beside that worn rocker he remained with bowed head, as one might who is suffering . . . or worshiping. When he approached the couch where he was to sleep that night his legs seemed to fail and he half fell, half slumped to his knees. He let his face down to the blankets and his fingers clutched them, gripping, gripping until the knuckles showed white. . . . And a great, shuddering moan slipped from his deep chest.

* * * * * * *

Grimly, Bird-Eye Blaine prowled Tincup that night. He had let John Martin out as he drove through the main street; then proceeded to a livery barn where he stabled his team.

On the way he had sighted Ben Elliott but later, although he took up a position before the post office and watched passers on either side of the street carefully, he did not see him. He began making inquiries and found that Elliott had been about town but evidently Blaine was always some little time behind him.

Failing thus, he went to locate Ben's team and stood in the swirling snow waiting. Stores closed. The aura of light which their frosted windows had thrown into the storm became fainter as one by one they went dark. Bird-Eye chewed and stamped to keep warm and watched and listened. And after a long hour's vigil proved fruitless he moved aimlessly away, along down the alley.

At the rear of Joe Piette's hotel he watched movement through a lighted window which gave into a back entry. A man was there, closing an inside stairway door behind him. He turned and buttoned his mackinaw with hasty movements and Blaine drew back into the shadows. The man within was Red Bart Delancy. . . . The door opened; the man stepped out. He crossed between Bird-Eye and the lights, carrying snowshoes. Blaine followed as the other went swiftly down the alley and then struck out past the depot toward the tracks.

"Well, now!" Bird-Eye muttered to himself. "Saints . . . Why all this rush, I'm wonderin'!"

A chill which had nothing to do with the temperature of the night struck through him. Red Bart, fleeing town? Surely, he went as a frightened man might go. . . . Or as one whose errand is completed.

Out into the street, then, went the Irishman, and into the pool room.

"Has anybody here seen Misther Elliott?" he asked loudly and men looked up from their games at the query. Yes, this man had, two hours ago; the butcher had talked to him at about eight. . . . None other. To the dance hall, next, and his queries were repeated. Then hastily back to see Ben's team still standing patiently in the deepening snow, past Dawn McManus' house to find only a faint light in the hallway, and from there to Able Armitage's at a run.

Had the judge seen Ben Elliott? He had not; and excitedly Blaine explained his empty search, the hasty departure of Red Bart, the neglected team.

"Somethin's happened!" Bird-Eye declared. "Somethin's went wrong with th' b'y, Able! We can't foind out what ut is ontil mornin'. Thin, believe me, we'll have help a-plenty!"

"How so?"

"Lave ut to me, Able!"

Through the night, ten minutes later, a team went swiftly westward. They left town at a gallop; they breasted high drifts across the way in frantic plunges, came to a blowing stop at the Hoot Owl barn. A moment later Tim Jeffers sat up and in sleepy bewilderment fought off the man who shook him and demanded that he wake up and listen.

* * * * * * *

The storm subsided before sunrise. It was a vast, rolling country, and across it, from Hoot Owl toward Tincup, went teams. Five of them formed a sort of procession, drawing logging sleighs. Across the bunks planks had been placed and on the planks stood and sat men; they were silent men, who drew on cold pipes, whose faces were set and grim whose eyes betrayed excitement. The Hoot Owl crew, this, following Tim Jeffers and Bird-Eye Blaine to Tincup to solve a mystery.

Able Armitage came hurrying and he, alone, was welcome in that phalanx of intent men. Others of the town saw him gesticulate as he talked with Jeffers and Blaine, saw him shake his head and spread his hands as one will who has no answer for a pressing question.

Old Tim turned to the crews and motioned them to him. The men gathered close and listened while he spoke briefly. Then the compact huddle broke, Jeffers emerged and started for the main street, that body of shanty boys falling in to move shoulder to shoulder behind him.

It was a strange spectacle, for that peaceful Sunday morning! Doors were opened; men and women peered out. Then they emerged and stood to watch. Now and then one hailed an acquaintance in the marching company but none replied to such greeting. Hastily caps and coats were donned and along the sidewalks followed a growing crowd of the curious.

The breath vapor of the men rose in a cloud. No other spoke. Far down the street a small boy yipped excitedly, across the way two women were muttering to one another, flinging quick, excited questions, disclaiming knowledge for fitting responses.

They swung into the main street, old Tim wallowing in the long drift at the corner, his men trampling it down behind him. On down past Able's office, past the pool room and then, without a word of signal they halted. . . . The halt was before the bank, over which Nicholas Brandon had his offices and his living rooms.

The silence as they stood, every one of the hundred faces upraised to those windows with the lettering which proclaimed the tenant, was portentous. And then Tim lifted his clear, strong voice.

"Brandon!" he shouted. "Nick Brandon!"

"Brandon!" Tim shouted again and his men stirred behind him, swayed, giving up a low, short mutter.

Movement, then, where they had expected movement. Up above a face appeared in a window. Nicholas Brandon looked down upon them. They could see his lips compress as he discerned that crowd.

"Come down, Brandon!"

This was Tim again, his voice edged with sharpness, as he might speak to a rebellious man of his crew.

Brandon moved and threw up the sash.

"What do you men want?" he demanded sharply, in the tone of one who has been long accustomed to make demands.

"We want Ben Elliott!" Jeffers answered.

"Elliott? He isn't here. What would he be doing here? What could I know of him?"

A mumbling, a stirring behind Tim.

"We want him. We want you to help us find him!"

"You're d—n right!" . . . "Tell us you skunk!" . . . "Show him to us or we'll wreck your whole blame town!"

Tim held up a silencing hand against this outbreak. Then he address Brandon.

"Elliott came to town last night. He hasn't been seen since. His team was found where he left it. There's only one man in town who'd have an object in getting him out of the way. We've come to that man: to you, Brandon. We want Elliott!"

Brandon's lips writhed.

"I tell you, I know nothing—" He slammed down the sash and cut the rest of his sentence from their hearing so those men did not know that his voice broke sharply as panic laid its hold on him.

He turned his back deliberately to the window. Then, in frantic lunge he reached the telephone and rang the bell.

"Give me the jail!" he said excitedly. "Quick! The jail!"

Outside a growing, mounting roar sounded, like the voice of an approaching wind. Then came a sharp shout; a loud curse. Then quick silence again as Tim Jeffers reasserted his leadership and demanded that they move only as a unit. But this order prevailed for a brief moment.

"Smash in the door; it's locked!" someone cried. "Take him until he gives Ben up!"

"Good boy!"

Brandon cowered as a yell of approval went up, and pressed his face close to the telephone.

"I've seen it!" The sheriff's voice trembled. "I saw 'em come in. I don't know what—"

Brandon waited for the ready acquiescence which always had come from the men he had made, from officers of the law and judges and public officials both high and low.

"Are you there?" he demanded s[illegible]ly as a shrill yip came from the street.

"Yes, Mr. Brandon. I hear you but . . . But what d'you expect me to do against a mob alone? I—"

"Alone! You're sheriff, you fool! You've the law behind you! Bring a gun and hurry!"

"But that crowd, Nick! Why, they're the best men in the north. They'd tear me to ribbons! They're good men and they're mad. You better get out the back way if you can!"

With an oath Brandon flung the receiver from him as another window pane exploded to fragments. Abandoned to that muttering mob, and by a man whose political career he had shaped with his own hands! From a safe vantage point he looked out. A half dozen men were pulling at a sign post. The street was filling with people; his people, his employees. They were wide-eyed, excited, and he saw a dozen of them, men who had whined and groveled before him, laugh and jeer as another missile spattered on the bricks outside.

He ran down the hallway and looked out a window in the rear. A grim guard of three men stood there, ready and waiting for him to attempt flight that way.

He went into his sleeping chamber and took down a rifle from its rack on a pair of antlers. He threw open the chamber but it was empty. He jerked open a dresser drawer and pawed through it in a fruitless search for cartridges, cursing because he found none. His breath was ragged as he threw the rifle on the bed and rumpled his hair wildly.

Brandon rushed back to the front office and waved his arms for silence as he stood in the shattered glass of his window, but the sight of him only provoked hoots and jeers which were forerunners of a great billow of savage, snarling rage.

The men were having trouble with the sign post. He heard the stair door tried and a voice called: "Hustle with that post!"

Coming! They were coming in to get him!

He could not satisfy them! He did not know where Elliott was. Last night Delaney had promised to try again but he had not come to report, though Brandon had waited late. And now the crowd was howling for Elliott; lacking Elliott, they would take him.

He covered his face with his hands, tried to stop his ears. In those menacing cries he heard the knell of this reign. For years he had ruled by the force of his will and now that force was not enough. Bit by bit, Ben Elliott had caught the fancy of the country and now, with that group of stout men as a rallying point, the entire town was setting up a demand for the missing Elliott. They wanted Ben Elliott. They would have Ben Elliott.

"Go home!" he screamed and waved his arms, standing close to a broken window. "Clear out, you! . . . Fair warning, I'm giving!"

But his words were drowned in a great yell. Men came lugging that post across the street while Tim Jeffers hastened toward them with gestures of protest.

"Hold your heads, now! Give us Hoot Owl boys a chance. We'll get what we come for or we'll take Tincup apart. But no destroyin' of property until everything else fails!"

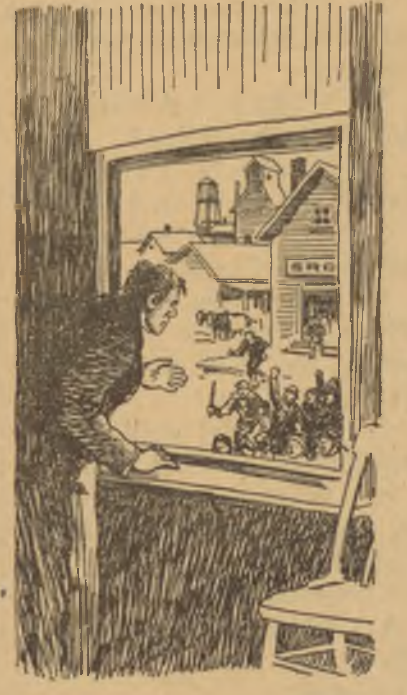
"We mean business. Will you come out and show us Ben or must we come and get you? We won't wait much longer."

An opening, there, a chance to delay.

"Coming!" Brandon croaked. "I'm coming!"

A gratified mutter went up from the crowd and burst into shrill words.

Coming? Like the devil, he would go! He was ransacking drawers, now, dumping their contents on the floor in his frantic search for rifle cartridges that should be there.



He Could Not Satisfy Them.

The noise outside increased; more people were coming to join the crowd. It seemed as though the whole town must be there.

He sought a key for a locked trunk and could not find it. He tried several but his hands shook so that he might have failed to make the proper one operate, even had he found it.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave, and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Judge Able Armitage hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott "to be used when the going becomes too tough." Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, when the flames are subdued, discovers it was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time is set. Ben discovers Dawn McManus is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which his lumber must pass is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery on time. Brandon compels a woman (known as "Lydia") to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl. At a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn, Lydia makes public her charges. Overwhelmed, Elliott can only make a feeble denial. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves without waiting for him. While in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, but his fall is a ruse to make his enemy believe him dead. "Aunt Emma," Dawn's closest friend, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation. Elliott and Dawn are reconciled, but the girl is not fully responsive to Ben's pleading for her love.

Origin of Domestic Dog Mystery, Authority Says

Cloaked in mystery is origin of the domestic dog. Those who question the genesis at all are likely to accept the belief that the wolf was the common ancestor of all breeds, but there is much evidence to upset this theory, asserts P. F. Ricketts, in the Detroit News.

Dogs may be divided into two types—the wolf (lupine) group which has erect ears and hunts by sight, and the hound (saluki) group which has drop ears and follows its prey by scent. It is hard to believe that this latter group descended from a wolf, because its type, temperament and general conformation forbid it.

Also, there is earlier evidence of the existence of the hound (saluki) type, than of the wolf (lupine) group. Cuneiform inscriptions and bas-reliefs of remote years show salukis strikingly like the modern Whippet. In these same protrayals, a strong dog, similar to the British Mastiff, is shown. This brings up the question of a third type.

It becomes necessary, then, to search for a more remote ancestor than either the wolf or saluki. Far back in prehistoric times, a dog must have existed which was the tap root of the whole "genus canis," although no direct evidence has been found to bear out the theory.

Until such time as naturalists discover the connecting link between the lupine and saluki types, we must be content to let our fancies play with the possibility of a common ancestor for all domestic dogs.

HEART OPERATION SAVES FROM DEATH MAN CUT IN BRAWL

Puerto Rican Derelict Joins the Legion of Modern Medical Oddities.

New York.—A knife thrust in the heart usually means death. To twenty-three-year-old Jose Malandez, until recently a Puerto Rican derelict, it meant fame and a good living.

Jose now belongs to that exclusive legion of medical oddities who, by the turn of fortune and a surgeon's scalpel, have been converted into rare physiological specimens, the living exhibit A of science who are the cynosure of attention at gatherings of physicians and surgeons, writes John Kobler in the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

Headliners All.

Other members of the legion have been headliners in the newspapers recently—Klaus K. Evavold of Fergus Falls, Minn., who lived for a year without a stomach; the several persons who speak without a larynx; Jesse Combs, Lebanon (Ind.) farmer, who lived for 13 years minus most of his intestines; Beatrice McCrory, Rushville, Ind., who is fed through a "window" in her side because food cannot reach her stomach through her throat; the New York infant without an esophagus, and Alice Jane McHenry of Omaha, "the girl with the upside-down stomach."

All are destined to become case histories, like the Los Angeles man whose body is steadily growing smaller; the Wilkes-Barre (Pa.) child whose body is turning to stone, and Alexis St. Martin, the Indian who provided science with its first accurate knowledge of digestive processes when the accidental discharge of a shotgun laid bare his stomach without killing him.

Jose Melandez was stabbed through the heart—and lived to tell the tale! As a result of knowledge gained from his case, an incalculable number of lives of persons whose hearts are punctured in war or industry may be saved.

Unusual Operation.

Jose owes his life and his fame to Doctor Joseph Stenbuck of Harlem hospital, New York, who performed the heart suture which virtually dragged Jose back from the dead. This operation, technically known as cardorrhaphy, is not unique, but in the annals of medicine it has been attempted only a few hundred times, rarely with success. Stenbuck himself has performed it only five times, and Jose is the only subject to have survived.

One night Jose was brought into the Harlem hospital unconscious, bleeding from a terrific rent through his heart, the result of a brawl over a woman among the denizens of Harlem nightlife. He was placed on the operating table, and Surgeon Stenbuck went to work. First the skin and muscle over the heart were folded back in a flat. Then two pieces of rib were cut out and the pericardium, or shell surrounding the heart, was cut wide open.

The heart was held in place by a thread pulled taut through it. This was removed as soon as the operation was completed. Two stitches were taken in the wound and the flap sewn back.

The most dramatic part of the operation occurs at the moment when the surgeon enters the pericardium. Unless he is quick the patient will bleed to death.

Federal Agent Gets His Man After Nine Years

Salem, Ore.—It took Roy R. Norene, head of the federal immigration and naturalization service in Portland, nine years but he "got his man."

Since 1926 Norene has been looking for Lew Sen, Chinese who was smuggled into the United States. On a visit here Norene went into a Chinese restaurant and as mere routine asked the orientals there to show their papers. The certificate presented by one man bore the name Lew Sen and the federal agent's search was ended. Sen said he obtained the certificate in Seattle, Wash., where he attended school and declared he had been in Salem most of the time since coming to this country.

Medina, Ohio.—Fearing his influence may have caused friends to lose money in unprofitable investments, William E. Griesinger, Medina business man, attempted to make reparations in his will.

The document, filed for probate, revealed the following bequests, based upon that fear: Mark Hazen and S. H. Brainard, $1,000 each; Dan R. Pelton, Medina, and Ivan Ault, Ashland, Ohio, $800 each; Clarence Shumaker, Seville, Ohio, $1,000; John Kemp, now in Florida, $500; Jay Einhart, Leland Einhart and John Crooks, all of Weymouth, Ohio, $400 each.

Stolen Prayer Book Is Found in Another Car

Boston, Mass.—Miss Virginia Tobin's automobile was stolen and recovered in Jamaica Plains a year ago, but a prayer book left on the seat was missing.

Recently thieves stole Mrs. Mary S. Kane's car from the same neighborhood and when it was recovered police found Miss Tobin's prayer book.

They returned it to Mrs. Virginia McGurk of Malden, who was Miss Tobin before she was married.

ANTI-LYNCH LAW

of shouting about the Costigan Anti-Lynching Bill. All the usual flamboyant effects of political pyrotechnique were turned loose in connection with the lose in connection with the measure. It leaves one with the strange wonder of what the shouting was all about.

There was, perhaps, a day when such a measure was needed, and at that time the measure couldn't become law because it would have been a dangerous weapon in the hands of irresponsible haters of the South. Now that a lynching is a rarity, and likely to occur almost anywhere, the measure pops up again.

It is just as well that it was beaten. It would have been an unpopular measure, fraught with menace to many localities but not especially adverse to southern interests.

Lynching is on the wane. A better adjustment of racial differences in the South is only partly responsible. Basically the reason it has declined is because of the progress of education. It can be ended almost altogether by more education, but not by legislation.

The question of business improvement is, of course, dependent on lots of things, but right now business is improving. The proofs of improving do not lie entirely in impressive figures of bank deposits and debts. They are found, of course, in figures like those on farm implement sales—homely proof that the farmers have some money to put into new equipment.

Oddly enough, they are also proved by silly little things as well. The chain letter with the plea for a dime or dollar to be sent to the top man on the list is proof that people are back to normal, and have money to put into gim crack ideas.

Merrily the world spins around. Tomorrow will soon be today and today yesterday. Those troubles and fears which are so all-engulfing today will be superceded by tomorrow's entirely new ones, and those that are so menacing today will be relegated to the discards of yesterday. For the correctness of this, can you recall what were your troubles and worries a year ago? If you can you are an exception. Truly, time is one great mitigator and merrily the world spins around.

If only these memory trainers could train one to forget the times when you made a fool of yourself.

NATURAL FORCES AID BUSINESS RECOVERY

By R. S. HECHT
President American Bankers Association

ALTHOUGH, as official studies of business conditions show, business is still far from having struck its full stride, nevertheless, I believe that it is undoubtedly true that the natural economical processes which have always brought the nation out of a slump are now and have been for some time steadily at work laying the foundations for more active and normal business conditions.

R. S. HECHT

I believe that there is growing a broader public perception that the people of this country must make their own prosperity and not wait for the Government at Washington to make it for them. In other words, normal economic vigor and vitality of the United States is slowly but inevitably bringing a return of natural business recovery.

The Fundamental Cure

Like a doctor, the administration can help nature. But the fundamental healing processes will come from natural causes and not from political remedies. Despite the slackening of business now apparent, despite expressions of disappointment we hear from various quarters, nevertheless I am confident that these fundamental healing processes, if not spectacular, are none the less surely at work.

Gradually our business leaders are showing greater confidence in the future and are assuming a more forward looking position. I firmly believe that if we will make up our minds to replace fear-psychology with confidence-psychology the results will fully justify such a new attitude.

BANKERS' ASSOCIATION STIMULATES ADVERTISING

The American Bankers Association's Advertising Department reports rapid progress of the use by banks of the informative bank newspaper advertising prepared by it for members to assist them in rebuilding public confidence and good will in their communities.

The central theme of this advertising service deals with the "essential line of economic and social service that all sound banking inherently renders the depositor and the public," the report says, showing that "it is not banking laws which make banking useful and safe, but that fundamentally it is honesty and skill in management under private initiative."

The Advertising Department is supplying about a thousand members of the association with newspaper and other advertising material. The newspaper material totals about 50,000 advertisements annually. The growth of the work of the department is shown by the following figures: On September 1, 1934, the number of banks being served regularly each month was 623. The total number on April 1, 1935, was 924, an increase of 301 regular subscribers, or 49 per cent in a period of seven months.

WARS ON BANK ROBBERS

National Bankers Association Pressing Active Steps to Protect Members—Losses Cut

Imprisonment or death of many desperate bank criminals the past year has brought no appreciable reduction in attacks on banks, James E. Baum, in charge of the American Bankers Association Protective Department, has reported to his organization.

In the six months ended February 28, 1935, he says, banks were targets for 169 daylight holdups and 40 night burglaries. He added that although banks that are not members number only about half those enrolled in the association, they suffered a far greater rate of attack, namely, 51 per cent of all the bank robberies committed during the period.

Losses Show Decrease

During the period under report, bank burglars and bandits exacted tribute amounting to $943,551 compared with losses totaling $1,257,000 a year ago, he said. This reduction in losses is attributed to the time-locking restrictions and other limitations in the exposure of surplus cash imposed last year by underwriters and several bank supervisory authorities.

The sharp reduction in the material loss of money and securities resulting from bank robbery this year was "overshadowed by the killing of 2 bank employees, one bystander and 5 arresting officers," and since last August bank robbery also cost the lives of 15 criminals and caused physical injuries to 10 bank employees, 12 bystanders, 9 arresting officers and 8 bandits, a total of 62 casualties.

Investigations by the association's agents resulted in the arrest of 36 forgers, 42 bandits and one burglar, or 79 of the 141 bank criminals reported as being apprehended during the period.

Home Appliance Company

The year 1935 will eclipse all previous years in sales of electric refrigerators in the Montevallo district (Shelby County) according to the prediction of Messrs Allen and Craig, managers of the Home Appliance Company, distributors here General Electric kitchen appliances. Sales of all electric appliances also are expected to show a decided increase of past years, they added.

"This belief is justified by the great acceptance of the electric refrigerator as a utilitarian servant in the home," they say. "The public is learning that electricity can be made more useful and economical in the home and that the more abundant and efficient use of it represents the best value derived from the spending dollar.

"We may expect a great activity in home modenrization during 1935. The average family is appreciating that the kitchen has been the most neglected part of the home and threfore the most in need of improvement. Now we are in position to offer a complete electric kitchen that will save more than one half of the labor involved in this room and on such a basis that the financial responsibility can be accepted easily by hundreds of thousands of homes."

The increase of the CCC is an important move on the part of the government. It has been the most successful single New Deal idea, HOLC. It has taken the young men, who would have been the first to become both hopeless and dangerously morose, off the streets and put them to work. It has been resulted in a great benefit to the timberlands of the nation, which have been cut away to an alarming extent. The dust storms this year called America's attention to the menace that comes after the forests are laid waste.

Mr. Murphy was taking his first flight in airplane. The pilot was taking him over the city, and when they were about three thousand feet up, the plane suddenly went into a nose dive.

"Ha, ha," laughed the pilot as he righted the plane. "Half of the people down there thought we were falling."

"Sure," said Murphy, "and 50 per cent of the people up here thought so too."

And if a man makes a better mouse trap, the world assumes that he also can make a better graduation address.

Watch The Fords Go By

Of the entire automobile industry's production gain of 552,780 cars and trucks in 1934 over the previous year, Ford V-8 cars and trucks accounted for approximately 56 percent, or 285,268 units, by far the largest actual unit gain in the industry.

To fulfill its announced intention of making one million or more Ford V-8 cars and trucks this year, the Ford Motor Company will utilize 3,200,000 pounds of wool for upholstery, floor coverings, lubricants and anti-rust preparations. That quantity of wool will require more than 800,000 sheep to produce it.

People are interested in automobiles. On the first two days the new Ford V-8 for 1935 was displayed to the public, a total of 8,683,900 persons visited dealers' showrooms throughout the United States, to see the new models. When Henry Ford brought out his Model A late in 1927, a total of 5,000,000 persons visited Ford dealers' showrooms.

The cotton produced on 433,000 acres will be required to furnish brake linings, batting, cloth, timing gears, safty glass and battery boxes for the 1,000,000 or more Ford V-8 cars and trucks which the Ford Motor Company plans to build in 1935. A million cars will require more than 69,000,000 pounds of cotton.

Every new Ford V-8 Fordor Sedan utilizes more than 70 pounds of cotton. A total of 25,000,000 pounds of cotton will be used in making the tires of the 1,000,000 or more cars Henry Ford is building in 1935.

A simplification in designing, tool-making and manufacturing operations by the Ford Motor Company was the adoption of a decimal system of measurement, instead of common fractions, for many parts of Ford Cars and trucks. Tried for several year, it has now become an accepted international standard of measurement.

More water is consumed in the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company at Dearborn, Michigan, than in the cities of Detroit, Washington and Cincinnati combined. The Rouge Plant water consumption now averages 325,000,000 gallons daily. As a comparison, the city of Detroit uses 288,000,000 gallon sof water daily.

ALASKAN BEARS TO GET SQUARE DEAL

Better Opportunity to Enjoy Honey and Molasses.

Washington, D. C.—Uncle Sam is going to see that the famous brown bears of Admiralty island, Alaska, get a better opportunity to enjoy their molasses and honey.

The Agricultural department has announced that the forest service, the biological survey and the Alaska game commission will work co-operatively on a plan to co-ordinate management of the bears with a "well-rounded use and enjoyment of other commercial, recreational and scenic resources of the island."

Principal features of the plan include:

Areas needed for protection of the bear will be closed to hunting. Closed areas will be extended, or replaced by others, as changing conditions warrant.

Closed areas will include general recreation areas; sections with outstanding heavy stocking of bears in the spring when the cubs are small; heavily stocked areas where bears may be observed by naturalists, photographers and the public; and lands in the vicinity of logging camps, trollers' camps and other centers of seasonal occupancy, where closure may be advisable to assist in controlling casual or illegal killing.

The department said limited bear hunting may be permitted, subject to bag limits and to closure for entire seasons to prevent jeopardizing the bear population. Permitted yearly kill never will be allowed to exceed the yearly net increase.

A system of trails, portages, shelter cabins and observation blinds will be constructed for naturalists and recreationists.

Fossils Show Antarctic Was Once Subtropical

New York.—Fossil remains, believed to be between 60,000,000 and 100,000,000 years old, brought from the antarctic by Lincoln Ellsworth, offer evidence that the south polar area at one time enjoyed a subtropic climate, in the opinion of Dr. Chester A. Reeds, curator of geology and fossil invertebrates at the American Museum of Natural History. Doctor Reeds has been studying the specimens since Mr. Ellsworth's return a few days ago.

The fossils represent 50 different species of molluscs, abundant during the age of reptiles, Doctor Reeds explained. His investigation revealed that the fossil collection included some specimens of vegetable life, as yet unidentified, and some volcanic rocks and lava.

> "I foresee the time when industry shall no longer denude the forests which require generations to mature, nor use up the mines which were ages in making, but shall draw its raw material largely from the annual produce of the fields . . . I am convinced that we shall be able to get out of yearly crops most of the basic materials which we now get from forest and mine."

The figures in the map are based on what will be used this year if the Ford Motor Company reaches its intended production of 1,000,000 cars and trucks.

LEATHER goes into upholstery—and in addition, glues are made from cow hide, and from cow's milk . . . Other parts of cattle, through other processes, yield stearic acid, greases, glycerine (for shock absorbers and body enamel) and soap chips (used in washing machined parts and bodies before painting).

GOAT'S HAIR (Mohair) goes into upholstery.

BEESWAX goes into electrical imbedding compounds.

COTTON goes into tires, batting, cloth, battery box, timing gears, brake linings and, not least important, into Safety Glass. (Every Ford V-8 car built this year will have Safety Glass in every window, at no extra cost to the car buyer . . . Cotton, in the form of cellulose acetate, is the central part between the two sheets of glass that make up every finished sheet of Safety Glass.)

CORN yields butyl alcohol (for enamel finishes and other purposes) and starch (for stiffening cotton linings).

LINSEED OIL is the basis for paint—is used in foundry cores—and is one of the ingredients of the beautiful, synthetic baked enamel finish on a Ford V-8.

CASTOR OIL goes into lacquers and artificial leather suitable for rumble seats, where real leather would be damaged by exposure to the weather.

TUNG OIL is part of the top material used in Ford cars and is also used in brake linings.

SOY BEANS are used in making cores for metal castings in our foundry and are also an important part of the baked enamel finish of a Ford V-8 and of the plastic knobs and buttons in the car's interior.

LUMBER is used for packing purposes. It is not used for any structural part of the Ford car, which has a welded, all-steel body, reinforced with steel, for maximum safety.

Smart Daytime Fashions of Lace

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A LACE epidemic is raging throughout the realm of fashion. You couldn't escape wearing lace if you would and you wouldn't if you could, not after you have seen the charming, smart and flattering apparel designers are creating of lace this season.

Not in all the centuries past has lace played so versatile a role as it is now playing. Fashion has decreed that we are not only to dine and to dance and attend functions of high degree clad in filmy, exquisitely patterned lace but we are to wear tailored lace in the daytime, go swimming in lace bathing suits, make our smartest sports clothes of lace tuned to the occasion and if we keep pace with the mode our lace-gloved hands will carry handbags of lace. The newest number on the summer program is the all-lace hat; also capes, jackets and evening wraps that are fashioned of lace.

The idea of lace used in a fabric way has been welcomed by designers as a new avenue of expression for their talents. The outstanding gesture of the moment is the shirtwaist dress which is tailored of fabriclike lace. It is smart in navy and other dark colors and it is adorable in the new pastels. We predict that the new season will not be far spent ere the majority of us will be going about in these flattering lace shirtwaist fashions. For a summer of travel and week-end visits a lace shirtwaist is ideal, for it packs without creasing or wrinkling and it looks smart wherever one goes in the daytime.

Lace has been shown in beautiful and striking creations at every Paris collection this season and our own American designers are equally as enthusiastic and exciting in their use of it. While lace is fashionable for every hour of the twenty-four, the big news about lace is its acceptance as a medium for practical daytime clothes.

One of the most distinctive daytime lace costumes of the Paris season is shown to the right in the illustration. It is a Martial et Armand creation in answer to the call for an ensemble that would be appropriate for the races without having to resort to a formal full-length gown. A beautiful pattern of ecru in cotton lace was selected to pose over black silk. Both the dress and jacket are made of this combination of black all-silk crepe and lace. The black crepe is used also for the belt which ties like a sash.

While the all-lace theme is vastly important, it is not any more so than is that of lace used in a trimming way. Lace edgings and trimmings cannot be left out even in tailored things. For instance Dilkusha tailors a blouse (pictured to the left) of navy blue linen using narrow white val lace on the sleeves and the cuffs and in rows up and down the front. In fact, all of the French designers are making voluminous use of val lace for trimming this season.

Speaking of lace sports fashions, you will be wanting one of the new jacket-wraps made of cotton lace in the color you like best. They are to be worn over your linen and pique frocks this summer.

GRAY IS MODISH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Among best dressed followers of fashion gray is proving a favorite. Gray woolens fashioned into coats, suits and tailored street dresses make special appeal. The gray woolen dress here pictured is typical of the sort of costumes worn by the smart set. The stunning cape is lined with red woolen and is detachable, in that it buttons on to the sleeves.

Smart Sport Suits

Little tailored jackets with detail of pleats and fullness at the back in men's suiting, flannel or gabardine worn with odd skirts will constitute smart sports suits this spring.

Wrist Ruffles

Wrist ruffles are flaunting their graceful folds on some of the new and dressier blouses. They usually occur with jabots or ruffled collars.

NEW BLOUSES HAVE FEMININE ACCENTS

When considering blouses, remember they have gone feminine. Some of them are even made of chiffon. Soft lines, delicate colors, ruffles, all the typical feminine accents, make this season's styles.

For example, shirring is smart and new. Shirred collars, cuffs and pockets, shirred shoulders, even shirred sleeves, are among the most popular style notes. One of the smartest of these is shirred in black at the neckline, just as a peasant frock. But it doesn't stop there. Three rows of shirring are used to set the sleeves into the blouse.

Monograms to Be Popular With Maids This Season

The ultra-smart maid and matrons will bear labels this season.

Handsome monograms in the new modernistic letters are available for handbags and vanity cases.

There are brooches in beautifully-wrought metal or wood or rhinestones for scarfs and the lapels of tailored suits.

There are broad metal bracelets with an open side into which initials may be slipped, and a smart metal fob on the same principle. Even pull-on gloves are being lettered with small initials especially designed for gloves.

Celluous Tissue Fabrics All Glitter Like Metal

Wonders no end! The new "glass fabric" heralded earlier in the year has been duplicated in several celluous tissue fabrics for the style-right spring wardrobe.

The fabric is much like the tissue used in wrappings and has a mystifying effect when first seen. It is stiff as moire but very light in weight, it is durable, and glitters like metal cloth.

You'll find it in black, white and rainbow colors, and wear it in glamorous evening gowns, formal blouses and collar and cuff sets that lend a formal note to the street clothes for afternoon.

Airplanes Enlisted for War on Locust Hordes

During the past nine years locust swarms have been devastating vast areas in Africa and western Asia, and since 1929 experts have been studying means of controlling the insects. Recently, at an international locust conference held in London, it was resolved that the locusts could be halted through the control of their breeding grounds, or, if they are already in migration, through their destruction in flight.

Agricultural development in Africa has been considerably impeded by the depredations of the locusts, which have caused losses of approximately $35,000,000. Investigations have now disclosed that each species of locust inhabits exclusively a definite zone of vegetation and that its migrations are governed by the seasons. Many of these breeding regions have now been located. The desert locust, for instance, is known to breed in the remote lands south of the Sahara and to migrate northward to the fertile Mediterranean coast of Africa.

Once the breeding areas have been found, the conference reports, the next step in control is to establish field stations where the life habits of the insects will be studied. Evidence already gathered tends to show that swarms form when the life cycles of solitary locusts are accelerated, causing a rapid multiplication of numbers.

As swarms gather preparatory to flight, if their migratory courses have been discovered as well as their breeding sources, it is then possible, recent experiments in Africa indicate, to destroy them with poison dust sprayed from airplanes. Locusts make no effort, it has been shown, to avoid a cloud of sodium arsenate dust blown across their line of flight. Nor does the passage of an airplane through or across their ranks deter them from the course.

Most of the locusts passing through the sodium arsenate eventually drop out of the swarm to their death, apparently because the inhalation of the dust brings on paralysis. The poison will remain fatal to a passing swarm for about three minutes. It must be discharged several times for large swarms and must be sprayed at a height of about 100 feet to avoid damage to crops.

GIRL WILL TRACE LIFE IN FAR NORTH

Miss Thorn Will Study Beginnings of Eskimo Race.

Edmonton, Alta.—An intensive study of the origin of the Eskimo tribes in Canada's northern Arctic territories will be undertaken next summer by Miss Sue Thorn, graduate in anthropology of the University of California. Miss Thorn is at present in Edmonton laying plans for an extended stay in the Arctic.

The Eskimo language, anthropology, customs and folklore will be studied by the young California scientist with a view to proving or disproving the theory that the Eskimo race originally came from the Orient via the Bering straits. She plans to go north to Aklavik, on the Mackenzie delta, early in the summer.

Although this is her first trip north, Miss Thorn has spent considerable time studying Eskimo life, language and customs, and is confident she will have little difficulty in facing the rigors of the Arctic.

After spending some time in Aklavik, "becoming acclimatized," she plans to journey east to Victoria island in Coronation gulf and possibly go on to Greenland if she can obtain permission from the Danish government.

WHY THE BIBLE

By Augustus J. Cox, B.D.

Reading time: 4 minutes

The Bible represents a religious history of the Hebrew people for over a thousand years. History is mankind's greatest teacher. Religious history is no exception to this general principle. The religious experience represented in the Bible is more profoundly ethical and more truly spiritual than that anywhere else recorded. The Bible is thus the richest treasure of religious instruction and inspiration as yet within the reach of man.

Each generation in turn has sought to interpret the world in which it lived in terms of God; or to use a familiar phrase, to "justify the ways of God to men." Their world like our own, was continually changing. Therefore, they never allowed any one stage of that experience to become final in its authority over succeeding stages.

I treasure the record of this changing experience for three main reasons. First, because it satisfies me that God moves in the affairs of nations, that this is God's world. The story of the experience of the Hebrew people coming to a climax in the religious experience of Jesus and of the early Church is The Greatest Wonder In History. Nothing less than the goodness and greatness of God will account for it. As I see more and more that the forces of the biblical world were the same in their nature and processes as the forces of the present world, my faith in the God of today is immeasurably strengthened. (I see that the will of God worked itself out in Hebrew history by slow degrees. More than a thousand years of preparation were required to pave the way for the coming of Christianity. God is never in a hurry. Infinitely patient, he waits for man to catch up with his purpose and to cooperate in the working out of his plans The record of this long suffering encourages me when I am tempted to be downcast by the slowness of our own generation to respond to high and holy ideals..) There is an irresistable urge implanted by God in the soul of man that slowly pushes him on to better and higher levels of thought and deed. The progress has been at times almost imperceptible; and it is only when we take long views of the history of man, such as the biblical records make possible, that we can discern the steady advance of the frontier of religion and morals "God is marching on."

Secondly, the Bible should be given place in our minds and hearts, because of the fact that the result of the hearty and intelligent acceptance of Bible standards and ideals justify the Bible. The tree is known by its fruits. Whether in personal ,social ,or national life the introuduction of the principles of the Bible as controlling influence has always and everywhere meant improvement. It is a significant fact that the nations of today who set the pace in this modern world and are responsible for whatever of light and progress has been incorporated into modern civilization are nations that have worked out their own civilization under the guidance and inspiration of the biblical message. The Bible today is a striking illustration of the principle known as "the survival of the fittest." (It has been brought into contrast and competition with the other great religious literatures of the world on their own soil and it has had nothing to fear from the contact.)

No less convincing is the evidence of the effect of biblical teachings upon personal character. Sudden transformations of life-purposes ,such as that of Paul on the way to Damascus, have led many a soul out of darkness into light. By whatever mode of entry the Bible has obtained control of the human heart and life, it has produced characters that are the admiration of the world. It has succeeded not only in commanding the respect of men's intellects, but also in firing their imaginations and capturing their wills so that they have given themselves unreservedly to the doing of the will of God. And that will of God has been consistently seen to involve, primarily, not merely lip service, but a pure and unselfish devotion to the service of human welfare.

My final reason for having confidence in the Bible lies in the fact that I find in the teachings of the scriptures inspiration and instruction for my own personal, daily liffe. The visions of the prophets and the longings of the Psalmists kindle my own soul to a quicker life; and the wonderful story of Jesus gives me a clearer understanding of God and a new revelation of the possibilities of man. I look upon the Bible as a ringing challenge to creative being.

INSPIRING MESSAGE DELIVERED MONDAY

Montevallo, Ala., May 27.—Mary Emma Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College, gave an inspiring message to the graduates of Alabama College at the baccalaureate program, closing the thirty-ninth commencement at the institution Monday morning.

On the subject, "Progress, Man's distinctive mark alone," Miss Woolley emphasized the opportunity of the colleges and the people whom it trains to solve current problems. She said, "The world needs the trained mind, just as it needs the right spirit . . . and peace is a matter of stopping to think." Miss Woolley was the only woman member of the International Disarmament Conference. She is past president of the American Association of University Women, and active in the work of the League of Nations Association, the Institute of Pacific Relations, and the National League of Women Voters.

President O. C. Carmichael, who is leaving Alabama College in September to become Dean of the Graduate School and Senior College at Vanderbilt University, delivered a final message to the graduating class and faculty in closing the program. H. D. LeBaron, of the music faculty, was at the organ for the academic procession and recession. The invocation was given by the Rev. F. B. Pearson and the benediction by the Rev. I. T. Carlton.

Graduating with honors were Misses Ruby Lee Livings, Agnes Postell, Elaine Smith, Mary Alice Newsom, Autress Busby ,Lena Clara Shackleford and Mary Lorenz. The list of Graduates with honors included Misses Alice Stallworth, Mary Frances Merrill, Mildred Hall, Carolyn Reddoch, Marion Bosenhard, Fannie Ruth Pledger, Julia Barnes, Anne Fent, Katherine Savage, Christine Beasley,, Elnora Savage, Lucile Mixson, Ruth Stovall, Maude Davis, Aline Blair, Anita Smith, Elizabeth Creel, Viola Love, Virginia Addison, and Nell Taylor. Miss Alice Stallworth was given a special award by the Debate Council for her service in the forensic program of the college.

Geo. H. Leahy Criticize Funds

Chicago—Wasteful expenditure of government funds by the Tennessee Valley Authority, as revealed in an audit by Controler General J. R. McCarl was criticized sharply today by George J. Leahy, chair man of the National Job Saving and Investment Protection Bureau for the Coal Industry.

In his statement, Mr. Leahy pointed out that the activities of the Bureau since its organization two years ago was to direct the attention of the nation to the profligate spending on TVA and similar Federal hydro-electric projects. "This revelation only confirms our previous statements and beliefs that the taxpayer is being made the goat for unnecessary expenditures for unsound developments.

"Shocking as the exposure of many irregularities such as stolen cash, overpayments and non-competitive contract awards may be, the pathetic thing is that the whole scheme of TVA has no economic foundation.

"In President's Roosevelt's power 'yardstick' TVA, there is practically no provision made for depreciation although it is estimated by McCarl that TVA should have laid away in its first year a million dollars for depreciation. Actually, TVA set aside less than $83,000.

"This uneconomic procedure means only one thing—that the annual tax burden on every man, woman and child in America will be increased in order to provide a more abundant life for the residents of the Tennessee River basin. It will throw more jobs into politics and wreck a billion dollar industry."

Mr. Leahy of Chicago was selected by the National Code Association and the various code authorities to represent the producers in the Bureau organized to represent both capitol and labor interests in the coal industry. Its purposes has been to do everything possible to secure full and complete consideration by the government authorities of all factors involved in determining the permanent economic value of proposed hydro-electric developments where they are competitive with coal burning plants, and to inform the general public of what these factors mean in the everyday life of the nation.

"Through this Bureau, the coal industry has fought and will continue to fight the wide spread building of hydro-electric plants subsidizing with the taxpayers' money, which will result in the destruction of the market for a large part of the production of bituminous coal, with consequent distress to mine workers, owners railroads and all allied industries.

Early Passage For Gas Tax Bill

Montgomery—Members of the Association of Commissioners and Probate Judges, meeting at Montgomery last week, expressed interest in the Uniform Gasoline Tax Bills which are now on the House calendar for early passage.

Representative J. B. Reynolds, of Ozark, author of this legislation, explained to the county officials making inquiry that his plan does propose to increase the present average gasoline tax rate which including state and local taxes, is seven cents per gallon, which is the same as the proposed uniform rate. He stated that his bill merely provides that the state shall collect all of the gasoline taxes for the state, counties and municipalities and prohibits such county and city taxation. "Higher taxation than now exists will soon be in effect unless this legislation, including the constitutional amendment, is adopted and a check is put on the local taxation of gasoline," said the Dale County legislator.

Mr. Reynolds stated that the added cent, bringing the total to a uniform seven cents, is levied primarily for the towns and cities, and what little is left after the municipalities are paid their portion of the funds derived from this source will be divided equally between the counties, which have already been provided for in the distribution of gasoline tax funds. He said that local taxation of motor fuel, if allowed to continue and spread, will soon bring about greater confusion than now exists.

Speed Classic Won By Ford

Another great speed classic has been won by the Ford V-8!

According to G. T. Towery, local Ford dealer, in an international automobile race recently staged at Rio de Janeiro,Irenu Correa, famous Brazilian speed king, piloted a Ford V-8 into first place: and six of the first ten cars to cross the finish line were Ford V-8s—all stock models, stripped for the contest according to the rules governing the colorful event.

The race, a feature of the annual "Tourist Season," which the municipality of Rio de Janeiro promotes each year, was patronized by the Automobile Club of Brazil, a body affiliated with the famous Automobile Club of France.

The course on which the race was run was laid out over some of the most beautiful territory surrounding the city of Rio—over what is known as the "Gavea" circuit, according to Mr. Towery. But notwithstanding the beauty of the "Gavea" circuit, it is claimed to be one of the most difficult roads in the world for an automobile race. It presents sharp curves in rapid sequence, as well as irregular topography with a number of steep grades.

"There were only two kilometers of level road on the whole course", said the report of the race which the local Ford dealer received from the Brazilian metropolis, "and the race consisted of twenty five laps, 292.5 kilometers in all".

There were 45 cars entered in the grueling speed battle, representing 18 different makes from Europe and America.

Irenu Correa, driver of the winning V-8, is a well-known South American auto racing star who is reported to be a probable entrant in the forthcoming annual 500-mile race on the Indianapolis Speedway, May 30. Correa praised the performance of the Ford V-8 after his sensational victory, telling representatives of the press that it is the car he drives on the highway as well as on the race course, his private automobile also being a Ford—a V-8 sedan.

A feature of the Brazilian speed king's triumph was his non-stop record. He drove his Ford V-8 through the entire 292.5 kilometers of stamina-proving competition without changing a tire or takin on gas oil or water, according to the technical report of the race officials.

Baptist Church Notes

Young People's Day

The Baptist young people of Shelby County are to come to Montevallo on Thursday, June 6, to join in a special Young Peoples' Day They will attend the School of Missions sessions that day and have a picnic at the Big Spring after the morning session. We are hoping that all the churches in the association will be represented.

An afternoon program of swimming, games, and other forms of recreation will be planned. All our local young people will want to have part in the picnic and the afternoon program. All those who attend the School of Missions will be invited to take part.

Miss Juliette Mather, the Southwide Young Peoples, Secretary of the W. M. U., will be with us that day and will speak both morning and evening. She is a young woman of charming personality, of wide experience with young people, of deep consecration to Christ and His Kingdom. She went abroad last summer and came in contact with the youth of many lands. She is an excellent speaker and everyone will want to hear her.

Dr. J. B. Lawrence

Next Sunday morning, June 2, Dr. J. B. Lawrence, Secretary of the Baptist Home Mission Board, Atlanta, Ga., will speak at the Baptist Church. He comes at this time because it is the beginning of our School of Missions. We are indeed fortunate to be able to secure him for this occasion. He is one of th egreatest men in our denomination. He is a great missionary statesman, a pleasing and forceful speaker. No one can afford to neglect this opportunity of hearing him. Be sure to be present Sunday morning. We are counting on you. Tell all your neighbors and friends about his coming and invite them to hear him.

School Of Missions

Next week is the time for our School of Missions to which we have looked forward for some weeks. The first session will begin at 9:30 Monday morning. We shall have a morning and evening session each day through Friday. At each session there will be one class period and an inspirational address . An additional feature of the evening programs will be the showing of stereopticon views of some of our mission fields—Palestine, China, Cuba, and the Indian work in the West.

As teachers and inspirational speakers we shall have the following: Dr. J. Wash Watts, former missionary in Jerusalem; Rev. Noble Y. Beall, a Home Board worker; Dr. F M. Barnes, Baptist Mission Board Secretary in Alabama, Dr. L. L. Gwaltney, Editor of the Alabama Baptist; Miss Juliette Mather, South-Wide Young Peoples' Secretary; Miss Ida Stallworth, Secretary of the Alabama Baptist W. M. U.; Rev. Campbell Napier and Davie Napier, sons of Dr. A. Y. Napier, who spent many years in mission work in China; and others.

We plan to have recreational features for the young people during the week. We shall probably be able to use the college swimming pool from noon Wednesday on through the week. There will be study worship and recreation for everybody. We want all the people of all ages to attend.

Make your plans to give the whole week to this one great undertaking. It will mean much to the church and the community.

Ford Employes Advance $6 Scale

The Ford Motor Company announced today the restoration of the $6 a day minimum for all employes.

The prepared statement, issued by the company's advertising counsel, said that all employes working at the previous $5 a day minimum have been advanced to the $6 a day standard, which, the statement added, was the 1929 minimum wage for the Ford company.

Employes engaged at rate above the minimum were also advanced to higher wage levels through hourly rate increases of 5 cents and more.

The statement said that the new scales go into effect at all Ford and Lincoln Motor Company plants and affect 126,000 employes, 81,000 of them in Detroit. Of the Detroit workers, 41,000 are minimum wage employes. The statement estimated the cost of the increase at $2,000,000 a month.

The Ford minimum was increased to $7 a day after the depression set in late in 1929 and remained in effect until near the end of 1931 when the $6 daily minimum was resumed. A year later the minimum was dropped to $4 a day, and in March 1934, it was increased to $5 a day.

NOTICE

Evangelist W .L .Head will begin a series of meetings at Calera Baptist Church on the second Sunday in June. Everybody is cordially invited.

Every professional man can tell you how to reform America. Begin on some other profession.

Let no foreign nation injure America and collect tribute. Only good Americans may do that.

It is your right to make an unholy noise on your own property. But you are a trespasser when the noise crosses your property line.

Reform is slow. Criticize the crooks in any profession and the honest men feel insulted and fight you.

This is the season when cold bath enthusiasts begin using more veracity and less hot water.

The ony law that is necessary and workable is one that doesn't affect people who behave decently.

The chief fault of the New Deal is that it tries to reform our conduct instead of our bank rolls.

Being a sucker once is no disgrace. It shows you are used to dealing with honest people.

Americans get a raw deal. They are the only people Uncle Sam gets mad at when they don't pay him.

A radical is one who would share the wealth in Huey's way. A liberal is one who would share the wealth in Roosevelts way. A conservative is one who woudn't share it in any way.

AS THE WORLD TRAVELS

A generation ago the railroads thought they had attained sufficient speed. Now, with the airplane and motor vehicle for competitors, the railroads are speeding up again.

(Mrs. W. P. McConadghy)

From New York comes the announcement that the American Locomotive Company has built at its shops there an engine capable of speeding more than 120 miles an hour. It is said to be "unquestionaby the fastest railroad engine in the world."

Doubtless its speed will be used. The world cannot get enough speed today. That fact is strange, too, considering how ignorant the world seems to be of what it is headed for.

Millions Lost by Politically Operated Power System. Taxpayers Must Make Up Huge Losses

Ontario's politically operated power system, held up for years as a model of government ownership, now faces a grave crisis. Instead of a successful venture, the New York Sun reports that the tax free Ontario system has added hundreds of millions to Ontario's public debt. This deficit must be paid by Ontario taxpayers. Here is the story:

"The cause of public ownership of electrical utilities in the United States receives a genuine setback as the American public begins to understand what is happening to the blue-ribbon baby of public ownership, the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario. That is the largest municipal supply system in the world, often held up as an example of what governmental operation can accomplish in the utility field. But its record indisputably shows that political management and an unsound economic basis can get the strongest of such institutions into trouble.

"Theoretically the corporation exists for much the same purpose as that proposed for various 'yardstick' enterprises in the United States—that of furnishing electrical current at low rates to consumers through public management and control. Actually it has added hundreds of millions of dollars to the public debt of Ontario which, on a per capita basis, scarcely can be said to compare favorably with that of New York or Quebec (or Alabama) where private management is the rule.

"The commission has found itself with an unmarketable surplus on hand and has been compelled to face heavy annual deficits.

"Rather than risk unpopularity by raising rates the commission began to dig into its reserves. But this did not affect the mounting annual deficits.

"Meanwhile communities in Ontario using municipal power on which no tax is paid have found their burdens of debt steadily growing heavier. These would gladly use tax money from electrical services if they only could devise some means of collecting it.

"As one way to help the commission out of its difficulties the Hepburn government — declaring that Hydro has been a 'political tool' which was 'nearly ruined by mismanagement and inefficiency'—has resorted to the drastic expedient of repudiating contracts negotiated by an agency of the government. Our own repudiation of the gold clause in Federal bonds estops us on this side of the border from raising any question as to the morality of this procedure."—Adv. Alabama Power Co.

THE MAN FROM YONDER

By Harold Titus

the floor.

"I wrote that! I wrote that years ago!" she cried, struggling to speak distinctly. "I wrote that note for Mr. Brandon. . . . Years ago. . . . How did it get here? Who is calling Ben to the lodge?"

"What's this?" Tim Jeffers asked roughly. "Brandon? . . . Callin' Ben off alone?"

"Don't you see?" Martin cried and his voice was thick. "Dawn wrote it, all right. But he's sent it to Ben. . . . It's a decoy! Tim, the lad's on his way to the lodge alone and Brandon's planned it!"

No need for more words, then! On went Martin's jacket. From a corner he snatched snowshoes and a pair for Tim.

"We'll go," he said to Dawn. "You tell Buller—"

"But I'm going, too!" the girl cried sharply. "I'm going. Oh, hurry, Tim! We may be too late, now!"

They crossed the railroad tracks at a run, put on their snowshoes and with Jeffers breaking trail, entered the timber. Another had gone that way today, a man whose heart burned and sang. Dawn had sent for him; Dawn wanted him!

Entering the office while Martin was in the mill his eyes had encountered Dawn's note. No thought of how it came to be there presented itself. The quick conclusion at which he arrived was that Dawn and others had gone to Antler Lodge; that was where the shot had been fired which sent Sam Faxson to his death. Perhaps Able had taken Dawn there. Hastily, he took his snowshoes and departed.

The distance was a good five miles, however, and part of the going was in soft footing. So it was nearly two hours after his start that he came in sight of the building on the high bank of the Mad Woman.

As he went down the slope he saw snowshoe tracks outside the place.

"Hello!" he cried, mounting a drift and stopping. "Hello, in there!"

No answer. He twisted his feet hastily out of their straps, wondering a bit. For once his alertness was gone, for once he was wholly off guard.

"Dawn!" he called again as he shoved open the door. "Hello, who's here—"

He had crossed the threshold, peering into the gloom, a sudden and cold misgiving sweeping him. "Turn back; withdraw!" a small voice warned but before he could gather himself a blow struck him and he went down under a heavy, living weight.

But as Elliott went down, with his assailant on top, he drew his knees upward, bowed his back and with a trick of rough-and-tumble fighting used the very impact which had floored him to toss the man on beyond.

He heard him curse, saw the other turn as he pitched across the floor and scramble to his feet.

"Brandon!" he cried hoarsely as a savage joy swept him.

At last he was face to face with the man who had struck so many times from the darkness and from behind!

Brandon did not speak. He rushed with head lowered. Great arms wrapped Ben's body, a head drove into the pit of his stomach, driving the breath from his body.

He fell to the floor fighting, but his blows were weak, ineffective. A hand clutched at his throat and he tore at it with all his strength. The fingers shut down on the windpipe and he writhed under that agony, summoning all his courage, all his will to break free, to outlast that strangling pressure. But he could not do it. He went numb; his brain clouded. He lay still and then after a time, sweet air poured again into his lungs.

That was all of which he was aware for a long interval: air, bathing his tortured chest. Air, which had been denied him by the strangling grip of a man's hand.

That thought burned away the haze which enveloped him and he started to throw himself over, to rise, to be up and fighting. But he found that he was unable to move.

His hands were stretched out above his head; a harsh bond held each wrist helpless. He tried to kick and failed. His feet were locked together and held there as by a great weight.

Footsteps, then, came across the floor and Nicholas Brandon looked down at him in the dim light, a whisky bottle in his hand, swaying a bit on unsteady feet.

"So!" he grunted and laughed. "So you fell for it! So you followed your blessed Dawn, eh?" He went off into a tantrum of crazy laughter.

Ben twisted slowly against his bonds and discovered that the rope which bound him was wet. He could no more free himself without aid than he could hope to fly.

"It worked!" Brandon cried. "G—d, how it worked! 'Dawn!' you yelled like a fool, standing outside there. 'Dawn!' . . . And then stepped into my trap, eh?"

He sat heavily in a chair.

"It's all worked, even to the weather! You came alone. It's starting to snow. Nobody's nearer than the Hoot Owl and the smoke of a burning camp wouldn't be seen twenty rods a day like this."

He leered.

Smoke of a burning camp! Ben's racing thoughts connected that idea with the odor which filled the room. . . . His fingers felt the strands of hemp that stretched from his wrists to the posts of bunks against the wall. Surely, the rope had been soaked in kerosene. So it was Brandon's intent to leave him tied helpless, to fire the building. . . . Then his mind centered on thwarting the scheme of this ruthless man gone wholly mad. . . .

"Yeah. It worked . . . so far," he replied and grinned.

Brandon snorted in contempt.

"So far, yes; and on to the end, it'll work. You're tied fast, aren't you?"—leaning low so Ben could see the cruel lights in his eyes. "You're tied hand and foot! I'll touch the camp off. You'll roast . . because this old camp'll burn like h—l itself! They'll find your bones here; they'll find an empty whisky bottle. That's all they'll find."

Brandon had schemed competently; no detail which would implicate him seemed to have been overlooked. Still, fear did not manifest itself in Elliott's heart; only contempt was there for a man so merciless. Contempt and a stout determination to stall for time.

"You're smart, Brandon," he said. "I'll admit that [illegible] good I'm surprised that you overlooked a bet."

The other turned sharply.

"A bet?" he cursed derisively. "What d' you mean, a bet?"

"A little thing. A thing almost anybody might overlook. But it's bound to come to light if I don't show up, and one murder charge's as good as another. I'm talking about a letter Don Stuart wrote me just before he died."

"Its' a lie! Whatever he wrote was a lie!" Brandon's cry was shrill. "He was a drunken, lying bum!"

"Which, even if true, wouldn't matter so much, now. Once, it would have. A few weeks ago, it might have. But not now. . . . Things have changed in the Tincup country; people have changed. There are dozens who'd jump at the chance to make trouble for you, now, Brandon, and—"

"Lies can't hurt me, you fool." Brandon cried but his teeth rattled. "Plotting and scheming, were you, to drag that old case up and try to turn it against me? And basing it all on the death-bed ravings of—"

"But McManus isn't dead!" Ben cried, crowding all the conviction and triumph he could summon into his tone, playing his hunch to the utmost. "He's alive and we've located him"—lying himself, now, in an attempt to beat the truth from Brandon. "He's on his way back and what he'll have to tell, coupled with what old Don had the courage to put down in his own writing—"

"Stuart didn't know! He knew nothing, I tell you! He wasn't even here! He took Faxson's word for it and even Faxson didn't know. He was asleep in that room right there"—pointing—"and he came out while we were talking and Mac went crazy and—"

Elliott could not restrain the impulse to laugh in a wild shout of triumph.

"While we were talking! So that's it! And you've sworn that you weren't here that night! And you were here after all!"

"I wasn't here. . . . I wasn't here. . . . Wasn't here, I tell you. . . . And McManus won't dare come back, with a warrant waiting. . . . He won't dare . . . won't dare. . . ."

"So you admit, as the rest of us now know, that McManus didn't throw himself into the river that night, eh? So you admit he still lives, do you?"

"Admit nothing . . . nothing. . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . He's a murderer, I tell you. . . . And I wasn't here . . . wasn't here. . . ."

And back to the northward three people came through the darkening forest on Elliott's trail, bending low against the mounting storm. Two men were ahead, beating down a track for the girl who followed, pleading with them now and again for more speed.

Ben watched Brandon narrowly. The man's mind, under the influence of the whisky he had taken to goad himself to go through with his murderous plan, and beneath the shock of Elliott's fortunate shot in the dark, was cracking. Ben needed time, now; he spoke:

"I've a proposition, Brandon. How'd you like to trade? How'd you like to have Stuart's letter for, say, the use of my hands and feet for a minute?"

Brandon come slowly close and leaned over him.

"Mean that? Where is it?"—craftily.

"My affair." Even then, he could feel the bill-fold in his breeches pocket where old Don's letter reposed. "What d' you say?"

Brandon's fingers plucked at his lips.

"It's no good! It's a lie, but even if it weren't, it'd be no good in court." Then, sharply: "But what about McManus? Where's he? Where's he coming from? Yes, McManus! We might deal"—cautiously—"about McManus, Elliott. If you'd stop McManus I might . . . I might . . ."

Ben damned himself as a fool for not reading the cruiser's message long before. Clearly, the man knew something which terrified Brandon; logically, it must be concerned with the Faxson killing. If he only had read it weeks ago!

"For the letter. And for word of McManus, I might, Elliott. I might trade your liberty for—"

He checked himself with a grunt as if realizing that he had by his own words placed himself completely in Elliott's hands.

"But what assurance—" Ben began.

"To h—l with you and your questions!" Brandon snarled, straightening. "To h—l with you, Elliott! I'm not afraid of lies and McManus was so drunk he never knew what happened!

"They'll find your bones," he growled between teeth which remained clamped to still their rattling. "They'll find . . . after a while . . . your rotten bones."

From beneath the sink he dragged an oil can and sloshed its contents along the walls, across the floor, over Ben's body until Elliott lay in a pool of inflammable liquid.

"You crossed me!" Brandon cried, digging into a pocket. "From the moment you hit town, you did what no one else had dared do! You kept it up, turning them against me, slipping through every trap I set!" He found the match for which he searched. "But you sealed your doom when you took me on, Elliott!" The match flared.

He took one step to a pile of oil-drenched debris against the oil-soaked wall. He bent forward to apply his torch and stopped, as if frozen, hand extended.

A shout outside; a body crashed against the door. It burst open and Tim Jeffers plunged into the room. Behind him came Martin and as Dawn slid down the steep drift to the entry the burning curl of tinder dropped to the floor and Brandon whirled.

With a muffled shout Martin and Jeffers flung themselves on Brandon as he charged for the doorway. He screamed. He fought frantically, but quickly they bore him down.

"Take that!" Tim's voice bellowed. "'Nd that! 'Nd that!" The sound of knuckles on flesh came with the words. . . . Curses, inarticulate shouts, and then Dawn's frantic voice:

"Ben, where are you?"

Tim rose, looked around the room and moved to where Elliott's prone figure showed indistinctly in the gloom.

"Well I'll be d—d!" he said. "Get up. . . . What? What's this?"

"Trussed up, Tim. Cut me loose. . . Hurry! This is going to be a great party!"

Dawn, running into the kitchen of the camp she knew so well, came back with a lamp, its reservoir half filled. The wick was lighted and the shadows of the room retreated.

"We seen the note," Jeffers muttered. "Dawn there, 'd come out. We suspected you were in trouble and—"

"Never mind about me, now," Ben broke in.

"But you're all that matters!" Dawn said. "Ben. . . . It was my note that decoyed you. It was an old one, written to him. He'd saved it."

"Never mind anything that has to do with me. I'm only an accident in this. It's going to be a wonderful day, dear Dawn. This part is tough for you but . . ." He gave his head an emphatic twist, smiled at her in assurance, then, putting her gently aside, stepped close to Martin.

"Let him up, now. . . . Here. . . . Into this chair, Brandon." They lifted him, for the man seemed incapable of movement himself. "Sit still now. We're simply going to get a few little matters straight for these people."

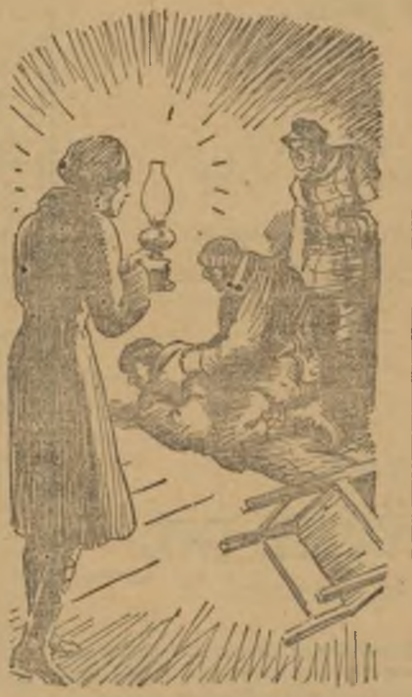
"We've got this citizen in quite a stew," he said. "He schemed to get me out here and did a good job." He looked at Dawn quickly. "I hadn't even had time to wonder about that note. It doesn't matter, though. You saw me tied, there; that rope's soaked with oil. The place is drenched with it. He was just touching her off when you three came in and it would have been as neat a murder as I've heard about in a coon's age!"



The Wick Was Lighted and the Shadows of the Room Retreated.

"A lie!" Brandon muttered. "Was only trying . . . trying . . . letter. . . ." He leaned forward and brushed his mouth unsteadily as he looked from face to face. His dazed eyes fastened on Dawn and light flickered in them. His lip drew back and the girl shuddered. "You, too, eh?" he whispered. "Your sweet lover was in . . . trouble, eh? And you came to . . . save him, eh?" He gave a whispered laugh. "Saved him! For what? . . . Think he'll take you? he demanded, voice rising. "Think he'll take you, spawn of a murderer? A dowry, eh? A fine dowry to take to your lover!"

"Have you forgotten what you admitted to me, Brandon?" Ben asked sharply. "You gave it away, gave yourself away!"

"You fool, you! You think you've got me cold, eh? You've nothing on me that'll amount to a snap of my thumb!" His gaze went back to Dawn. "And I've watched you shrink and cringe all your life and I'm glad now that it's warped you and weakened you—"

That was Martin's voice breaking in, thickened and shaken with congested rage.

He advanced toward Brandon slowly. He halted and did not speak for a long moment. Eyes still fast on the other he reached toward the table, groping for a pair of rusted shears which lay there. A cloud came over Brandon's eyes and he blinked.

"And you'd taunt her with it! Because McManus disappeared!" Martin said slowly with low tensity. "Ah, it made a plausible case, Brandon. . . . It, and your stories. . . ."

Then he did a strange thing. He lifted those shears in a quick gesture to his chin and a lock of the thick beard fell away.

"And you'd make lives h—l because you held the power. . . . And you'd write to the hiding, skulking McManus for years and tell him she was gone. . . . that she was married . . . that she hated her father's name, eh?" Another lock of hair fell, and another His blue eyes were burning, now, and Brandon's chin trembled as a look of horror crept into his face.

"But if he was to come back, Brandon, and swear to her with his own lips that he did not kill . . . swear so, to a girl like that . . . She'd believe him, wouldn't she? She'd believe him, wouldn't she, and be at peace. . . . At peace. . . . Ay, at peace with herself and . . . the one she loves."

He cut the last lock from the bearded jaw and flung away the shears. He stood erect, spreading his hands.

"See!" he cried. "See, Nick Brandon?"

The man in the chair made as if to rise. He could not. He lifted an arm as though to fend a blow.

He ended in a wild scream and cowered back against the wall, sobbing.

Beside Ben, Dawn was trembling. He put his arm about her and she sagged against him.

"So I wouldn't come back, eh?" the man they had known as Martin cried and whirled to face her. "I came, Dawn! I've come back to tell you that I'm not afraid. . . That my heart's clean. . ." He gathered her in his arms, dropped his cheek to her head and closed his eyes. "I'm no killer. I don't know who killed Faxson. Nick told me I did and I lost my head for an hour and then it was too late. . I've hidden for years because he's written me things, terrible things to read, little Dawn. But I couldn't stand it longer!"

McMinus drew Dawn even closer.

You'll know!" he murmured.

"Wait!" cried Ben. "All of you! Listen! This . . . this . . . this thing, here, as much as admited to me that he killed Faxson himself! He was here in this cabin the night Faxson was shot. He was here, I'm telling you! He admitted it to me, not ten minutes ago!

"I don't know much about the rules of evidence"—tugging at the bill-fold in his pocket—"but I've a good guess about what Don Stuart had to tell the night he died, now that Brandon has trapped himself!" He shook the soiled, folded envelope from the purse. "I've had this thing for weeks and like a fool I didn't read it. . . .

"Listen!"

"I have been a coward," Ben read aloud. "McManus did not kill Faxson. Brandon did. Brandon had McManus drunk and was getting him to sign away his share of the partnership when Faxson tried to stop it. Brandon shot Faxson and when McManus was sober enough to understand, told him that he—McManus—had done it. McManus believed him. I don't know what became of McManus. Brandon came to me before Sam died and told me McManus had lit out and that if I did not swear that Faxson said McManus shot at him he would send me to the pen for stealing from the company. This is God's truth. I was afraid to do anything else. I have been a coward. I am sorry I did not tell this years before."

Brandon's head was twitching.

"No lie, Brandon. It's truth!" Ben said without heat, quite soberly.

Tim Jeffers turned to McManus smiling gently, and as he moved Brandon sprang forward. With a wild cry he gained the doorway, snatched it open and plunged outside.

"Get him!" Tim cried and McManus followed, leaping out into the gloom of late afternoon. . . .

"Don't leave me alone! Not here, Ben!"

It was this cry of Dawn's which arrested Ben on the threshold. He turned to see her swaying dizzily.

"Hold me! Hold me close. . . . Ah, Ben, dear!"

Her arms clasped his neck and she began to cry softly.

"Easy!" he said unsteadily. "Easy, now! It's all over. . . . Everything's over!"

No sounds of the three who had fled into the darkness came for many minutes and then old Tim Jeffers stamped grimly into the room. He did not speak as the two looked inquiringly at him. He waited for the man who had been known as John Martin. . . . He came slowly, this man, breathing heavily.

"Compensation," he said in whisper as he advanced toward Dawn, arms outstretched hungrily. "The Mad Woman has him. . . . Here it started. . . . Into that river I was supposed to have gone, in a confession of murder. . . . There he went tonight. . . . We saw it, Tim and I. . . . We watched him swept under the ice. . . ."

It was after midnight when the group assembled in the McManus home. Tim Jeffers, Able, Doctor Sweet, Denny McManus, Dawn and Ben Elliott sat rather silently in the long, low living room while Aunt Em busied herself in the kitchen.

The evening had been an ordeal, explaining, recording evidence; talking with the coroner, the sheriff, the young prosecutor; and though it had ended in triumph, when the prosecutor slowly tore to bits the old warrant for Denny McManus, the tragic facts with which they had been concerned took toll.

Little was said and when Aunt Em appeared, bearing a tray laden with glasses and a bottle, she walked into a hushed silence.

"Fiddlesticks, what folks you are!" she exploded. "Sittin' here like it was a funeral instead of about the happiest time this house has seen in a coon's age!

"I knew in my bones something like this was comin' that night when Denny McManus, callin' himself John Martin, stood in that other room and yanked at his ear, the way he's done since I first set eyes on him! But I didn't know just how it was going to come out and with things mixed up like they were I made up my mind to hold my tongue with both hands.

"Well! Here you are! If you men folks don't say this is the best elderberry wine that ever was wasted on a congregation of long-faces, I miss my guess." She began pouring the wine into glasses. "And if it don't loosen up a tongue or two so's we have a little rejoicin' for the blessings that've come to this house and country then I'll be as mad as a hatter. . . . Or two or three hatters!"

She passed the glasses and no one spoke. She took the last herself and looked around the circle of faces in disgust.

"Has the cat got all your tongues?" she demanded and Able chuckled and old Tim Jeffers smiled.

Still, no one spoke until after old Tim had said his say. He rose to his feet, a giant of a man in that low-ceilinged room. He eyed the clear wine in his glass and then looked about, lifting it in a little gesture of salute.

"Well," he said. . . . "Happy days!"

CHINESE SCOUT HEAD GREETS GIRL SCOUTS

A greeting from China has been extended to American Girl Scouts through Hsu Kwan Yu, secretary of the general association of the Boy Scouts of China, who has been in New York for several months studying the Boy and Girl Scout programs.

Before his recent departure for Nanking,, Mr. Hsu presented Mrs. Frederick Edey; Girl Scout president, with a rice parchment, lettered in Chinese expressing on behalf of "the Scout Brothers and Sisters of China" the hope "that the scouting spirit will help in forming a closer friendship between China and America, and in maintaining world peace." Faintly traced in green on the parchment is the figure of the Buddha who represents long life, and a decorative border repeats endlessly the wish "Long Life."

BOXING TOURNAMENT ON LEGION PROGRAM

The American Legion, in conjunction with the Macfadden Youth Movement, has just completed in Alabama plans for the most comprehensive athletic tournament ever undertaken in the state. Hugh N. Starnes, state director for the American Legion-Mcfadden Athletic program, has just announced from his offices in Birmingham that all preliminaries for a statewide boxing tournament, finals to be held in Birmingham, June 20 to 21, have been completed.

Every Legion post in the state and every town where Macfadden movement is in operation, has been invited to participate in the tournament which is designed to give every boy in the state a chance to test his skill in the manly art of self defense.

In order that every town may be enabled to enter teams in the tournament eight key cities have been designated as district centers for early matches. All winners from these eight cities are to compete in the finals.

Each district is to use a portion of its tournament proceeds toward defraying expenses of transportation of its team to the tournament finals in Birmingham. While the boxers are in Birmingham the meals and lodging will be taken care of by the tournament committee.

There will be no entry fee attached but there will be other restrictions, first of all every entrant must be an amateur. Then no boy will be allowed to compete who has boxed in more than two regular public tournaments. And the tournament committee reserves the right to reject any entry. The tournament is designed to give the boys who have been taking boxing instructions under Macfadden program leaders a chance to show what they have learned. And to give other youngsters, who are more or less novices at the game, an equal chance to meet with other contestants.

Gold medals, properly engraved, will be awarded winners in each weight class in the state finals.

This tournament is only a portion of the vast Macfadden Youth Project being carried out in the state through American Legion auspices. There are 40 towns over Alabama where regular programs are held under trained leaders.

All information pertaining to the boxing tournament is in the hands of local American Legion post officials and all boxers interested in entering the event can obtain blanks and date at the nearest American Legion post.

Miss June Reid, who has been teaching in Sheffield is home for the summer. She has had as her house guest, Miss Sara Jo Harvell, of Jasper.

A Statement From the Publisher of The Montevallo Times

(EDITORIAL)

In assuming the ownership, management and operation of The Montevallo Times this week, I wish to say to the people of Montevallo and surrounding communities that I am happy at the opportunity to serve you in the many ways I hope will be afforded me through the facilities of a good weekly newspaper and printing plant.

From an experience of more than twenty-five years in the country newspaper field, I believe I have a right to claim some knowledge of how to conduct such a business as The Montevallo Times. It is not a new adventure for me. My experience has taught me many things that should be done and can be done by a newspaper as a constructive and progressive agency in the community.

Likewise, I have learned by experience many things that should not be done or attempted by a newspaper that would be the exponent of community progress and civic righteousness in a community.

To enumerate these things would take much space. I will mention only one; and I choose to mention that one because in so doing I will doubtless answer the one question that will be asked first by most people:

My conduct of the policies of the Montevallo Times will be without the color of politics. I want to make this newspaper an institution devoted to and capable of properly and fully serving you as a constructive community institution. To do so I shall not be handicapped and shackled by political alignments.

If you are interested in politics, that is all right with me. We shall have no arguments about that. But, regardless of politics, every citizen should be ready and willing and able to render his just portion of faithfulness and devotion to the interests of his community.

I hope to make the best newspaper this community is capable of supporting. To me, and to you people of Montevallo, I want it to be the greatest and best newspaper in the world. That is purely a spirit of community pride—the same spirit in which I believe every citizen and business man and institution should want his business and his community to be the best.

Mechanical facilities of the printing plant of The Montevallo Times will be expanded and improved as rapidly as possible. A competent, efficient and experienced personnel will be maintained to carry out my policies and to serve you.

We want to publish the news of the town of Montevallo and surrounding communities. We want to take our part in the social, civic, educational and religious life of the community. We come here prepared to take such a part in these things as is the duty of any and all citizens and community institutions.

We know that if we would expect you to sustain us in our efforts, we must first prove to you that we are willing and able to do our part. From here as a beginning we set out confident and determined that we shall convince you of the sincerity of our purposes, and our honest desire to be a constructive community force.

The location of The Montevallo Times will remain the same. The telephone number is the same. We will call to see you in person as soon as we can. We will be busy for a time. Meanwhile come to see us. Tell us what we can do for you and for Montevallo. Tell us anything you want printed in the paper. Help us make The Times a paper worthy of the town and the people of Montevallo. It is your paper, your own institution, dedicated to the interests of your community.

Yours to serve for the best for Montevallo.

W. M. WYATT,
Publisher.

"Fear" Is Subject For Rev. A. J. Cox

Fear is a figment of the imagination that is not stayed on God. A major portion of our fellowmen spend most of their life in the grip of fear. I look back on childhood fears, of clutching hands as I ran up the stairs in the evening, of being alone in the dark, and I know that if I had been given a sense of the reality of God I should have been freed from them. As I grew I thought of the agonies of inferiority that I endured, fear of public opinion, the longing to be understood, fear of earthly insecurity and failure, of lonliness, of illness and death, fear of the unknown (yet desiring to venture into it), fear of traits in my own character of pride and jealousy and self-will, the fear of what might happen to those I loved. All this because self was at the center of my life and, knowing the unreliability of that self, I trembled.

One by one, during those years in which one learns to know God, these fears are taken away. Unhappiness and suffering teach a person to understand and love others. Fear of public opinion, the longing to be understood, matters little in the light of God's all-comprehending love. Fear of earthly insecurity and failure disappears as one lives in the will of God following His plan for his life; knowing that, whatever happens, His purpose in him and through him is being fulfilled. Dread of loneliness and old age without home and family fades out of the picture. We find that God gives us spiritual children and although, at times, there is human loneliness, the desolate feeling of utter 'aloneness' is lost in the abiding love and companionship of the living Christ. Fear of the unknown is lost in the love of the known God. Inferiority and pride, jealousy and self-will are given to Him, and in His strength we are victorious over them.

For my part, I am glad that worldly possessions are not in abundance, and the fear of this or that thing is taken away, for, thereby, I learn to have utter dependence upon God. Every time a fear is discarded, one discovers afresh that God still lives and that "there is no death; we are all one in Christ." I know, too, that there is no LIFE unless we are all one in Christ.

THE AMERICAN GIRL IS NOW ON NEWS STANDS

The American Girl magazine, published by the Girl Scouts for all girls, will go on the news-stands starting May 29 in New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, it has been announced at Girl Scout headquarters in New York City.

The American Girl is the only national magazine of its kind in the United States, and it is edited to suit the taste of any girl with a normal interest in romance, adventure, good looks, good manners, fashions and possible jobs.

The decision to go on the news-stands was made by the management of The American Girl in response to a general demand. If the venture in this limited area proves successful, it will expand to other states.

F. D. R. PLEDGE IS PLAN IN SELMA

Selma, Ala.—A Selma Retail Merchants Association, pledged to give public notice it is standing squarely behind President Roosevelt and his NRA policies, was decided upon at a meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms here Monday, and will be formally organized later in the week. Pending notice of election of officers, Secretary H .H .Farsier, of the Chamber of Commerce, was instructed to have a pledge printed and circulated among merchants of the downtown district.

After the meeting 56 of the leading merchants and firms of the city signed a statement to be issued in advance of action by the association, reading as follows:

"We believe the principles contained in the New Deal are sound, and we do not contemplate any change in wages, hours or number of employes. We respectfully urge all employers of labor in Selma to look upward and not backward and to continue on the principle of shorter hours and higher wages, with a conduct of sound ethics toward competitors.

Mrs. William Balch, of Courtland, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Mahaffey, Sr.

Popular Couple Married Saturday

A delightful event of Saturday morning, June 1st, at 7:30 o'clock, was the marriage of Miss Mary Augusta Rogan and Mrs. James Robert Simpson, which was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Rogan, of Montevallo.

The Rev. Augustus J. Cox, of the Presbyterian Church, officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in mar[illegible]y her father. She was attired in a lovely blue georgette suit. The groom's best man was Mr. Bruce Rogan. Other friends and relatives who were present were Mrs. F. W. Rogan, Mrs. Nora Reynolds, Miss Georgia Leeper, Mrs. W. B. Reynolds, Mrs. Alice Craig, Mrs. A. J. Cox, Mrs. J. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Reynolds and Elnora, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rogan and Julia and Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Moncrief of Birmingham.

An all time record for purchases of supplies and materials for Ford V-8 production is reported by Ford Motor Company officials for March when the cost of supplies totaled $18,000,000, according to Towery Motor Company, local Ford dealer.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O| Sims of Birmingham are visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Starr.

A STATEMENT FROM MRS. OLIVE HARRISON

As I relinquish my interest in The Montevallo Times to Mr. W. M. Wyatt, I want to express my hearty appreciation for the friendship and good will that has been shown me by the people of Montevallo and surrounding communities during my residence here. You have been good to me in many more ways than I am able to enumerate here. I shall ever cherish the friendships I have made in Montevallo, and shall never cease to appreciate the kindness and support that I have enjoyed from you.

I hope you will continue to give The Montevallo Times your support and influence. I believe the new publisher and owner is capable of making The Times the kind of a newspaper you and the community will appreciate, and the kind of a paper I had hoped to make when I came here.

But for the failure of my health I never would have sold the paper, as I love Montevallo and her people, and am sorry it became necessary for me to go away from you.

Best wishes to all of you always.

Sincerely,
Mrs. OLIVE HARRISON.

WHEN LIVES ARE AT STAKE

You need the same tire protection that race drivers demand

KELLY PETILLO ON MAY 30, WON THE 500-MILE Indianapolis Race on Firestone Tires, breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.240 miles per hour.

This record is an astounding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY DEMONSTRATED THE stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah, 3000 miles in 23½ hours. This was an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, and although temperatures were as high as 120°, he had no blowouts or tire trouble of any kind.

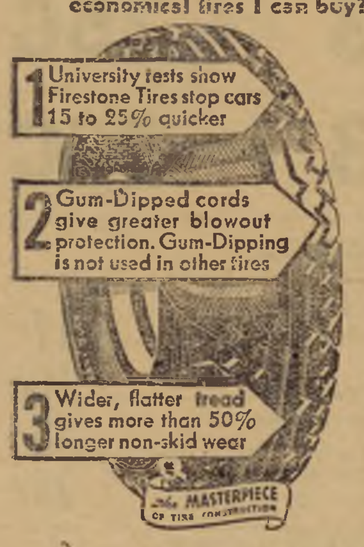
Take no chances—protect your life and the lives of others by letting us equip your car with Firestone Tires.

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"	Answer No. 1—University tests show Firestone Tires stop your car 15% quicker than best tires.
2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"	Answer No. 2—Unequaled performance records prove that Gum-Dipping gives the greatest blowout protection known.
3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"	Answer No. 3—Car owners report unequaled mileage records of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone Tires.



1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker
2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear

CHANGES URGED IN BANKING BILL

AMENDMENTS ARE SUGGESTED

Political Domination of Federal Reserve Board Declared to Be Undesirable for Depositors as Well as Their Banks.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Business men and bankers alike who have appeared before committees of Congress to present views regarding the Banking Act of 1935 have found common cause for criticism in those provisions which they agree would create the means for undesirable political control over the Federal Reserve System and thereby over individual banks throughout the United States. They have made the point that this undesirable condition would affect depositors in banks even more than the banks themselves.

This view has been stressed in criticisms by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and the question of partisan control over banking was the central theme of a statement presented by R. S. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, who appeared before the Senate Sub-Committee on Banking and Currency hearings here. Mr. Hecht declared that his organization is actuated by a desire to be helpful to Congress "in enacting effective and workable banking legislation in the interests of all our people." He said in part:

"If it is finally decided that it is necessary to carry this legislation through at this session, we are strongly of the opinion that special care should be taken to keep our credit control and banking mechanism free from any sort of political considerations.

"In making this statement I do not wish to appear to question the propriety of the Government's exerting a certain amount of control over banking operations so far as they affect the nation's currency and general monetary policy. Nor do we object to broad powers of supervision over the operation of our banking institutions because of the semi-public responsibilities they carry. But when it comes to such matters as the granting of credit and the making of investments by our banks, these are questions of business policies that surely should not be under the sole control of a board so constituted as to be dependent upon partisan or political considerations under any administration.

The Basis of Sound Credit

"The real conditions that create the necessity for the expansion or contraction of credit arise from the needs of agriculture, industry and trade themselves, wholly independent of the administrative policies of the party which happens to be in power. We feel that the financial requirements of the nation's business constitute a continuing economic process that is not related to political changes. The fundamental principles of sound credit do not vary with variations in public thought. All experience teaches that the quality of credit is sound only so long as it is based purely on the requirements of sound business. It is not sound when any other considerations or motives enter into its composition.

The Banking Act would centralize in the Federal Reserve Board at Washington means aimed to control the supply of money in the country, which term includes the sum total of currency in circulation and demand deposits in the banks which become current through checks. The powers which it is proposed to give the Board are intended to enable it to influence the quantity of this deposit money through open market operations, the discount rate and reserve requirements.

The Need for Independence

"That is the reason why we are so strongly in favor of making the Federal Reserve Board a body of such independence and prestige that it would be definitely removed from all political thought, influence and dictation. Its members should be free to study and to act in accordance with the needs and

Game And Fish News

Montgomery, Ala. — This is the season of the year, the state department of game and fisheries cautions when many people are poisoned by coming in contact with poison ivy, poison sumac and poison oak while on outdoor excursions.

The department is particularly anxious for fishermen, who frequent the banks of fresh water streams, to keep this in mind and take precautions against these skin irritations.

As an aid to anglers, picnickers and others making outdoor trips this summer, it suggests that they equip themselves with lotions or other medicines which may be locally applied at the time of contact. Among those suggested are the Calamine, Saola and Poison Ivy lotions which may be obtained at any drug store.

These are recommended where the infection is slight and may be treated in its early stages. For the more serious cases a poison ivy serum is available and if given before the poison has an opportunity to spread, its healing powers usually are very effective.

In addition to these medical remedies, the department urges all outdoorsmen to remember:

"Berries red, have no dread!
Leaves three, quickly flee!!"

spect to size and uniformity of arrangement of subject matter.

Detailed recommendations for this end were formulated by the association about ten years ago, the bulletin says, and promulgated by the United States Department of Commerce among banks, business houses using large numbers of checks, commercial stationers and lithographers. As a result about 85 per cent adherence to the recommendations was brought about. The present bulletin, which describes the standard specifications in full, is issued to maintain this high level of adherence to the recommendations.

National Bank Notes

Changes in our money on the scale of about $800,000,000 are now going on through the retirement of national bank notes. This is reflected in increasing deposits in the Treasury of lawful money to replace bonds held against outstanding notes which will require some time for withdrawal from circulation.

The change in the currency will require a considerable shift of bank funds in many cases, but it is doubtful if so large a volume of currency has ever been retired and replaced in any country with so little disturbance.

Pleased With Policy of Passing Rate Cuts to Customers

Mrs. C. G. Hume Tells Why Additional Reductions to Mean Greater Use of Electrical Appliances

Writing recently to Alabama Power Company, Mrs. C. G. Hume, prominent Montgomery homemaker said:

"From news items recently carried in our local papers, I understand that you have passed on to your residential customers another substantial rate reduction.

"I have been a user of electric service from your good Company over a long period and naturally I have watched with much interest your well established policy of passing on to your customers periodical rate reductions whenever conditions appear to make such action possible.

"Of course I am much pleased whenever I am able to get an already satisfactory and reasonably priced service at a lesser cost, hence this letter of appreciation.

"It has long been my thought that your rates were reasonable and fair and now with this additional reduction it seems to me that every housewife able to purchase the appliances would insist on having the comfort and convenience of an electrically equipped home.

"In closing permit me to commend you for your courteous, dependable low cost service." Adv. Alabama Power Co.

V-8 FORD MOTORS ARE USED IN RACING CARS

The first of ten fast racing cars, powered by Ford V-8 engines, built under the direction of Harry Miller, veteran racing car builder, has been shipped to Indianapolis for tests preliminary to entry in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Decoration Day. The entries are sponsored by a group of Ford dealers.

The trials, under the watchful eye of Mr. Miller, will guide the builders in the last-minute refinements of the fleet of racing cars. The other nine cars are expected to be ready before the elimination trials close May 28.

The Ford V-8 specials will be piloted in the big race by a crew of crack drivers. Five were announced today. They include Pete de Paolo of Hollywood, twice national champion and winner of the blue ribbon event at Indianapolis in 1925. Also listed are Dave Evans, Dallas, credited with more endurance and speed records than any other driver, and who recently recaptured for the United States the diesel engine speed record at Daytona Beach, Fla.; Bill Winn, Kansas City, eastern Hankinson Speedway champion last year; Cliff Bergere, Los Angeles, who has started in the last seven Indianapolis grinds and finished six times in the money, and Ted Horn, Los Angeles, coast star who broke an assortment of the best eastern track records last year.

The ten racing cars were developed by Miller around the Ford V-8 engine and will reveal when ready for the track a number of outstanding engineering developments.

In conformance with Miller engineering, the cars are of the front-drive type and are expected to be fully equal to the rigorous qualification conditions at Indianapolis, where it is expected, average speeds of 116 miles an hour or better will be necessary for qualification.

Appearing from above like a "flying red squirrel" the cars are fully streamlined, even the axles and the spring action being "booted." The bodies are finished smoothly, not a bolt or nut obstructing free air flow.

Registration Is 550 For the Week

Complete figures on registration up until Tuesday night were given out by business manager Earl McBee.

There were 457 full time registrations, 16 week end registrations, 25 over night registration, and approximately 52 on the Assembly staff. This makes a total registration for the week of 550. These figures do not include a large number of visitors who were on the Assembly campus Sunday.

According to these figures, this Assembly is the largest since the 1928 gathering.

DECATUR BOY IS NAMED PRESIDENT OF ASSEMBLY

Frank Philpot, Decatur, was named President of the North Alabama Conference Young People's Assembly Tuesday afternoon in the call business session in Palmer Hall.

The entire list of recommendations by the nominating committee was adopted by the conference and the nominees which were submitted by the committee were elected.

Other officers elected are: Vice President, Chris Nichols, Birmingham; Secretary, Marguerite Carlton, Montevallo; Assistant Treasurer, Frances Lee, Hartselle; Publicity Agent, W. E. Hollingsworth, Jacksonville.

The committee also recommended that the student-governing board be appointed by the executive council. The committee congratulated the conference on the absence of politics in this year's Assembly.

More than 25,000,000 pounds of cotton will be used in manufacturing the tires for the 'million and more' Ford cars and trucks being produced this year, according to Towery Motor, local Ford dealer. Every 1935 Ford V-8 sedan that leaves the production line and goes out into service takes with it more than 70 pounds of cotton, Mr. Towery says.

During March railroad freight movement through the frieght yards of the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company required 34,955 freight cars, according to Towery Motor Company, local Ford dealer. This was 11 per cent greater than the previous all-time record, set in February of this year, when 31,500 freight cars moved through the Rouge yards, he says.

There are now some 2,400 workers employed at the Ford Motor Company branch plant at Richmond, California, turning out between 300 and 400 Ford V-8 cars and trucks daily, according to Towery Motor Co., local Ford dealer.

Mrs. Cary Mahan and daughter Martha, have returned from a visit with her parents in Rome, Ga.

TO FOIL BANK CROOKS

NEW YORK.—The American Bankers Association Protective Committee has developed a plan of bank inspection to bring out exposure hazards or weak spots in respect to attacks by criminals based on its long-established, nation-wide experience in investigating bank burglaries, holdups and sneak thefts.

The inspection covers eighty leading questions and seventeen recommendations which are instructive in the prevention of such crimes. These relate to such subjects as the use of alarms and other protective equipment, also the condition of windows, doors, skylights and other entrances which have facilitated the early morning entry of bandits who kidnap bank employees from their homes during the night, or break into the bank premises and bind and gag the employees.

BANKERS HELP

"Save the Land and You Save the Man" is the essence of a suggested agricultural program recommended by the Arkansas Bankers Agricultural Committee. "Beware of impoverished soil. It leads to impoverished homes," says a statement sent to the banks to be distributed to their farmer customers. "To help nature save the land, build up the soil, by:

a. Stopping soil erosion.
b. Planting legumes.
c. Raising livestock.
d. Developing pastures.

"Look ahead with confidence—know what you are doing, therefore:

1. Draw up a farm inventory.
2. Keep a record, daily or weekly.
3. Budget expense, and keep within it."

CONCLAVE PLANS PRESS PROGRAM AT COLLEGE

Annual Meeting of Alabama Writers Attracting Wide Interest Over State

A program of the Alabama Writers Conclave which is creating wide interest over the state, as evidenced by the letters which have been received by the conclave's dean of journalism, Mrs. Conrad Ohme, is the press program which will be given June 20th at 9:30 a.m., at Alabama College, where the conclave meets for a four-day session.

This is the thirteenth meeting of the conclave, which holds sessions yearly, and many fine programs have been given with the sessions well attended, not only by Alabamians who are interested in literary work, but by writers from adjoining states, according to Mrs. Ohme, who recalls The Birmingham News, Birmingham Post, Mobile Register, Montgomery Advertiser, Florence, Auburn, Eufaula, Scottsboro, Clayton, and other papers over the state have sent staff writers to the conclave to appear on programs. The Atlanta Journal and the Constitution have also contributed talented writers.

"But at no time have we had a program with more talented writers giving their services than this year," says Mrs. Ohme.

Vincent Townsend, city editor of The Birmingham News, professor of journalism at Birmingham - Southern College, will talk on "Journalism."

Miss Lily May Caldwell, a staff member of The News and Age-Herald, well known columnist and feature writer, will speak on "Interviewing."

Osborn Zuber, associate editor of The Birmingham News, will discuss "Editorial Writing." His editorials have won wide recognition. Last year he receivevd the Pulitzer prize honorable mention for his editorial, "Why We Still Have Lynchings in the South."

Charles Fell, managing editor of The Birmingham News and The Birmingham Age-Herald, will have as his subject, "The Management of a Daily."

Mrs. Ohme will preside and present the speakers on this program. It will be recalled that Mrs. Ohme was the first editor of the Alabama Clubwoman, which was at that time called The Bulletin, and it was largely through her efforts that the magazine came into being.

"An erroneous opinion about who may attend the sessessions of the conclave, still seems to prevail, even after all these years of conclave meetings," says Mrs. Ohme, "and it should be made clear that anyone who is interested in literary work may attend. Many clubwomen, educators, musicians and artists come each year to these meetings and all are welcome."

Mr. Clarence Spivey, who has been connected with the Montevallo Cash Store in its market, has been transferred to Siluria Cash Store. Mr. Cecil Shaw has taken the place of Mr. Spivey in the Montevallo store.

SUMMER SCHOOL HAS LARGE ENROLLMENT

Classes of the first term of summer school at Alabama College began Tuesday morning, when E. H. Wills, Registrar, announced that the enrollment was the largest in five years. Classes will meet five days each week during the first term of six weeks, which ends July 22. Of wide interest is the Progressive Education program, which is being conducted here on both the elementary and high school levels this summer. It has already attracted a number of students and visitors from several other Southern states.

BUSINESS NOT AFFECTED BY THE NRA BEING OUT

The nation's business was carried forward during the past week by a strong undercurrent. Retail trade improved in some areas as weather favored. More indicators of industrial production showed further recession, due to the seasonal trend, and in part perhaps to the disturbance of lifting the NRA codes.

Nevertheless, most authorities agree that business activity had been very slightly affected by tht collapse of the codes. The department of commerce's survey of weekly reports from 33 cities said, "The Supreme Court's decision on NRA has so far produced no change of great consequence in actual trade activities throughout the country."

Cotton and woolen mill activities continued at a good pace and rayon seemed scarcely affected. Automobile production was stepped up sharply last week. Production was 87,855 cars and trucks, compared with 65,675 for the previous week, and 69,107 for the like week of last year.

LAW WILL CHANGE ABSENTEE VOTING

Will Lessen Chances of Fraud In Law Intended For Good

Montgomery, June 11—Senator Chestnut's absentee voting revision which has passed the senate and is now before the house appears to be a practical and a sensible handling of a subject which has been giving trouble in nearly every county of the state. It is charged that under our absentee law a man who has been living in Paris for twenty years has voted an absentee ballot in every election held in Alabama during that time—or rather someone votes it for him.

An absentee voting law is for the benefit of resident bona fide citizens who are unavoidably compelled to be away from their homes on election day. Mr. Chestnut's bill provides that the voter who cannot be at home election day can go to the probate office personally any time 20 days before the election, get his ballot and cast it in person. That will do away with the accumulation of bunches of such absentee ballots and casting them in the interest of individual candidates. Mailed ballots which have to pass through so many hands are too subject to manipulation.

Alabama Road Funds Are Ready

Forty - One Projects To Be Carried Out With Federal Money

Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace today had apportioned $4,151,115 for highway construction and $4,034,617 for grade crossing elimination projects in Alabama out of a total of $400,000,000 allocated throughout nation.

The funds will not be available for expenditure in any state until a program of the proposed projects has been submitted by the State Highway Department and approved by the advisory committee on allotments.

The largest of the grade separation projects is a $750,000 viaduct to be built in N. Birmingham over 26th and 27th Streets, to eliminate traffic hazards at five railroads—the Southern, Frisco, L. & N., Birmingham Belt and Illinois Central.

A total of 41 projects for other grade separations are allocated over the state. One is the straightening and widening of the road over Shades Mountain on the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, which will cost $1,000,000.

Montevallo Expects Action of Authorities on Street Extension

People of Montevallo await anxiously and patiently the action of higher authorities upon the project recently outlined and approved to open up an extension of Middle Street eastward to connect with the Calera Highway near the old cotton mill site.

The street has been surveyed, the estimate made by the State Highway Department, and it understood that all requirements have been met in order to have this approved as a state and federal project.

The municipal authorities of Montevallo have complied with the requirements placed upon them in securing right of way. About $1,600 was spent by the town, assisted by the County Board of Revenue, in paying for the right of way.

The extension of the street as proposed crosses the creek on the eastern edge of town, at which point the plans provide for construction of a 600-foot bridge.

Montevallo needs this improvement. The people want it. The town officials are to be commended for their action in complying with requirements placed upon the community to get it.

What the citizens want to hear now is the announcement from somebody in authority up the line that everything is O. K. and that the job will start.

Prof. J. Alex Moore, of Dry Valley, was a visitor in Montevallo Wednesday.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HERE IS NOW ACTIVE

Twelve volunteer members of the Montevallo Fire Department are on guard constantly for the protection of property from damage and destruction by fire. At a moment's notice they are ever ready to mount the city engine and spring into action.

The fire department was reorganized about two months ago, with City Clerk and Marshal, C. M. Gardner, as chief and S. M. Mahan, council member as assistant chief.

Drills are held at regular intervals by the boys in order to keep themselves in practice. Wednesday night a big bonfire was set off down in the edge of town without knowledge of the fire department members. The alarm was given, and they rushed to the scene and had the fire extinguished before they found out it was only make-believe.

Montevallo should give its hearty support to the fire department. It is one of the most deserving efforts in the community. It means the saving of many dollars in the course of time.

JUDGE EDWARD S. LYMAN

While he was not personally known to the writer, I fell that it is but a fitting and proper duty that The Montevallo Times should devote its best efforts toward a proper tribute to the life, character and usefulness of Judge Edward S. Lyman, who came to the end of his earthly career among us a few days past.

One did not have to know him personally to have gained knowledge of his beautiful life and his lasting impress upon public affairs. He was a man of such integrity, such usefulness, such broad ideals as made him known to many people throughout Alabama who never had the pleasure of his personal acquaintance.

Dr. A. Burton Moore, professor of History at the University of Alabama, in his "History of Alabama and Her People," has most fittingly summarized the work, the life, the usefulness, and the accomplishments of Judge Lyman in these words:

"It has been proven conclusively upon many occasions that the elements in a man's character, that are of paramount importance are those which make him of the greatest worth to his community. It is impossible to measure a man's worth by his individual accomplishments, for it is only by gauging him according to the influence he exerts and the force he wields in assisting the wheels of progress forward that a fair and equitable conclusion can be reached. This is more true in those communities in which each man is known to his neighbors, and his efforts meet with appreciative recognition. One of the men who has been identified with the life of Montevallo throughout a long and useful career, and who has been influential in many movements which have served to make for progress and advancement is Hon. Edward S. Lyman."

Dr. Moore's history recites the sweeping picture of Judge Lyman's career from a boy in the public schools of Montevallo to his place of deserved prominence in the community life of his native town and his widely known service as a citizen and leader of his State.

It appears, therefore, to one who has seen Montevallo and Judge Lyman from the perspective only in the past, that of his death we may and should say in truth that Montevallo expresses farewell to the one man who has for the present generation occupied worthily and honorably the place as Montevallo's first citizen.

The fine deeds of his life, the good traits of his character, the everlasting things he builded for us, shall remain ours to admire, and to emulate.

THE ROADS TO MONTEVALLO

As a natural result of considerable going and coming in and out of Montevallo during the past month, the editor of the Montevallo Times has gained an impression of the importance of the trunk roads leading into the city. Furthermore, the impression has revealed the fact that such trunk roads connecting us with other points of importance are not in very attractive condition.

The highway from Montevallo to Calera, connecting with the paved Birmingham-Montgomery Highway, is far short of what it ought to be for the comfort and convenience of the thousands who travel it. This link of highway to Calera should by all means be paved and made as good as any piece of road in Alabama.

We learn that there are plans to begin soon for putting hard surface on the Calera Highway. The need is apparent. It should be done. We hope it is true that the project is to be included in the state's immediate paving program.

We are delighted to learn that plans under way in Chilton County contemplate putting that county's portion of the Montevallo cut-off in first-class condition. Already the road bed is being widened and graded, and supervisor, Mr. Willie Shaw, says the plans of Commissioner John Bean are to gravel the road as quickly as it can be properly graded. This road leaves the paved highway at Mount Moriah, and leads into Montevallo at a considerable saving of miles to travelers who come that way, rather than going around by Calera. Shelby County has a few miles of the important Montevallo cut-off, and it would be gratifying news to learn that Shelby will join with Chilton in improving this road.

The roads to Montevallo are one of the community's most inportant interests. This newspaper hopes that the highway to Calera may be given the proper consideration for paving in the State's program.

BABSON SEES BIGGER BOOM YET

A most encouraging feature of the future business outlook of the United States is contained in a forecast released by Roger W. Babson, recognized statistician, and released in press dispatches of last Sunday. In the statement Mr. Babson said:

"I believe we may be approaching one of the biggest booms in American history. I am optimistic for the next few years, owing to the general potential markets which exist to-day."

Continuing his predictions for the future, the statement of this eminent authority upon American and World business statistics and forecasts said:

"In view of the recent Supreme Court decision on the NRA, the Frazier-Lemke Act, and other matters, I believe we are definitely headed into a period of either credit or monetary inflation. Although the Supreme Court has headed off the administration in some of its most important New Deal experiments, yet these decisions do not change the desire of the American people for the short cut to prosperity.

"These decisions may even result in the president relaxing his firm attitude against currency inflation. He may turn to it as his only method of quickly bringing back good times. Producing prosperity by currency inflation, however, is like showing a good bank statement by falsifying the books.

"One the other hand, if the President takes his cue from the court and swings toward the right, he may create enough confidence among business men to get credit inflation under way. Hence, I believe we may be approaching one of the biggest booms in American history, although, eventually, we must face the day of reckoning. I am optimistic for the next few years, however, owing to the great potential markets which exist to-day."

President Suggests Amendment of Constitution but Asks Stop-Gap Legislation to Permit Continuance of the New Deal Program.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has created a major issue for the campaign of 1936 and stirred up widespread debate and controversy over a question that the nation had thought was settled in its early days. Furthermore, it is likely he has started the movement for a complete re-alignment of political forces into what will be virtually two new parties. Briefly, he proposes that the Constitution be changed to take from the states and give to the federal government power over the chief social and economic questions so that the New Deal may be saved from the doom pronounced upon it by the Supreme court.

Bainbridge Colby

In the course of a two hour talk with the Washington correspondents the President sent up a trial balloon on the plan he had conceived for remodeling the government to fit his program, declaring that he favored curtailing the sovereignty of the states and giving the central government full control over agriculture, industry, commerce and all other occupations and enterprises. He said this question of amending or re-writing the Constitution must be settled by a vote of the people. In some ways, he said, the Supreme court decision was the best thing that could have happened to the country because it clarified the issue as he presented it. The issue must be met by moving one way or the other, he said, back to the 13 states or forward to the modern interpretation.

We are the only country in the world which has not solved this problem, Mr. Roosevelt said. We thought we were solving it, but now it is thrown right back in our faces. We are relegated to the "horse and buggy" interpretation of the interstate commerce clause.

That many prominent Democrats will be alienated from their support of Mr. Roosevelt by this pronouncement is certain. Already there has been launched a movement for those of the party who seek "a return to constitutional government" to unite with the Republicans who are of like mind. Its leaders are Bainbridge Colby, who was secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet, and Chief Justice William R. Pattangall of the Massachusetts Supreme court.

Mr. Colby has written to a number of Democratic leaders of national repute proposing they meet in a southern city, preferably Richmond, "to consider some form of political action that is for our country and above party."

In a letter to a friend in Washington it was revealed that Chief Justice Pattangall had decided to resign in order to join with other Jeffersonian Democrats to bring about a coalition with Republicans and the restoration of "constitutional government" to replace the New Deal.

HAVING startled the country by his proposition for changing the basic law, Mr. Roosevelt turned his attention to speedy legislation that might salvage part of the NRA, considering, it was authoritatively said, that amendment of the Constitution was not a matter of the immediate future. He asked congress to pass the Clark resolution in modified form extending the NRA until April 1, 1936, with the understanding that it would be a skeleton organization to collect and classify data but without power to enforce wages, hours or fair trade practices upon industry, except in the case of work done for the government. This was agreeable to both the senate and the house majorities. The President said there would be no attempt to circumvent the Supreme court decision or to persuade business men to enter into voluntary code agreements.

Attorney General Cummings, Solicitor General Reed, Felix Frankfurter and others were studying numerous proposals for substitutes for the NRA, but Secretary Early of the White House staff said none of the suggestions had met the requirements. Secretary of Labor Perkins had a plan for using the government's taxing powers as a means toward interstate regulation. Senators Nye and King introduced in the senate a bill to expand the powers of the federal trade commission. And there were many other propositions, but none of them seemed adequate.

CONGRESS, it now appears, will be in session until September, for the President handed to the leaders a "must" program of legislation that will keep the law makers busy for a long time. Here is the list:

1. Social security bill.
2. Omnibus banking bill.
3. Holding company bill.
4. Wagner labor relations bill, and Guffey coal regulations bill.
5. Tennessee valley bill.
6. Bankhead cotton act extension.
7. AAA amendments.
8. Tax extension bill.
9. Temporary NRA extension.
10. NRA government contract requirements.
11. Federal alcohol control legislation.
12. Federal oil control legislation.
13. Central statistical board set up.
14. Electrical farm and home authority set up.

The holding company measure has been resisted firmly in committee by two Democrats, Pettingill of Indiana and Huddleston of Alabama. In a senate debate it was vigorously attacked by Dieterich of Illinois, Democrat, and Hastings of Delaware, Republican, as an unconstitutional scheme to destroy the government's competitors in the power business. Mr. Dieterich said it was his honest conviction that the measure would destroy all private ownership of public utilities in the country, together with the millions upon millions of dollars invested in them by private citizens.

Thomas N. McCarter

This measure was naturally the chief topic of discussion at the annual convention of the Edison Electric Institute at Atlantic City. President Thomas N. McCarter told the assemblage that the privately owned power industry must fight for its life against the administration's "most devastating and destructive attack." He told of presenting "in person" to the President "a dignified memorial" setting forth "facts that seemed to the trustees to threaten the existence of this industry and appealed to the government for a get-together policy for the elimination of whatever abuses and wrongs might be found to exist," but said he got nowhere.

TEMPORARILY the work-relief program was halted when the officials found that the projects were too costly, and they set about hunting up projects that would provide maximum work at minimum cost, so that the promise to employ 3,500,000 persons can be carried out. Meanwhile approval of all applications was held up.

They have an average of $1,100 per man to spend. Yet the $1,000,000,000 in projects already planned will cost approximately $2,000 for every person taken off relief rolls and kept on government pay rolls until July 1, 1936.

To reduce the average, Mr. Roosevelt instructed Progress Director Harry L. Hopkins to search the country for local, quick work where material costs will be low with almost all the money going for labor and wages.

The plan of enlarging the Civilian Conservation corps from 300,000 to 600,000 was in process of revision because it was believed the additional men could not be enrolled if the present eighteen to twenty-five-year-old age limit were retained. The probability was the age limit would be raised to thirty years.

SOLELY on account of ill health, Ramsay MacDonald has retired as prime minister of Great Britain and gone to Lossiemouth, his home in Scotland, for a good rest. His successor as head of the national cabinet is Stanley Baldwin, the veteran leader of Conservatives who has been serving as lord president of the council and in reality has been a deputy prime minister since the national government was formed seven years ago. Mr. MacDonald exchanges places with him, thus remaining in the cabinet but without departmental duties. The date of his last cabinet meeting as prime minister was the sixth anniversary of his assumption of the office for the second time. With the exception of H. H. Asquith he has held the office continuously for the longest period in modern times.

Stanley Baldwin

Of the other changes in the cabinet the most important was the transfer of Sir John Simon from the foreign office to the home office. He is succeeded in the former by Sir Samuel Hoare, who has been chief secretary for India. Mr. MacDonald's son Malcolm, only thirty-four years old, was made colonial secretary.

BOUISSON'S French cabinet having fallen almost immediately, President Lebrun had great difficulty finding another premier. Pierre Laval, former foreign minister, finally undertook to form a new government and to "save the franc." He kept the foreign ministry post himself, and put Marcel Regnier in as minister of finance.

WITHOUT any special ceremony the Supreme court, at the end of its spring session, for the last time walked out of the old senate chamber which it has occupied as a courtroom since 1859. When the court reconvenes next October after its summer recess it will be housed in the magnificent new $10,000,000 marble building just east of the Capitol.

CHAIRMAN JESSE H. JONES announced that in the future the RFC will file with the interstate commission, if necessary, its own reorganization plans for railroads in financial difficulties and in which it holds a financial interest.

At the same time Mr. Jones announced a plan whereby the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railroad would be organized with the aid of a $24,000,000 government loan. A four-point program was worked out in conferences between Mr. Jones and H. A. Scandrett, president of the road, and will be filed for court approval.

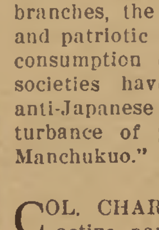
Notice of the intention of the RFC to force reorganization plans has been given in letters to the Denver & Rio Grande Western, and the Western Pacific.

WITHOUT discussion and without a record vote the house passed the Wilcox bill calling for the construction of seven powerful army air bases at a total cost of $110,000,000. The measure specifies the locations as the Atlantic Northeast, the Atlantic Southeast and Caribbean areas, the southeastern states, the Pacific Northwest, Alaska, the Rocky mountain area, and "intermediate stations necessary for transcontinental movements in the maneuvers of the general headquarters air force."

ONE of the most prominent figures in the World war passed from the scene with the death in Essex, England, of Viscount Byng of Vimy. As a young officer of cavalry Byng distinguished himself in campaigns in the Sudan, in South Africa and in India. In the great war he won undying fame by his desperate defense of Ypres when it was attacked by overwhelmingly superior German forces which for the first time used poison gas and flame throwers. He was given a baronetcy for this and other gallant work, and after serving as governor-general of Canada from 1921 to 1926 he was made a viscount and later a field marshal. He was called from retirement in 1928 to become commissioner of London's police force, but ill health forced him to resign this post in 1931.

Another war commander who died was Gen. Alexander von Linsingen, who was at the head of the German southern army after having fought through the earlier campaigns in northern France.

JAPAN'S army, which appears to rule Japan's foreign policy, has decided that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, dictator of China, must retire. This was announced at Tientsin by Col. Takashi Sakai, chief of staff of the Japanese troops in North China. He said:



Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

"Chiang Kai-shek, using his financial and military power under the pretense of uniting China, is actually corrupting and disintegrating North China, which Chiang regards as a colony. Hence the Japanese army now feels that it is the wisest policy to uproot Chiang Kai-shek's influence, especially in North China.

"It is not the communists but Chiang Kai-shek who will put an end to the existence of China. The Japanese army intends to take the necessary measures to compel the Chinese goverment to abolish the Tientsin garrison corps, the Kuomintang political branches, the Blue Shirt secret police and patriotic societies encouraging the consumption of native goods. These societies have been responsible for anti-Japanese sentiment as well as disturbance of peace and order within Manchukuo."

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH'S active participation in the affairs of Transcontinental and Western Air has been terminated at least for the present. Henry B. Dupont, chairman of the board, in making the announcement, denied there had been any disagreement between the famous aviator and the company officials.

"Colonel Lindbergh never has devoted 100 per cent of his time to TWA activities," Mr. Dupont said. "As advisor he drew a retainer for his technical advice. Sometimes he worked several days in succession, sometimes only two or three days a month.

"He has devoted much time to the company, but now has decided to devote the next few months exclusively to his personal affairs, although he will continue to be available in emergencies for consultation. He still is TWA's technical adviser and he will be available if we need him. Probably when his personal affairs are straightened out he may be devoting a lot of time to our problems."

LITTLE George Weyerhaeuser, nine-year-old lumber fortune heir who was kidnaped from Tacoma, is safe at home, but the "snatchers" who held him captive for a week got away with $200,000 ransom money paid by the lad's family. They fled in a fast automobile, and at this writing are still at large, though pursued closely by an army of government agents and other officers.

FLOODS and tornadoes wrought havoc in Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Texas and Kansas—a region that only recently was afflicted by drouth and dust storms. It was thought as many as 250 lives were lost, and great numbers of families were rendered homeless. The worst flood area was in southern Nebraska, where the Republican river was swollen into a raging torrent.

GOD'S INTERRUPTIONS

By Rev. A. J. Cox, B.D.

Have you ever laid plans for a solid day's work, work of value and importance and for which you are responsible, and then, just as you started in to tackle it, been interrupted by something which seemed wilfully calculated to upset those plans? As you sat down to your desk, perhaps, the telephone rang and you were called on for a duty quite outside your plan; the mail brought letters demanding immediate answers; unexpected problems requiring quick decisions arose. But because you had laid your plan and even prayed over it, you skirted the interruptions, pigeon-holed the letters, put off the decisions as best you could, and did your utmost to get on with the original job. You worked away all day, in spite of new interruptions clamouring for your attention, and by the end of the day you were exhausted, because of the conflicting demands and the emotional wear and tear to which you have been subject. When you looked at the result of your efforts you found that the work which you had felt so important was very inadequately done, and the work involved in the interruptions not done at all. And so you spent a restless night, and awoke the next day facing the necessity of beginning all over again, with a new round of fatiguing and rattling interruptions dead ahead.

Or have you ever had the opposite experience: Started the day in the same manner as that described above, with a definite plan; but then, when the telephone rang and the letters and people came, regarded them as God's correctives to the original plan, and shifted your entire program to deal with them? You gave your full attention to these unexpected problems; you were at once relaxed and alert as you made the necessary decisions; you were at your best in dealing with the people involved. It took all day, but it was an exhilarating day, and at the end you had a grateful sense of accomplishment. You enjoyed a full night's sleep, and the next day God somehow made up to you the time He had required the day before. Your original plan turned out to have been really part of His plan, after all; He just knewbetter when you should carry it out. And so the morning was miraculously free of interruptions, and you accomplished the work in half the time you had anticipated, because you were free of conflict, flexible and immediately obedient .

God needs people of the second type people who are instantly mobilizeable in His services; and that is why He hammers at us, invades our lives, interrupts our plans annihilates our rigidity, until we are instantly mobilizeable. If the plans we have made are part of His plan, He will see that we have time for them; but it is His prerogative to dictate the times and the seasons.

It is especially important to see God's hand in interruptions and obstacles at this time, when many of us are planning for the summer. One may feel quite good motives that it is essential to get rest, recreation, change during the summer months; not to "unbuckle the whole armour of God and just relax" as one person confessed to doing; but to have a change for the very sake of doing more effective work upon returning. And so plans are laid; and then God interrupts and make getting away extremely difficult. If the original plan is persisted in, it results in a summer of conflict and dis-ease, because of the lurking suspicion that some other course than God's has been chosen; and upon the return to work there is no real enthusiasm or effectiveness of seeing God's hand in the interruptions, regarding the obstacles as signposts from Him and opportunites for Him, scrapping the original plan and leap into an unfolding, surprising adventure of His making! There is no conflict in that; later; if a change is part of His plan for you. He will give it to you, and it will be a real change which will truly recreate you. He only asks that you trust that He is more far-seeing than you; He only demands that you observe His prerogative if dictating the times and the seasons .

God has no place for the people that will serve Him when it suits them best. He requires soldiers who are instantly mobilizeable in His service. In His army, only the minute-men can serve.

Alabama's the Place To Find Low Rates

"I think Alabama is fortunate in having a forward looking electric utility in it like the Alabama Power Company," writes Mr. Eugene Smith, of Ozark "I have read a lot about low rates in other places, but it seems to me that Alabama is the real place to look for low rates." Adv. Alabama Power Co.

According to G. T. Towery, local, Ford dealer, the 1935 Ford V-8 "double duty" truck combines all the characteristics needed in this era of motor transportation.

"The new Ford truck is efficient ,economical and practical for fast delivery work as well as for heavy hauling," Mr. Towery says.

A PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOR GRAVES

Whereas, the home is of supreme importance as the basis of our community life, constituting, as it does, an essential factor in the health and happiness of both present and future generations; and

Whereas, local Better Housing Programs in all parts of our state are helping citizens to build new homes and to modernize homes which they now own, thus putting men back to work, and contributing in a positive way to industrial and business recovery,

Now, therefore, I, Bibb Graves, Governor of the State of Alabama, do set aside and appoint Saturday, the fifteenth day of June, 1935, to be known as "National Better Housing Day," and I call upon all our citizens to join with citizens of other states throughout the nation in marking the day with appropriate observances, in order that the benefits of the Better Housing Program may be brought to a still greater number of our people.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the state to be affixed at the capitol in the City of Montgomery on this the 5th day of June, 1935.

BIBB GRAVES, Gov.
Attest: Howell Turner.
Secretary of State.

STATE GAME NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., June 12.—The Pennsylvania conservationists whose recent research brought to light a good many of the early game laws failed to mention that Alabama was the first state to pass the now famous "gobbler law" and one of the first to adopt a buck law.

The facts revealed by the research, however, are of great interest to sportsmen, one being that the first game law on record is laid in Duteronomy 22:6, which says:

"If a bird's nest chance to be before thee in the way in any tree, or on the ground, whether they be young ones, or eggs, and the dam sitting upon the young, or upon the eggs, thou shalt not take the dam with the young."

Following are some of the early game laws of this country:

The first closure for a term of years was authorized by Massachusetts in 1718 to protect deer.

The first planting of upland game, not native, was by Richard Bache, son-in-law of Benjamin Franklin . He planted some Hungarian partridges in New Jersey in 1790.

The first warden system was put into effect in Massachusetts and New Hampshire in 1850.

The first hunting license was required in New York in 1864, and the first non-resident license was demanded by New Jersey in the same year.

The first rest day—a day on which there is no shooting permitted—was authorized in Maryland in 1872.

Arkansas was the first state to ban market hunting, passing such a restriction in 1875.

The first game farm was established in 1905 in Illinois and the first bag limit was established by the State of Iowa—25 prairie chickens.

At the beginning of the Revolutionary War 12 of the 13 colonies had laws protecting certain species and banning certain methods and devices.

FORD SALES FOR YEAR ARE LARGEST SINCE 1926

Dearborn, Mich., May 12.—Reflecting what appears to be renewed interest among industrial and mercantile businesses in capital investment in motor transportation, truck and commercial car retail sales by Ford Motor Company dealers in the first four months of the year were reported today to be the largest in volume since 1926.

Sales of both trucks and commercial car units during the first four months were approximately 85 per cent greater than in the same period of 1934.

Truck sales in the first four months totalled 42,380 units, as compared with 22,910 units in the same period of 1934, an increase of more than 84 per cent. Commercial car sales in the same period totalled 30,889 as compared with parallel months last year, a gain of 86 per cent. Total sales of both trucks and commercial cars were 73,269 units as against 39,485 in the same period last year.

Ford truck and commercial car sales in April were 20,102, largest month's volume to be recorded in recent years.

WHOSE WORD WILL YOU TAKE FOR BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

Low wheels, larger tires, and the high speeds of today make blowout protection in your tires vital to your safety as never before. Are you accepting exaggerated and unsupported advertising and sales claims—or are you accepting the judgment of men who risk their lives on their tires and know from experience the tire that gives them the greatest blowout protection?

Thirty-three race drivers and their mechanics lined up for the dangerous, gruelling grind of the 500-Mile Race at the Indianapolis Speedway May 30th. Firestone Tires were purchased and used on every one of the thirty-three cars. Not one of the drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Gum-Dipping is one of the outstanding reasons why Firestone Tires give such amazing performance. By this process every cotton cord is soaked and every strand is insulated with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. Gum-Dipping is a patented extra process not used in any other make of tire.

Protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 15% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequaled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

1 University tests show Firestone Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker

2 Gum-Dipped cords give greater blowout protection. Gum-Dipping is not used in other tires

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear

Supreme Court Kills NRA and Farm Mortgage Moratorium Act—New Dealers, Congress and Business Uncertain About Future Action.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

THREE unanimous decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States shook the New Deal to its very foundations. In the first and most important, read by Chief Justice Hughes, the heart was cut out of the NRA, for the court ruled that the entire code structure of the act was invalid, the code making provisions being an unconstitutional delegation by congress of its authority to legislate to persons not connected with the government's legislative functions. By the ruling the exercise of congressional powers over commerce was definitely restricted to interstate commerce, or to such activities as have a provable direct connection with interstate commerce. The court held that no economic emergency could justify the breaking down of the limitations upon federal authority as prescribed by the Constitution or of those powers reserved to the state through the failure of the Constitution to place them elsewhere.

Chief Justice Hughes

Next in importance was the decision read by Justice Brandeis, holding unconstitutional the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act. This law provided for a five year moratorium in the case of collapse of efforts to scale down a farmer's debts to a figure that would enable him to pay off his mortgage. The court held that under the Fifth amendment to the Constitution private property could not be taken without just compensation. There has been no previous instance, the court said, where a mortgage was forced to relinquish property to a mortgagor free of lien unless the debt was paid in full.

In the third decision President Roosevelt's dismissal of the late William E. Humphrey from the federal trade commission was held illegal because the President did not remove Mr. Humphrey for the statutory grounds of inefficiency, neglect of duty or malfeasance in office, but, as the President stated, because their minds did not meet upon the policies or administration of the commission. The court held that trade commissioners' terms are fixed by law.

THERE was consternation and confusion among the administration forces in Washington, and no one could say immediately just how much the New Deal had been damaged or what could be done to repair the damage to its structure. Donald Richberg, chairman of the national industrial recovery board, after a White House conference, issued a statement saying that "all methods of compulsory enforcement of the codes will be immediately suspended."

The question of the constitutionality of the Wagner labor disputes bill, passed by the senate, was raised by the NRA decision. The opinion was widely expressed that collective bargaining now cannot be enforced in any business enterprise by federal statute.

In the senate demands were voiced to recommit to the committee on agriculture the amendments strengthening the AAA. Senator W. E. Borah said that the NRA decision clearly raises the question of the validity of much AAA procedure.

BUSINESS was as confused as congress and the administration after the killing of NRA. Heads of many large employing corporations intimated they would not make wage reductions or lengthen the work hours just because the way was open for such action, but always there was the qualifying statement, "It depends on what our competitors do." The big concerns would prefer to maintain the code hours and wages, but the smaller merchants and manufacturers, who were hardest hit by the code requirements, might depart from them enough to demoralize prices.

Among the dozens of national trade associations whose officers urged members to maintain wages and otherwise to continue the status quo are those of the automobile manufacturers, automobile dealers, chemical industry, retail dry goods dealers, cotton manufacturers, cement makers, oil industry, wholesale grocers, and grocery chain store distributors.

Harper Sibley, recently elected president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, called upon American industry and business men to preserve for the present wages and work hours established under the NRA.

Instead of cutting wages Standard Oil company of New Jersey and the Tide Water Oil company announced an increase of 5 per cent in salaries and wages, effective June 1.

The United Textile Workers, 350,000 in number, threaten to strike if any mills cut wages. And there is also a chance that 450,000 bituminous coal miners will go on strike because there is no wage agreement with the operators and a scale conference collapsed.

The liquor business was thrown wide open without any federal regulation except that exerted by the Treasury department in the collection of taxes. Officials of the federal alcohol control administration said that the Supreme court's NRA ruling took away from the FACA every iota of control it had over the distilling business.

ACTING with surprising suddenness, the senate passed the Copeland-Tugwell food, drug and cosmetic bill, which had been modified to meet the objections of Senators Clark, Bailey and Vandenberg. Dr. Copeland said he believed it would get through the house without difficulty. President Roosevelt favors the measure.

The bill greatly increases the scope of the 1906 food and drug act, in the definitions of adulterated or misbranded articles, and provides penalties of a year in jail or a $1,000 fine for violations.

It was designed originally to permit the secretary of agriculture to order wholesale seizures, which would permit the destruction of a business, if he deemed the articles in question adulterated. As amended, however, only a single article may be seized pending a court hearing. Exceptions may be made if there is "imminent danger" to public health.

Originally, also, the bill provided severe penalties for publishers and radio broadcasting companies, as well as advertisers, for violations of regulations to be laid down by the Department of Agriculture. This was changed so that no publisher, radio broadcasting company, advertising agency, or other medium for the dissemination of advertising may be deemed to have violated the "false advertising" provisions unless they refuse to furnish the name and address of the advertiser.

FRANK C. WALKER'S present job as head of the division of allotments and information in connection with the work-relief program is not so important as had been expected, and probably by the end of the year or earlier he will be able to delegate his duties to others. Then, according to current rumors, he will enter the President's cabinet as postmaster general to succeed Jim Farley.

Frank C. Walker

Mr. Farley has definitely decided to retire from the cabinet—voluntarily, it is said—so that he can devote all his time and energy to directing the campaign of Mr. Roosevelt for renomination and re-election. He expects to remain not only as chairman of the national Democratic committee but also as chairman of the New York state committee. In order that he may have an income he plans to make a business connection with an important organization.

There has been a lot of talk about Mr Farley's alleged ambition to be governor of New York. Melvin C. Eaton Republican state chairman, dares him to run for that position.

ONLY nine states of the Central West will send delegates to the "Grass Roots" convention of the Republican party which opens June 10 in Springfield, Ill., but the meeting will nevertheless be rather national in scope, for it will be attended by unofficial delegates from other states and by national leaders of the party. It was believed that Harrison E. Spangler, national committeeman from Iowa, would be made temporary chairman and as such would deliver the keynote address. Others on the tentative program for speeches are Arthur M. Hyde, former governor of Missouri and secretary of agriculture in the Hoover cabinet, and Edward Hayes of Decatur, Ill., former national commander of the American Legion.

A. M. Hyde

The keynote address, according to reports, will take inventory of American affairs under the Roosevelt New Deal and indicate the trend of the party in opposition. Mr. Hyde is to talk on the Great Emancipator at the Lincoln tomb in Oak Ridge cemetery, and Hayes is expected to deal with the theories of the Republican party on constitutional government.

ADOLF HITLER has proposed that Germany, Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium enter into a multilateral western European pact against aerial aggression. It follows the lines of the proposed Anglo-French air pact and would do for the nations named what the Locarno pact does with the land forces for France, Germany and Belgium.

KELLY PETILLO of California won the 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis Speedway, setting a new record with an average speed of 108.24 miles an hour. Clay Weatherly of Cincinnati lost control of his car and was killed.

HAWAII was treated to a magnificent display of American naval power in the Pacific that continued through two days. First the forty planes that had taken part in the mid-Pacific maneuvers returned and the entire armada of 225 planes participated in an aerial review. Then the vessels of the fleet returned and moved to Pearl Harbor, the great naval base, which they all entered in a crucial test of the harbor's capacity as an anchorage. The navy's largest submarines were with the battleships and cruisers, and there were 700 marines on the target ship Utah.

Navy Memorial day in Japan, the thirtieth anniversary of Admiral Togo's destruction of the Russian fleet, brought forth a pamphlet from the navy's propaganda bureau which made significant allusions to the United States. It said:

"Then Russia was the rival and the danger. Today that is changed. We have had to face in another direction. We are confronting another great sea power which is increasing its navy with Japan as the target.

"We need a navy sufficient to protect our sea routes to the continent of Asia and to face the menace in the direction of the great ocean. That is why Japan demands parity with the greatest navies. If Japan's just and reasonable demands are rejected by the powers, causing failure of the efforts to reach a new naval agreement and leading to a naval construction race, the responsibility will not be ours. In such case the only thing for Japan to do is to resort to resolute measures for self-protection."

THOUGH the League of Nations council ended its session in Geneva with the hope that it had arranged matters so that war between Italy and Ethiopia would be averted, the prospects for such a settlement are not bright. Under pressure from Great Britain and France, Mussolini consented to recognize the league's jurisdiction over the quarrel and agreed to arbitration. But immediately thereafter Il Duce told the chamber of deputies in Rome he would not allow Germany to make of Ethiopia "a pistol perennially pointed at us in case of trouble in Europe" and asserted he was ready to take the supreme responsibility to sustain by every means Italy's position in east Africa. He alluded bitterly to Britain and France, and indicated that he believed that Ethiopia was perfecting its army with the help of European powers inimical to Italy.

Benito Mussolini

Following this address, Mussolini ordered the mobilization of thousands of officers and technical experts of the class of 1912.

SAN DIEGO'S beautiful world's fair, the California Pacific exposition, was thrown open to the public practically completed. Thousands of visitors moved along the ancient El Camino Real to Balboa park on the opening day and viewed with delight the handsome buildings and interesting exhibits. The climax of the opening ceremonies came in the evening when President Roosevelt addressed the throng by radio from his study in the White House.

JAPAN, ready to take control over more Chinese territory, delivered to the government at Nanking an ultimatum charging that Dictator Chiang Kai-shek, as well as Gen. Yu Hsueh-chung, chairman of Hopei province and commander of Chinese troops in north China, were directly responsible for a long list of alleged infractions of the Tangku truce signed May 31, 1933, marking the conclusion of the Sino-Japanese hostilities over Manchuria.

Dispatches from Tokyo said Japanese officials admitted plans had been made to include Peiping and Tientsin within the demilitarized zone, which at present lies north of the two cities. Threats were made to bomb and occupy both those cities.

THE SAME COUNTRY

By ROBERT V. FLEMING
Vice President, American Bankers Association

R. V. FLEMING

There is a growing appreciation, both on the part of the people and the Government, of the earnest and sincere efforts being made by bankers to aid in recovery. It is desirable that we miss no opportunity to foster public understanding of the bankers' problems. We are living in an age of complex and upset economic conditions. Our affairs are closely inter-related not only within the confines of our own borders but extend to other countries throughout the world.

The Greatest Difficulty

I think the greatest difficulty we have to overcome in America today is due to our impatience with the progress we are making towards recovery. We must realize that while the Government can help by directing some measures for relief and recovery, we must help ourselves by doing our share to give impetus to the Government's efforts. We have the same country and basically the same businesses, factories and people we had prior to the depression, and business initiative must step forward if real recovery is to be achieved.

The theory we often hear expressed that banks create business activity is wrong. Banking can only make a supplementary contribution to business activity. Bankers have the facilities and the desire to extend credit, but business must initiate activity by seeking the credit which is readily available to all worthy borrowers.

Let it be said for business, however, that business men are as eager as bankers to contribute towards recovery. I think some of the trouble lies in the fact that too many legislative measures have been proposed for reform which leave an uncertainty in the minds of business leaders as to their eventual outcome and effect. Consequently, they hesitate to expand until the probable effects of such legislation are known.

MAKING IT HARDER FOR BANK ROBBERS

Mechanical Devices That Impede the Work of Bandits Described by Bankers Association Official

The impediments which the hard working bank robber now meets in plying his trade among small as well as large banks are described by James E. Baum, Deputy Manager American Bankers Association in charge of its Protective Department, in an article in "Banking" published by his organization.

"Protective equipment will minimize if not prevent loss," Mr. Baum says, "such as the silent automatic type of alarm, approved tear gas systems, several styles of bandit resisting enclosures and timelocks, or safes equipped with timelocks, which can be set intervals of a few minutes.

"The silent automatic alarms operate in the beginning of a holdup and through actions carried out by the bank employees in obedience to the bandits' own commands. They are adaptable to the smaller banks which continue to be easiest targets for bank robbery.

Tear Gas Systems

"Tear gas systems have their advantages as self-contained protective units where outside aid is inconvenient or too remote from the bank to be effective. One objection to the use of tear gas in preventing holdup is the need of pressing a lever or button to discharge it. Although this necessary action seems too much to expect of the victims in a crisis where their lives are in jeopardy, the fact remains that tear gas systems have defeated bank robbery. Its deterrent value is also important.

"Different styles of bandit resisting enclosures are available. The lock manufacturers also produce timelocks which can be set to open at intervals of five minutes or longer. These locks are especially adapted for attachment to small safes or chests for safeguarding surplus funds while the bank is open for business."

Stock of Central Banks Usually Privately Owned

Of all the central banks at present existing there are only four whose stock is owned by the government. The newest central bank is that of Canada, which opened its doors only a few months ago after a most exhaustive study had been made of the experience of all nations with the result that the stock of the Bank of Canada is privately owned.

Agriculture and Industry

Returns for the first quarter of 1935 for industrial corporations publishing quarterly reports show net profits 21 per cent more than for the same in 1934. The total farm value of all important crops, exclusive of livestock, rose in 1934 to $4,782,423,000, as compared with $4,114,265,000 in the previous year and $2,882,195,000 in 1932.

Banks Rapidly Reduce Debt

Although the sum of $1,860,000,000 has been advanced to banks and trust companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since it began operations in February, 1932, down to April 30, 1935, these institutions have repaid no less than $1,340,000,000, or more than 72%. This rate of repayment is reported as being considerably in excess of that made by any other type of borrower.

Loans were authorized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to 7,396 banks and trust companies in an aggregate amount of $2,350,000,000, but of this sum $345,000,000 was withdrawn or cancelled and $140,000,000 has not yet been taken out by the borrowers.

A sharp rise in the number of federal employes to carry on relief and other recovery functions of the government was shown by Civil Service commission figures. The 709,777 civil employes at the end of April, the highest number in more than fifteen years, were shown to have drawn total salaries in that month of more than $107,000,00o, or at the rate of more than a billion and a quarter dollars a year.

President Roosevelt is receiving $75,000 a year. Chief Justice Hughes of the Supreme Court draws $20,500 a year, and the eight other Justices get $20,000 each; Cabinet members receive $15,000 each.

LOCAL CIVIC CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Col. William S. Pritchard Was Guest Speaker at the Meeting Here

The regular stated meeting of the Montevallo Civic Club was held at noon Wednesday of this week.

Col. William S. Pritchard, of Birmingham, Commander of the Alabama Department of the American Legion, was the guest speaker. He was introduced by Dr. H. W. James. E. E. Craig, retiring president of the club presided.

The address of Col. Pritchard was devoted to a discussion of the work the American Legion is doing in Alabama toward helping train young men for citizenship. He exemplified the theme of his address by details of the MacFadden Athletic Program, which is being sponsored by forty posts of the Legion in as many towns of the State.

The business of the Civic Club transacted at Wednesday's meeting was the election of officers for the next six months, as follows:

STATE CONVICTS MAY GROW LEGUME SEED

At the request of the Alabama Legislature, R. J. Goode, Commissioner of Agriculture, is looking into the possibility of having state convicts grow legume seed and sell them to farmers at reasonable prices.

The legislature resolution, introduced in the Senate by Senator M. B. Wellborn of Calhoun County and passed unanimously, reads as follows:

Whereas, the farmers of this state are learning that the sowing of legume seed, such as Crimson Clover, vetch, etc., in the autumn is very beneficial in soil building, thereby adding nitrogen to the land and filling the soil with humus; and

Whereas, the cost price of such seed is very high, almost to the extent of being prohibitive, owing to the fact that few farmers have the facilities for saving the seed, and also due to the fact that such seed reach our market from foreign countries and from such far away states as Oregon and other northwestern state; and,

Whereas, it is greatly to the interest of agriculture in Alabama that some means be worked out to procure such legume seed at lower prices;

Therefore, be it resolved by the senate, the house of representatives concurring, that the Commissioner of Agriculture is requested to look into the advisability and practicability of having state convicts produce and save the seed above mentioned and have them sold through commercial agencies at a reasonable profit, but the price to the farmers to be fixed by the Commissioner of Agriculture.

Shelby Highway Is To Be Re-surfaced

It is understood from reliable sources that plans of the Alabama State Highway Department are about completed to begin work re-surfacing that portion of the Birmingham - Montgomery Highway through Shelby County.

It is understood that a rock crushing and asphalt plant will be established in the neighborhood of Alabaster, from which material will be furnished to carry on the work. Present calculations are to begin the work soon after the first of July.

There is also a possibility that material for putting a hard surface on the Calera-Montevallo Highway will be furnished from the base plant at Alabaster.

BUSINESS MEN ARE IN A WATCHFUL POSE

Fear Of Price-Cutting And Wage Slash Voiced With Blue Eagle Gone

As the Blue Eagle disappeared over the horizon Monday, industrialists and merchants turned thoughts to trends ahead—and sat with fingers crossed.

That business has gone along fairly even since the Supreme Court decision on NRA three weeks ago has encouraged many, especially in the light of earlier fears that with the sudden withdrawal of codes the gears would fail to mesh.

Nevertheless, Wall Street observers stress the fact that the period just ahead is obscure. They feel that good behavior of big and little business the last three weeks affords no sure-fire guarantee of its own continuance.

As some see the problem, any rocking of the boat will be heralded by an attack on prices. For this reason particular attention has been given to the state of retail and wholesale business.

Pronounced gains in retail trade throughout the country reported by the Department of Commerce in its weekly survey of 33 cities have given much encouragement.

BALDWIN COUNTY'S ANNUAL RODEO SOON

Dr. W. C. Holmes of Foley, president of the Baldwin County chapter of the Izaak Walton League, announces that the annual Baldwin County fishing rodeo will be held August 22 and 23.

This will be the fifth annual rodeo the chapter has sponsored and, as were its predecessors, it will be held in Perdido Bay and Gulf waters adjacent to the Baldwin County mainland.

Carrying on under the inspiration of the son of the man who founded it, the Baldwin tourney is finding increasing favor among Alabama fishermen and has become one of the state's big annual sporting contests.

The rodeo was founded in 1931 by the late Sibley Holmes of Foley, who saw in it an opportunity to advertise the wonderful fishing resources of Perdido Bay and adjoining waters. Since the passing of Dr. Holmes, his son, Dr. W. C. Holmes, has continued the promotion of the rodeo.

This contest generally is held a little in advance of the Alabama deep sea fishing rodeo, but this year the latter has been moved up to July 22, 23, and 24 and the procedure has been reversed. Handsome prizes are awarded the winners in a dozen or more fishing events and special efforts are made to attract the interest of feminine anglers.

Baldwin County is one of the richest game and fish centers in the state, and the citizens of this county take a great deal of pride in the annual rodeo.

W. M. WYATT, Publisher

GREETINGS TO THE NEW PUBLISHER OF THE MONTEVALLO TIMES

Montevallo and surrounding communities are to be congratulated upon securing W. M. (Mack) Wyatt as publisher of their local newspaper, The Montevallo Times. What we know of Montevallo leads us to believe its people are a fine progressive type of citizens. What we know of W. M. Wyatt as a man and as a newspaper publisher, editor, manager, etc., causes us to say without reserve that any community is fortunate in having him as one of their own.

His long experience in the newspaper game and years of civic activity have portrayed him as an unusually gifted writer, a man of sound judgment, and a citizen who is interested in the welfare of his community. As a member of the Kiwanis Club here, as a school trustee, as well as in other phases of community work, he has shown keen interest in civic betterment, ready at all times to do his part for the common good.

In a statement last week in his newly acquired paper, Mr. Wyatt outlined some of his goals and made a pledge of service "for the best of Montevallo." Some who do not know the man, might pass that statement lightly, but those who are familiar with their publisher know that his pledges of service are not given lightly, and that he will maintain these ideals and strive towards the goals he has set from week to week and on through the years.

In his statement, Mr. Wyatt also made the following statement to the people of Shelby County, in order, as he says to properly answer "the one question that will be asked first by most people;"

"My conduct of the policies of The Montevallo Times will be without the color of politics. I want to make this newspaper an institution devoted to and capable of properly serving you as a constructive community institution. To do so I shall not be handicapped and shackled by political alignments."

The News has known Mr. Wyatt as a competitor in business. We know that he doesn't pull his punches when defending his convictions, but he doesn't strike below the belt. We congratulate Montevallo upon securing his services and extend to him our best wishes for success in his new enterprise.—Chilton County News.

LIP SERVICE IS NOT ENOUGH

"Just because there is an opportunity to improve the marketing situation through cooperative organization, does not, in itself mean that the goal will be realized by and through a cooperative," said Dean Christenson of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, recently. "It will not be realized unless and until the farmers learn to work together in the carrying out of some of the functions of marketing and distributing in which they have a common interest."

"You can't pull a rabbit out of a hat unless you have a rabbit to start with—and the farmer who expects a cooperative institution to make something out of nothing is doomed to disappointment. There are two kinds of farm members of co-ops. One pays his dues, attends an occassional meeting, listens to the speeches, and goes home and forgets all about it until next time. Consciously or not, he expects the cooperative management to find a more profitable market for his products without any aid from him.

The other kind of farmer really works with and for his cooperative. He learns the lessons that agricultural experts offer. He enlists the support of neighboring farmers. He thrashes out ideas with his fellow cooperators —and if ninety-nine out of a hundred of those ideas are impractical, the hundredth is likely to be of real value. That is the kind of farmer who is making possible the great progress of our leading cooperatives.

An employee of the State Highway Department, who would not and could not speak officially, has indicated that work will start soon on re-surfacing the highway to Calera. Apparently the work contemplated is not of a very permanent and substantial character, but we venture the hope that it will be better than has been the condition of this road in recent months.

Senate Extends Skeletonized NRA Despite Long's Extraordinary Filibuster—Grass Roots Meet Offers a Creed for the Republicans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

Senator Long

SENATOR HUEY LONG, the Louisiana Kingfish, made a tremendous effort to keep the senate from adopting the resolution extending the skeletonized NRA until next April, but failed. Advocating an amendment offered by Senator Gore, which would have required senate confirmation of all executive officials drawing more than $4,000 a year, thus disrupting the patronage machine, Huey started on a filibuster. For nearly 16 hours, with occasional help from Senators Schall and McCarren, he kept the upper house in session, pouring forth a continuous stream of discourse that ranged from the necessity of preserving the Constitution down to recipes for fried oysters and pot-likker. He attacked the President and the administration generally, called the NRA "the national racketeers' association," told stories about his uncle, read from the Bible and Victor Hugo, stalked about the chamber waving his arms and croaking as his voice weakened, and now and then took a bite of cheese and a sup of cold coffee. All in all, Huey put on a show that kept not only the senators but a big crowd of visitors up all night. He was continually heckled by his angry fellow solons but always had a smashing retort.

At last the senate broke down the filibuster, rejected the Gore amendment and passed the extension resolution by a vote of 41 to 13. One change, to tighten up the antitrust laws, suggested by Borah, was made, so the resolution was sent back to the house for concurrence. In its final form it continues the recovery administration without codes but with authority for voluntary agreements among business men dealing only with collective bargaining, minimum wages, maximum hours, abolition of child labor and prohibition of trade practices already outlawed by statute.

The house had previously adopted the resolution by a vote of 201 to 121, only a few Democrats standing with the Republicans against it.

Immediately after the house had acted, it was announced at the White House that Donald Richberg would retire as chairman of the practically dead NRA on June 16, and that President Roosevelt had accepted his resignation "with great reluctance," and with assurances of his "affectionate regard."

PLANS for spending the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund are coming to the fore rapidly and numerously. Representative Mitchell, Democrat, of Tennessee, has introduced a bill requiring the President to use $1,000,000,000 to help the durable goods industries. By its terms factories supplying machinery and materials would be reimbursed for losses directly attributable to hiring new men. Mr. Mitchell thinks his plan would aid in the production of $80,000,000,000 worth of durable goods needed by private industry.

The War department filed a request for $17,071,388 to finance the construction of 36 army bases in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California and Kansas. The Labor department asked for $400,000 for research designed to aid the United States employment service in selecting and placing workers on relief jobs and in private industry.

Frank O. Lowden

THOUSANDS of Republicans from ten states of the Middle West gathered in Springfield, Ill., for the "grass roots" conference and, in the shadow of the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, who saved the Union, solemnly determined to save the "indestructible states" from what they consider an assault on their constitutional rights. The gathering was considered so important that it attracted political observers from all over the country. Most of the delegates were young men eager for the battle, but with them were many white-haired leaders of former frays whose enthusiasm and patriotism have survived the years.

After a pilgrimage to the New Salem State park where the scenes of Lincoln's youth have been reconstructed, the delegates assembled in the fair grounds Coliseum and were welcomed by George W. Bunn of Springfield, general chairman of the local committee. Harrison E. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was installed as temporary chairman and made a speech in which President Roosevelt was pilloried for all manner of political and governmental sins, from killing six million pigs and breaking campaign pledges to violating the Constitution and attempting to set up a dictatorship. Mr. Spangler then introduced the orator of the day, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and former aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Mr. Lowden, breaking a political silence of seven years, vigorously denounced President Roosevelt's proposal to change the Constitution to fit the New Deal and argued at length for maintenance of the bill of rights unimpaired.

IN THE "platform" adopted by the grass roots conference these governmental policies were advocated:

1. The immediate adoption of a policy of economy and thrift in government with due allowance for essential relief expenditures as opposed to the present spending policy of waste and extravagance.

2. The prompt attainment of a balanced budget, not by the misleading method of double bookkeeping, but by the honest method of bringing the expenses of the government within the limits of its income.

3. A sound currency based on gold and definitely stabilized by congress so that individual enterprise may have confidence in the future value of the dollar, in terms of which every man's plans for his present or future must necessarily be made.

4. The immediate withdrawal of government from competition with private industry.

5. The maintenance of the vitality and free growth of American industry through the preservation of the competitive system protected against monopoly by the vigorous enforcement of anti-trust laws, so that small businesses may be preserved and the door of equal opportunity kept open to all.

6. The rigid enforcement of all laws, civil and criminal, to prevent and punish dishonest or unfair practices in business, industry, and finance.

7. National recognition of the needs of agriculture. Agriculture is a fundamental industry of the United States. The farmer is, of right, entitled to a fair and proportionate part of the national income and to receive a parity price for the products of his farm in domestic markets.

8. Work for the workers. With men out of work, as now, the capital structure of the nation is not only being impaired but undermined.

9. The breaking down of arbitrary restrictions that throttle world commerce, such as quotas and exchange restrictions.

10. Continued protection to farm and home ownership, and continued provision, in co-operation with state and local governments, for those that are in need until private enterprise absorbs the present army of the unemployed.

Senator Robinson, majority leader of the senate, speaking before the Arkansas Pharmaceutical association, said of this:

"The only constructive suggestion made in addition to those which are embraced in the Roosevelt administration policies is the often repeated demand for the balancing of the budget. The budget cannot be immediately balanced unless the various forms of relief now being carried on be abandoned. This cannot be done just now without danger to millions of our people who have yet been unable to obtain employment."

TAXES totaling $475,000,000 would go out of existence before July 31 if not extended, so a resolution continuing them two years was being hurried through the house in accord with the wish of the President. Among them are the 3-cent postage and the 1-cent-a-gallon federal gasoline charge. A second resolution was being prepared to plug loopholes in existing tax laws and to adjust present rates found to be unconscionable or unproductive.

THE American Federation of Labor more than any other group except the old brain trust bemoans the death of NRA, and its attorneys are busy drafting a bill designed to take its place in a measure. This measure proposes to put under federal license all concerns engaged in interstate commerce or handling goods destined for such commerce. Those companies would be exempted from the operations of the antitrust laws but would be required to agree to hours of labor and working conditions determined by a federal commission.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH may not be a receptive candidate for the Presidential nomination next year, but anyhow his friends in Idaho have grabbed his hat and thrown it into the ring. They are organizing "Borah-for-President" clubs all over the state. Ralph Brashears of Boise, one of the leaders, says Mr. Borah is the man to "emancipate our people from the vise-like grip of a vast bureaucratic form of government which is destroying individual initiative and regimenting the American people."

MAX BAER lost the heavyweight championship of the world, being defeated by James J. Braddock at Long Island City in a 15-round battle There were no knock downs and neither man was badly punished.

TIRES MAY LOOK ALIKE ON THE OUTSIDE ON THE INSIDE THEY ARE DIFFERENT

HEAT on the inside created by friction is the main cause of blowouts. Firestone Tires are different on the inside—they are built with the patented extra process of Gum-Dipping that soaks every cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber, preventing internal friction and heat. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped.

Firestone performance records again emphasize the undisputed evidence that Firestone Tires are not only blowout-proof, but give greatest protection against skidding. There are three questions and answers that will solve the problem of what tires to buy:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes. For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

QUESTION 2—"Are they blowout-proof?"

ANSWER—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Not one of the 33 drivers had any tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles at 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile due to the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This rugged tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread, a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequaled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

You Always Get Better Quality at No Higher Price when You Buy a Firestone Tire with the Firestone Name and Guarantee

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

Would Like Taxes As Low As Electricity

"I wish everybody would start a crusade to make taxes as low as your prices for electricity," writes L. C. Rice, resident of Warrior. "Maybe the reason some of us don't use any more electricity than we do, cheap as it is, is because we have to save all of our spare change to pay our taxes with." Adv. Alabama Power Co.

BUSINESS MEN

On the other hand, wholesale activities have been appreciably curtailed owing to an attack of nerves over the price outlook.

Some purchasing agents have dickered with manufacturers and wholesalers for discounts or rebates in the event of reductions, while others stood around awaiting possible price cuts.

Unwillingness of wholesalers to yield on price has produced a stalemate, most pronounced in shoes and textiles.

The concensus seems to be that the majority of producers will keep wages up and hours down just as long as they can afford it, or as long as business sentiment remains optimistic.

The one thing which above all others they fear will shake the structure is a possible epidemic of price-cutting. Should this break out, many feel they would be obliged to resort to reductions of wage and hour standards for self-protection.

LEGION SPONSORS A NEGRO WEDDING

Fun for Spectators; Serious Business for Douglas and Lillie Mae

The custom of getting married is so common amongst people that it seldom draws forth any unusual excitement. But there is coming off in Montevallo next Monday evening a wedding under such circumstances as to make it the talk of the whole town.

Hendrick-Hudson Post of American Legion is sponsoring a negro wedding at the Legion Hut at seven o'clock p.m. It is a real wedding, in which the groom is Douglas Lacey, the shine boy at Kendrick's Barber Shop. His bride will be Lillie Mae Montgomery, from Oxford. The nuptial knot will be tied by Rev. Moore, a colored minister from Almont, who will deport himself in a frock tail coat, and put on all the dignity and solemnity with which clergymen of his standing are accustomed to go about the serious business of welding two lives together.

Music will be furnished for the ceremony by a colored band from Almont. The Legion Post is giving the couple their marriage license and marriage certificate. Every merchant and business house in Montevallo has donated gifts for the bride and groom. These are on display at the window of Jeter Mercantile Company.

Admission charges will be only 10 and 15 cents, and privilege of attendance is extended to white people only. Everybody is invited to witness this real wedding ceremony, and you are guaranteed in advance that you will enjoy it thoroughly.

Remember the time is next Monday evening at seven o'clock at the Legion Hut in Montevallo. Be there on time or you will not be able to get in.

This will be fun for the spectators, but it will be serious business for Douglas and Lillie Mae.

Three Winners of Camp Scholarship

The three winners of the scholarships offered to the Alabama College Camp for Girls are Miss Sarah V. Gammage, Birmingham; Miss Jean Letson, Columbiana; and Miss Anne Canon, Opelika.

The three scholarships were offered to the best all-round applicants. Those awarded honorable mention by the Camp Scholarship Committee are Misses Carolyn Smith, Livingston; Annie Lee Ellis, Orrville; and Martha Asbury, Bessemer.

The camp is to be held July 22 to August 17 and the scholarship winners may attend for any period of two weeks during that time, according to Dr. Minnie L. Steckel, director. Advance registration indicate the largest attendance in several years. The camp is open to girls between the ages of 10 and 18 years.

An added attraction of the camp house, library, tennis courts, archery greens, swimming pool, gymnasium, dining halls, and recital halls.

The devotional was followed with prayer by the president of the society in which special intercession was offered for the members who were absent because of serious illness.

WILL GARNER CHARGED WITH KILLING WIFE WITH AX HANDLE

Will Garner, white man, age about 65 years, was arrested this week by Sheriff C. H. Fore, and placed in jail in Columbiana on suspicion of having murdered his wife, age 62.

Mrs. Garner was found dead at the little one-room house which was her home about four o'clock last Saturday afternoon. It was thought she was killed about noon of the same day.

Death was evidently caused by a blow on the head with a blunt instrument, supposed to have been an axe handle. Numerous other bruises were on her body.

County officers, accompanied by Dr. J. I. Reid, of Montevallo, went to the Garner home Sunday, where Dr. Reid made an examination of the body, and the officers investigated evidences as to the circumstances of the woman's death. It was after this examination that Garner was arrested upon suspicion of having committed the crime.

In what is termed a weak attempt at alibi, it is said that Garner told the officers his wife had fallen on the railroad tracks some days ago and sustained the bruises that were on her body.

A baseball game of unusual interest is scheduled at Buck Creek Park, Siluria, next Sunday, between Buck Creek and Leeds.

Buck Creek has strenghtened their team considerably by adding Jake Daniels former Birmingham Baron, on first base.

Batteries for the game are announced as follows: For Buck Creek, Bill Morrell and Tooter Brandon; for Leeds, Bill Statham and Dodd. It is expected this will be the best game played at Buck Creek this year.

MONTEVALLO LISTED FOR FEDERAL BUILDING

Survey Will Be Made of the Needs in Twelve Alabama Towns

In a news dispatch by Associated Press from Washington last week it was stated that Montevallo is listed among twelve Alabama cities as eligible for a new postoffice building under the deficiency appropriation bill in the House of Representatives.

The bill, it was stated, puts 12 Alabama cities on a list from which the Treasury and Postoffice Department will make selections for new postoffice buildings. Birmingham Gadsden, Dothan and Florence were listed for possible expansion or improvement of existing buildings.

Eligible cities for new buildings included Evergreen, Fort Payne, Guntersville, Opp, Roanoke, Scottsboro, Alexander City, Bay Minette, Montevallo, Tuscumbia, and Wetumpka. A study is under way to determine the comparative urgency of construction in the various localities.

The deficiency bill also carries an appropriation for $3-000,000 for an addition to the veterans hospital for negroes at Tuskegee, to provide 350 beds for patients.

WILD LIFE ABUNDANT IN THE STATE OF ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala., — This may be the "machine age," but this testimonial submitted to the State Game and Fisheries Department by District Warden Tom Lipsey, of Carrollton, should convince any "Doubting Thomas" that wild life is still abundant in Alabama.

"I wish to report a 'Believe It Or Not' incident which I noticed last week, June 14 while on a trip in North Tuscaloosa county," wrote Warden Lipsey.

"I was driving along and a fox crossed the road in front of me. After driving three or four miles further on, a ground hog crossed in front of me. Then later a quail with a bunch of little ones crossed my path, and next was a turkey hen with a brood of young turkeys, as many as eight or 10, crossing in front of me."

"I thought that this was a very unusual happening and you would like to know of it."

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Piper, Miss Mae Woods and Miss Elizabeth Law of Thorsby were visitors in Montevallo and Piper last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thomason returned to their home in Stanton, Virginia, Wednesday after visiting Miss Mamie Braswell for several days.

ALDRICH-MONTEVALLO PLAY DOUBLE-HEADER

Boxing Bouts In Forenoon and Baseball Sports At 2:30 P. M.

Heading a program of amusements for the Fourth of July in Montevallo is two battle royal boxing matches sponsored by the Hendrick-Hudson Post of the American Legion. The fisticuff performances will begin at ten o'clock in the morning, when a dozen negro fighters from Boothton, Aldrich, Helena, Siluria, Montevallo and other places will be turned in the ring.

It will be a free-for-all, knock-down and drag-out affair, in which the last man left able to stand up and fight will get the pot for his performance.

In announcing this feature of entertainment Post Commander, Dr. H. W. James, was unable to say at the time the exact location of the battle royals. He stated it would be either at the ball diamond or at the big spring.

A small admission will be charged, and everybody is invited to attend. This will be a most thrilling performance.

Proceeds from this enterainment, as well as from all others sponsored by the Legion, will be used by the Post in its social welfare work in the community. As an example of this kind of work, mention is made of the arrangement carried out last year to furnish fifteen pints of milk each day for undernourished school children. Another instance was carrying a sick child to a hospital for operation and treatment. Some groceries were furnished to needy families out of Post funds which were raised by various entertainments which the public paid a small admission to witness.

In addition to the Legion entertainments on the Fourth, there will also be baseball games at Montevallo in the afteroon.

LOCAL LEGION POST ACTIVE

It is heartening to observe the manner in which Montevallo people appreciate and encourage the various activities of the Hendrick-Hudson Post of the American Legion. The fine public response to those activities spurs the Legion members to push forward to greater efforts at community service.

At the national Legion convention in Miami last year Hendrick-Hudson Post was cited for honorable mention on the floor of the convention for being one of the three posts in the United States that had gone over the top in membership for four consecutive years. Dr. H. W. James, Commander of the Post, says the same achievement in membership has already been accomplished again this year, with a total membership greater than ever before.

REAL SOCIAL SECURITY

A report from a representative medium-sized life insurance company says that the volume of regular paid business secured during May of this year was ten per cent greater than in any month for four and one-half years past.

In addition to the business increase, the company found many other favorable factors. The lowest lapse rates in its history are now being experienced. Policy loans are decreasing. Favorable mortality rates are continuing. And the amount of total insurance in force is showing steady gains.

Life insurance sales have held up well during times when business, employment and payrolls were tending to drop. That can mean only one thing—that the American people, having witnessed the debacle that began in 1929, have a growing respect for the safety, permanence and soundness of life insurance from the standpoint of both protection and investment.

Every time a new policy is sold it means that another family is starting to achieve social security—and to achieve it through its own thrift and foresight. That kind of security is worth more than all the government "doles" ever proposed.

EQUALITY FOR EDUCATION

The Alabama Department of the American Legion last year set up as one of its major objectives to work for placing education in Alabama on a par with other state government services.

The matter was placed in the hands of the Education Committee of the Deparment of which Dr. H. W. James, commander of Hendrick-Hudson Post, is chairman.

Dr. James has been able to report to the Department headquarters that this most important objective has been accomplished in the recent passage of a bill in the State legislature.

The bill was framed under the guidance of the Education Committee and sponsored by the Legislative Committee.

In this accomplishment the American Legion has done a service that is of vital importance to educational progress and the stability of educational interests in Alabama.

BACK TO THE FARM

There has been a small but encouraging rise in value of American farms. Between March, 1934, and March, 1935, values rose in 30 states, declined in but five and remained unchanged in the other 13.

"Back to the Farm" is becoming a reality. Where a few years ago, the farm population was being depleted by an exodus to the cities, the trend has completely reversed and streams of people are going from urban to rural areas. A number of reasons lie behind this, such as industrial unemployment, the development of profitable specialty farming, and the desire of immigrants to leave the cities for the land.

In addition, the number of individual farms is on the increase. In New England alone, there were 162,000 producing farms on January 1, 1935, in contrast to 125,000 on April 1, 1930.

All of this speaks well for the future of agriculture and a self-supporting citizenship. It is natural that people should win their living from the land. And the great progress made in developing more scientific farming methods—largely due to the efforts of large agricultural cooperatives—is immeasurably improving the farmers' opportunity to till the soil at a profit. All in all, it is safe to say that the agricultural situation is basically better now now than at any time since depression set in.

JUST A GENTLE REMINDER

For the benefit of those who may be suffering with illusions about the politics of The Montevallo Times, we wish to say again that we are not interested or concerned with partisan politics. Some have guessed it is Republican, some have said it is Democratic, while one has ventured to name it Populist. We suppose it will be called Socialist, Mugwump, and no telling what else. Meanwhile, we shall not be worried about politics. There are plenty of politicians to do that. We expect to go straight down the middle of the road in an honest effort to publish a good, clean, community newspaper, interested in and working for the things that make better towns, better communities and better citizens.

We acknowledge with grateful appreciation the fine spirit and words of encouragement that have come to us thus far from many of the good people of Montevallo and Shelby County. We promise you that we shall make you a newspaper that you will like. With your support we will be on the front lines ever ready to fight the battles of community progress and civic righteousness.

Arrangements are being made for a big time for everybody in Montevallo on July the Fourth. People from surrounding communities are invited to come and take in the fun. The free-for-all boxing bout and a double-header baseball game are the principal features of the fun menu. Come and spend the Fourth with us.

SAVING MILLIONS FOR TAXPAYERS

Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, has been subjected to numerous attacks by advocates of municipal power plants because he evidently cannot see the logic of building such plants in towns already efficiently and economically served by private systems.

That attitude on the part of the official who has charge of the vast PWA fund should be praised, not attacked. If the more fanatical advocates of municipal power had their way, every town in the country, large or small, growing or backsliding, would be given a publicly-owned electric plant, regardless of any need for it. Tax-free, subsidized competition would destroy the investments of millions of citizens in private systems. Great deficits would be saddled on the already overburdened taxpayers, and the millions privately-owned utilities now pay in taxes would be lost to the public treasuries. Worst of all, one of our essential industries would become a plaything of municipal politics—which is usually inefficient, almost always wasteful, and frequently corrupt.

Mr. Ickes is adamant in holding to the principle that PWA funds should be used for projects that benefit all the people—that are useful—and that are needed. Every citizen should support him in that.

How much does Montevallo need a government building for use as a postoffice? This question will be answered soon by investigation of the postoffice department. Our city is listed among twelve in Alabama as eligible for a federal building. A survey is to be made to determine which of the twelve have the most pressing need for such a building. Let's get ready to pull for Montevallo.

THE CONSTITUTION, OUR GREATEST SAFEGUARD

The senate has passed the Public Utility Act of 1935 (usually spoken of as the Wheeler-Rayburn bill) to eliminate most electric holding companies.

On June 4, a United States Congressman, writing to a worried investor who feared that his savings would be wiped out by this plan to destroy holding companies, said: "This legislation . . . will protect the actual value and earning power of such properties now owned by thousands of investors . . . It will not destroy values." The Congressman did not say what the investor could do with securities in a company destroyed by a federal law. When he tells worried citizens that a bill to destroy an industry "will not destroy values," he assumes a grave responsibility.

Since the Supreme Court's decision on the NRA, upholding constitutional principles as to interstate commerce and powers of Congress, legal authorities are considering the effect of the decision on this unprecedented legislation to destroy property rights.

The bill gives political appointees absolute life and death power over companies worth billions of dollars, representing the savings and investments of hundreds of thousands of American citizens. It would give the same appointees power over most of the operating utilities of the country, to the exclusion of state utility commissions.

The great bulk of electricity is generated, distributed and used within a single state. The Public Utility Act does not differentiate between interstate and intrastate power, but attempts to subject it all to federal control.

In the light of the Supreme Court's remarks on intrastate commerce, the vital provisions of this bill seem brazenly unconstitutional. But the senate has passed it and the house is under political pressure to pass it, while Congressmen tell investors "it will not destroy values."

Regardless of what Congress does, however, the rights of citizens will be guarded by the United States Supreme Court in interpreting that greatest of all guarantees of human happiness and property rights, the United States Constitution, which so far has stood impregnable against insidious political onslaughts to curb its protective powers and destroy personal liberties.

President Offers Higher Tax and Wealth Reduction Program—Social Security and Wagner-Connery Labor Bills Passed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Moore of New Jersey, Democrat, and Hastings of Delaware, Hale of Maine, Metcalf of Rhode Island, Austin of Vermont and Townsend of Delaware, Republicans. This social security measure will affect about 30,000,000 beneficiaries in the immediate future and by 1960, it is estimated, will cost the federal government more than $3,000,000,000 a year.

These are its main features:

1. An appropriation of $98,491,000 for the fiscal year 1936, including $49,750,000 for grants in aid to states for old age assistance. In addition there are authorized annual appropriations for the old age reserve fund, graduated from $255,000,000 in 1937 to $2,180,000,000 in 1980.

2. Income tax on employees and excise tax on employers, for old age benefits, beginning in each case at 1 per cent of the pay roll in 1937 and reaching the maximum of 3 per cent in 1949. In addition there is a pay roll tax on employers for unemployment insurance, beginning at 1 per cent in 1936, increasing to 2 per cent in 1937, and to 3 per cent, the maximum, in 1938.

3. Grants in aid to states on a matching basis for assistance to persons sixty-five or older, the government's contribution not to exceed $15 per month.

4. Old age benefits after January 1, 1942, ranging from $10 to $85 per month, depending upon the total amount of wages earned after December 1, 1936, and before reaching sixty-five years of age.

5. A 90 per cent credit to employers for taxes paid into state unemployment insurance funds, the other 10 per cent to be apportioned among the states for administration of their unemployment insurance laws.

6. Grants in aid to states for aid to dependent children, the federal government putting up $1 to the state's $2. An appropriation of $24,750,000 is authorized for the fiscal year 1936.

7. Grants in aid to states on an equal matching basis for maternal and child health services. An annual appropriation of $3,800,000 is authorized.

8. Grants in aid to states on an equal matching basis for the care of crippled children. An annual appropriation of $2,850,000 is authorized.

9. An annual appropriation of $1,500,000 through the children's bureau for aiding state public welfare agencies in the care of homeless or neglected children.

10. An annual appropriation of $1,938,000 to be apportioned among the states for vocational rehabilitation.

11. An annual appropriation of $8,000,000 to be apportioned among the states for public health services.

12. Grants in aid to states on an equal matching basis for assistance to the blind. An annual appropriation of $3,000,000 is authorized.

13. A social security board of three members in the Department of Labor, to be appointed by the President, each member receiving $10,000 a year.

GREAT BRITAIN'S realistic government finds the best path toward general peace in Europe is concillation of Germany, so it has yielded to Hitler's naval demands and concluded a bilateral pact with the reich, disregarding entirely the desires and fears of France. The agreement acknowledges Germany's right to build a fleet up to 35 per cent of the tonnage of the British empire, and, what is more important, permits Germany 45 per cent, and in certain circumstances, parity with the empire in submarine tonnage. Submarines were forbidden to Germany by the treaty of Versailles.

EWING Y. MITCHELL, whom President Roosevelt ousted from the position of assistant secretary of commerce because he could not work in harmony with Secretary Roper, retaliated with public charges that "special interests" dominate the Commerce department. He cited especially a government contract with the United States lines for the permanent lay-up of the steamship Leviathan, asserting that it was against the public interest and that "those interested in the company, including P. A. S. Franklin, John M. Franklin, Vincent Astor and Kermit Roosevelt" stood to benefit by it. He also severely criticized the bureau of air commerce and the steamship inspection service.

E. Y. Mitchell

No one in the administration seemed disturbed by Mr. Mitchell's outbreak, but the senate committee on commerce at once summoned him to explain and expand his charges. Mr. Mitchell turned out to be an excitable gentleman, prone to jump to conclusions and to voice his opinions rather than facts. He talked a lot about inefficiency, "sinks of corruption," "favoritism and graft" and such things, but he didn't tell the committee much that it didn't already know. He asserted the United States lines, a subsidiary of the International Mercantile marine, had received a "gift" of $1,721,000 through the retirement of the Leviathan.

SPURRED on by the White House, the house, after a hot debate, passed the Wagner-Connery labor disputes bill by acclamation, and President William Green of the American Federation of Labor hailed it as a "magna charta of labor." As is well known, the federation is the chief beneficiary of the measure, and Green and other labor union leaders had worked unceasingly for its passage.

Sen. Wagner

Opponents of this bill, including constitutional authorities in both parties, have asserted repeatedly that it is unconstitutional, and it is most probable that it will be carried to the Supreme court for an early test.

Every attempt to give the employer an even break with labor was voted down, but the house did accept an amendment making the new labor board an independent agency instead of a part of the Department of Labor as Secretary Perkins had demanded.

As passed by the house, the Wagner-Connery bill provides:

1. For the setting up of a permanent labor relations board of three members, appointed by the President, as an independent agency. The board, or its agencies or agents, is authorized to supervise elections, conduct hearings, and issue cease and desist orders for "unfair labor practices," which are enforceable by the courts.

2. That representatives selected by a majority of a unit of employees for the purpose of collective bargaining shall have the exclusive right to negotiate with the employer. The board may determine the appropriate unit for collective bargaining, whether by plant or craft, etc.

3. That it is an unfair labor practice for employers to restrain, coerce, or interfere with employees in their organization for collective bargaining.

4. That it is an unfair labor practice for employers to "dominate" or contribute financially to any labor organization.

5. That it is an unfair labor practice to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization for the purpose of making closed shop agreements.

6. A fine of $5,000 or a year in prison for anyone interfering with agents of the board, such as refusing to permit access to books and records.

EVEN Huey Long cheered when President Roosevelt's unexpected message on redistribution of wealth and increase of taxation for the rich was read to congress. The Chief Executive offered a program that he hopes will pay part of the vast expenses of the New Deal and at the same time break up some huge fortunes and check the growth of big corporations. He doesn't expect congress to do the entire job at this session, and the administration leaders at once set about stopping the radicals who wanted immediate enactment.

The President's taxation plan is frankly aimed against the wealthy, especially the men with million-dollar incomes. Of these there were 46 in 1933.

The following legislation he recommended for enactment during the present session in order to obtain ample revenue without hampering enterprise and to distribute tax burdens equitably:

1. High inheritance and gift taxes on "all very large amounts received by any one legatee or beneficiary." Segregation of this revenue for reduction of the national debt.

2. Tax levies to restrict "very great individual net incomes."

3. Substitution of a graduated corporation tax ranging from 10¾ to 16¾ per cent for the existing 13¾ per cent rate.

1. Elimination "of unnecessary holding companies in all lines of business," by discriminatory taxation.

2. Discouragement of "unwieldy and unnecessary corporate surpluses."

3. An amendment of the Constitution to abolish tax exempt securities by authorizing the federal government to tax subsequently issued state and local obligations and state and local governments to tax federal securities.

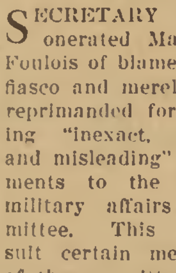
Treasury officials estimated that about one billion dollars could be expected ultimately from the tax plan submitted. Chairman Doughton of the house ways and means committee promptly called that body together to consider the proposals.

WITH only six senators voting in the negative, the senate passed the tremendously important social security bill that already had gone through the house. During the five days of debate a number of members, Democrats and Republicans like, had argued earnestly that this measure never would stand up in the Supreme court, but when their names were called nearly every one of them voted for it. The only consistent ones were

SENATOR JAMES COUZENS of Michigan has given to the federal government $550,000 to finance a 1,000-acre residence colony for part time industrial workers in the Detroit area. A tract has been purchased nine miles south and west of Pontiac. The project will be controlled by a non-profit corporation and Senator Couzens will have nothing to do with its managreement.

FORTY prisoners in the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing staged a spectacular revolt against what they said was poor food, and refused to come out of the prison coal mine until their demands were granted. They built fires to keep the guards away from the shaft, but the smoke from these was turned backward and the mutineers tamely surrendered.

POOR old NRA, now just a thing of skin and bones, has a new set of managers. President Roosevelt issued an executive order extending the emaciated affair until April 1 next, in accordance with the resolution adopted by congress, and then announced that James L. O'Neill, vice president of the Guarantee Trust company of New York, would serve as administrator. Assisting the banker in the effort to persuade the pubiic, business men and labor to abide voluntarily by the codes no longer enforceable, and in the assembling of statistics, are Leon C. Marshall, director of the division of review; Prentiss L. Coonley, director of the division of business co-operation, and George L. Berry, assistant to the administrator, representing labor. Mr. Berry, who has been serving as a code administrator, is president of the International Pressmen's union and was once a candidate for nomination for Vice President of the United States.



G. L. Berry

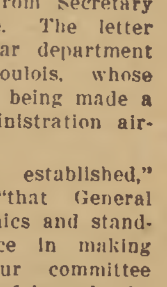
O'Neill, Marshall and Coonley were made directly responsible to the President. An advisory council of six members was named to help them. On this council are Charles Edison and Howell Cheney for industry; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers, for labor, and Emily Newell Blair and Walton H. Hamilton for consumers.

AFTER three bloody riots in Omaha's street car strike, in which one man was killed and nearly two hundred were injured, Gov. R. L. Cochran of Nebraska took charge of the situation. State troops were called out to preserve the public peace and the governor, meeting with representatives of the traction company, the central labor union and the strikers, ordered that the dispute be arbitrated immediately.

Illinois National Guardsmen were sent to Freeport where strikers at the Stover Manufacturing plant had fought with deputy sheriffs. Gov. Henry Horner intervened and a basis was reached for settling the strike, which had been in force since May 7. The men were granted a wage increase at least until September 1 next.

President Roosevelt succeeded in averting the threatened strike of bituminous coal miners. Both the operators and the United Mine Workers agreed to a truce until June 30, before which time it is hoped a new wage scale can be formulated and accepted.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN exonerated Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois of blame for the army air-mail fiasco and merely directed that he be reprimanded for making "inexact, unfair and misleading" statements to the house military affairs committee. This didn't suit certain members of the committee who insist the general should be removed from his command of the army air corps. Representatives William H. Rogers of New Hampshire and Lister Hill of Alabama said they would carry the matter to the floor of the house and there review the evidence the committee took.



Gen. Foulois

In holding that Foulois should receive more drastic punishment than a reprimand, Representative Rogers made public a letter from Secretary Dern to the committee. The letter followed an official War department statement clearing Foulois, whose friends insisted he was being made a scapegoat for the administration air-mail blunder.

"It is affirmatively established," Dern's letter read, "that General Foulois violated the ethics and standards of military service in making statements before your committee which not only were unfair and misleading to the committee itself but which also reflected upon the integrity of his brother officers."

PRESIDENT CARDENAS of Mexico appeared to have come victorious out of a crisis that was precipitated by Plutarco Elias Calles, who was opposing Cardenas' economic policies. The young president forced his entire cabinet to resign and formed another that would support him wholeheartedly.

The Mexican City Catholics, who are pretty much suppressed, took advantage of the presence in the capital of thousands of Rotarians attending their international convention, and held a monster parade with speeches calling for religious liberty.

STATE GAME NEWS

Montgomery, Ala., June 19.—Commissioner I. T. Quinn of the Alabama Game and Fisheries Department, expects this state to receive a share of an $8,000,000 appropriation voted by Congress for migratory waterfowl and other wildlife restoration.

Following passage by the house, the senate last week approved the Kleberg bill giving President Roosevelt authority to allocate this sum from the $4,880,000,000 relief appropriation for restoration purposes. The president is expected to sign the bill, which also simplifies the purchase of duck stamps, within the next week.

"This will give the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey $8,000,000 out of the federal relief aappropriation for the acquisition and development of breeding and feeding grounds for migratory waterfowl," declared Commissioner Quinn.

"It looks as though this bill will assure for wildlife the allocation we have been seeking and I am very hopeful it will take in the two areas in Baldwin and Mobile counties which have been inspected by federal authorities as possible sites for migratory waterfowl refuges and feeding grounds."

The Kleberg bill was the answer to the recent widely published statement of J. N. Darling, chief of the Biological Survey, criticizing Congress for failure to provide for a wildlife restoration program and it had the firm support of the National Committee on Wildlife Legislation of which the Alabama Commissioner is chairman.

TIRES may look alike on the outside, but on the inside where blowouts start, they are different. Firestone Tires are made blowout-proof by Gum-Dipping, a patented extra process which soaks every cotton cord and insulates every strand with pure liquid rubber. In fact, every 100 pounds of cotton cords absorb eight additional pounds of liquid rubber. This special process prevents internal friction and heat, the main cause of blowouts. No other make of tire is Gum-Dipped, yet you pay no more for Firestone blowout-proof protection than you are asked to pay for tires built without this patented safety construction feature.

The make of tires you buy for your car becomes a matter of vital importance when you realize that there were 882,000 automobile accidents in 1934 injuring 954,000 people and killing 36,000 and that 43,000 of these accidents were caused by blowouts, punctures and skidding.

Firestone High Speed Gum-Dipped Tires hold all world records on road and track for safety, speed, mileage and endurance. These records emphasize the undisputed evidence that Firestone Tires are not only blowout-proof but give greatest protection against skidding.

1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.

3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

For eight consecutive years Firestone Tires have been on the winning car in the dangerous Pike's Peak Race where a skid means death. This is undisputed evidence that Firestone gives car owners greatest protection against skidding.

Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Kelly Petillo won the race and broke the record over this 26-year-old rough brick track without tire trouble—in fact, not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles in 23½ hours, at an average speed of 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind. These are most amazing proofs of blowout protection ever known.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. This is made possible by the tough, wear-resisting tread built with higher shoulders and a wider, flatter contour. This thick, rugged, scientifically designed tread is held securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body by Firestone's patented construction of two extra layers of cords under the tread. This is a special construction feature not used in any other tire. Unequaled mileage records by thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

GOVERNMENT BANK UNSUITED TO U.S.

QUOTES PRESIDENT JACKSON

Extent and Diversity of This Country Presents Different Situation From Europe and Makes Regional Banking Necessary.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A refutation of arguments in favor of a government-owned central bank system for the United States is presented in a statement by R. S. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, based on exhaustive studies of European central banks. He also points out the disastrous consequences of previous central bank experiments in the United States.

"Our present regional Federal Reserve System under private ownership is infinitely better for this country than would be a government-owned and controlled central bank," Mr. Hecht says. "If history teaches us anything, it is that it is almost certain that a central bank so owned would be run to meet the varying exigencies of the government in power rather than to serve the commercial needs of the country."

Central banking has been tried twice in the United States, but was finally abolished because the credit control which the central banks exercised became objectionable and unpopular, he goes on to say.

What Andrew Jackson Said

"The continued existence of the Second Bank finally became a bitter political issue and President Jackson succeeded in abolishing it," Mr. Hecht says. "Permit me to quote from his farewell address: 'The immense capital and peculiar privileges bestowed upon it enabled it to exercise despotic sway over the other banks in every part of the country. From its superior strength it could seriously injure, if not destroy, the business of any of them which might incur its resentment. . . . If you had not conquered, the government would have passed from the hands of the many to the hands of the few; and this organized money power, from its secret conclave, would have dictated the choice of your highest officers. . . The forms of your government might, for a time, have remained, but its living spirit would have departed from it.'"

When the Wilson Administration considered banking reform it carefully kept away from vesting central banking powers in a single institution and instead introduced the regional idea by creating twelve reserve banks located in different economic and geographical sections of the country, Mr. Hecht says, a plan that has worked exceedingly well because the separate banks are under the guidance of men chosen on account of their intimate acquaintance with the problems and needs of their respective territories. He continues:

"The great size and diversity of America tends to make a central bank undesirable. The central banks of Europe such as the Banks of England, France and Germany, cover areas not as large as some of our states. A central bank in the United States on the other hand would be called upon to administer the financial policies of an area larger than all of Europe, in which there are quite a number of central banks.

Subservient to Popular Demands

"Moreover, history has proven that any banking system entirely owned and dominated by the government usually demonstrates much greater ability in aiding expansion of credit than in putting on the brakes at the right time to prevent undue inflation by restraining and contracting credit. This is easy to understand because in times of depression everyone is urging the government to make money and credit easy and to encourage expansion.

"On the other hand, it always has been and always will be a difficult task for any government to call a halt in time of apparent prosperity because in the very nature of things the government would be very sensitive to public criticism and would hesitate to take any action which would tend to curtail business activity. It is such undue susceptibility to popular demands which makes government banking inherently weak.

"Our studies show that of all the central banks at present existing there are only four whose stock is owned by the government. The newest central bank is that of Canada, which opened its doors only a few months ago after a most exhaustive study had been made of the experience of all nations with the result that the stock of the Bank of Canada is privately owned."

The American Bankers Association, Mr. Hecht says, is convinced that a central bank would not be in the interest of the public or the banks. This position, he added, is "well understood by the President and the leaders in his Administration for we have been absolutely frank with them in all of our discussions and have missed no opportunity for emphasizing that in our opinion no banking system will, in the long run, be sound if it is dominated entirely by the ever-changing political administrations. We should do all we can to keep our banking mechanism as far removed from partisan politics as possible."

T. C. I. COMPANY TO HOLD OPENING OF MODEL NEW STEEL-CLAD HOMESTEAD

June 22nd is the date set by officials of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company for the official opening of Tennesteel Homestead—the model, new steel-clad homestead development recently constructed by the company near the crest of Red Mountain, bordering the Montgomery Highway on the outskirts of Birmingham, to illustrate the advantages of sheet steel in homestead construction.

Governor Bibb Graves, Commissioner of Agriculture R. J. Goode, Dr. L. N. Duncan, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, and many prominent agricultural authorities have accepted invitations of the company to attend the opening of the new development.

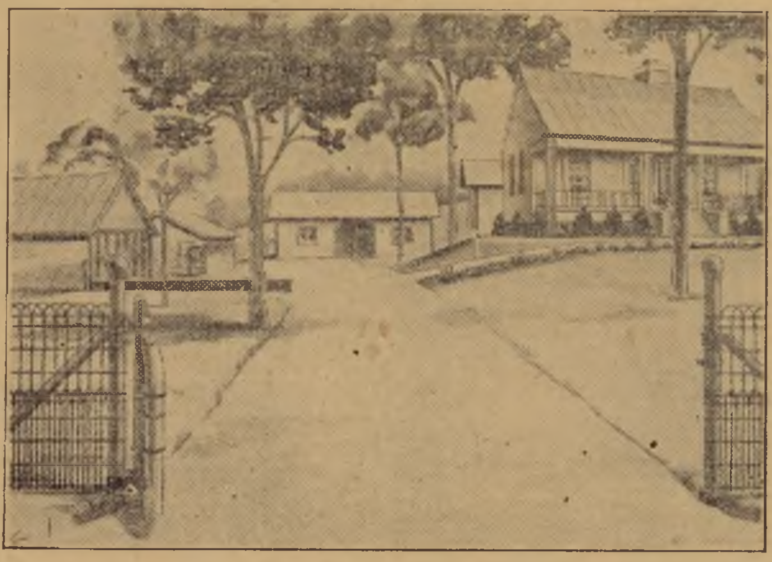
Tennesteel Homestead occupies a tract of four acres on the Southern slope of Red Mountain. It comprises a modern steel-clad cottage, two-car garage, barn, poultry house and corn crib. All buildings are constructed of Tennessee Sheet Steel, applied over wooden framing.

Of particular interest is the new steel-clad, four room cottage, which is equally adapted to the requirements of the farm or urban center. Tennessee Company officials foresee a vastly increased use of this type construction in rural districts and communities removed from fire protection and in urban areas where landlords have suffered heavy losses in recent years through vandalism.

Except for the wood framing, floors and trim, which are said to lend themselves better and more economically to small, low cost housing, the Tennesteel cottage, is built of Tennessee Steel Sheets rolled at Fairfield. Siding of the cottage is of painted steel weatherboard sheets, applied over a wooden frame; the roof of V-crimped steel sheets; the ceiling and interior walls of beaded steel sheets. Proper insulation both against summer's heat and winter's chill has been amply provided. Wall board insulation has been placed between the studs and both the outside and inside sheets. Four inches of mineral wool insulation is used between the joists and ceiling sheets.

Just south of the cottage is the durable and trim two-car garage, designed for use on farms or for city homes. Back of the home is the steel clad, sanitary poultry house, built to accommodate one hundred hens, where poultry is securely guarded against depredations of marauding animals, which often take such heavy toll of young chicks and feeds. A modern steel clad two-stall stable incorporates in both design and construction the best thought of Southern agricultural college authorities and practical farmers. It is planned especially to meet conditions found on the average Southern farm and like the other structures in the farmstead group is fire and lightning resistant. A steel corn crib is situated a few yards from the dwelling.

At Tennesteel Homestead, particular attention has been paid to the fencing. Various types of fencing, all made in the company's wire mill at Fairfield, have been erected to illustrate the different types produced. Ornamental lawn fences surround the front and sides of the premises. Fields are enclosed with American Wire Fence and National Wire Fence, the poultry yard with American Poultry and Rabbit Fence. All fence is erected on steel posts.



Grounds of the development will be farmed and used to demonstrate the advantages of Basic Slag, a plant food and soil conditioner, produced in the United States exclusively by the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company.

Tennesteel Homestead will be in charge of caretakers and open to visitors at all times, after June 22nd.

Camps Available For Girl Scouts

At last the season of camping has arrived and it behooves every active Girl Scout to center her attention on some type of camp since this is the big program of scouting in summertime.

Of course it's possible that all of our eighty registered scouts attend a permanent camp; yet there are day camps and overnight camps in reach of all, with careful planning on the part of both troop members and captains.

With careful consideration a number might avail themselves of the opportunity to attend Camp Coleman, the camp for Girl Scouts of Jefferson County. This camp opened on Thursday, June 27 to run for six weeks. Campers might register for one or two weeks periods.

A capable staff is always in charge there, and every effort put forth to make the camp profitable and worthwhile as well as a pleasure for the girls.

Three members of the counselor group have helped with the local Scout work. These are Evelyn Ware, Frances Lee and Ruth Lehman. The Tuscaloosa Council has opened their camp, Cherry Austin, to our girls also.

It is to be hoped that every Montevallo Girl Scout will weigh very carefully her ability to attend some camp this summer and consult with Mrs. O. B. Cooper, Council Camp Chairman, or her troop captain in regard to same.

In truth, if the camp is passed up, it is an opportunity gone.

Gay lives those members of the police narcotic squad lead. For instance, Detective Thomas Mason. Three months ago, the situation in lower Harlem having become quite bad, he was sent out to get the higher up in a dope ring. With that order, Mason disappeared and a dirty, ragged, shifty-eyed figure with a drooping shoulder appeared on uptown side streets. Soon the peddlers accepted him as "one of us." He engaged in various small deals. Then peddlers and addicts alike began to have hard luck. One by one, they were apprehended, their supplies confiscated and varying prison terms meted out. When 64 had been arrested, there was panic. It wasn't only shortage of supplies that caused the trembling. A mysterious shadow hung over the racket, the only explanation being that someone on the inside had turned stool pigeon and was selling out his friends.

Mason, with the arrest of the small fry, reported progress. But he wasn't satisfied—the big shot was still at liberty. Finally his weeks of intensive work were rewarded. He located the man he believed was the main source of supply. A deal was arranged, the suspect setting the meeting place. That pleased Mason since he knew the source of supply would be nearby. So when he passed over his money and received the goods, he threw his arms around the peddler's neck. The peddler, thinking Mason the stool pigeon who had caused all the trouble for his customers, put up a battle. But Mason's signal brought assistance and the dope peddler was taken to the hospital. Search of a nearby basement revealed $15,000 worth of drugs.

* * *

Mason, the dirt washed from his face, the stoop gone from his shoulders and his eyes again steady, is back on regular routine. What his next assignment will be, he doesn't know. None of the members of the narcotic squad do. That's why I said they lead gay lives. But maybe "gay" isn't the right word.

* * *

Remaining in Harlem for a little while longer, there was that eight-foot alligator which your volunteer snow shovelers captured in a manhole. It was quite an adventure and furnished a thrill for the entire neighborhood since alligators, especially eight-foot ones, are a novelty even in Harlem where so many strange things happen. One of the snow shovelers leaped down into the manhole onto the reptile's back. The alligator, a bit numbed by cold and ice dumped into its dwelling, didn't do much until it had been hauled up with a clothesline. Then it went into action. The snow shovelers did likewise with their tools in trade and soon the alligator was entirely null and void. It didn't seem to have much value dead, so late the same night, it was hauled away on a department of sanitation truck and probably ended at Barren island.

Curiously, while snow shovelers were engaged in an alligator battle in Harlem, a border patrolman was doing the same thing down in McMillen, Texas. The Lone Star alligator, killed with a rifle, was only six feet long, however. Despite that, it was held to be the largest alligator ever killed in the Rio Grande valley. Thus, Harlem alligators are bigger. Whether they are better, of course, is open to question.

Reptiles of various kinds are not uncommon in the City of the Seven Million. Only the other evening, a gentleman, after a somewhat liquorish party, on returning to his midtown apartment, encountered on the stairway what looked like a snake about five or six feet in length. Not being a man easily fooled, he kicked the snake out of the way and thus discovered that it wasn't imagination. When he was revived, he learned that one of the pets of a vaudeville actress who dwells on the upper floor had started out for an airing.

$161 in Ontario — $28 In Alabama

Which Would You Rather Pay?

The people of Alabama could pay off ALL of the state's debts by paying only $28 each. For the people of the Province of Ontario to pay off all its debts each would have to pay $161.

Which Would You Rather Pay?

Ontario, you know, is where certain political theorists who were either careless with their facts or who had some political axe to grind (perhaps some of them got soft government jobs) promised the people of Ontario that if their government would only go into the electric power business, everything would be lovely. They promised that the power plants would not only pay for themselves but that they would make enough money with which to pay off other public debts.

What Actually Has Happened?

The public debt of Ontario, where the so-called "successful" government owned and politically operated electric power venture is located, has increased to $161 per person, almost SIX TIMES MORE THAN IN ALABAMA where power development is by private organizations such as this company. In Alabama, the state debt is only $28 per person. This company helps pay the taxes caused by this debt.

IN ONTARIO, the home owners and other property owners have to pay the increased taxes caused by the losses of the unsuccessful political power business which the government is engaged in, because that business pays no taxes.

The People of Ontario Got a GOLD BRICK

Is that what people of similar ideas are trying to foist upon the people of the United States? They tell a pretty story which, IF TRUE, would be interesting. But they never tell the WHOLE TRUTH.

Be wary of those who promise to put money into your pocket. They may want to get their hands in so they can take money OUT while they have you believing they're putting it in.

PERFECTIONISM

By Rev. A. J. Cox

In the humility born of a true experience of Jesus Christ is none of the cocksureness so characteristic of a certain type of American, that naive assumption of 'having arrived' at perfection. Jesus' purity alone drives home the truth about human nature in a way that leaves him who sees the vision and recognizes the disparity between that revelation and himself with a recurring sense of unworthiness. "Lord, have mercy upon me," is a petition that arises naturally from the heart of the twice born.

Skeptical and superficial critics, sensing an inner assurance and security in surrendered people, do of course, often read into the picture what is not there. For example, it is sometimes said that witnessing Christians think that they are better than others. Because they profess to believe in the absolute standards of the New Testament, they are stigmatized as "perfectionists." In reality, those who seriously accept such words as "Be ye perfect, as your father in heaven is perfect," may be the last people in the world to look with satisfaction on their own daily lives. They may be the first to condemn "perfectionism" and to classify themselves as sinners, their fellowship a fellowship of sinners.

But let it be especially noted that such an attitude does not empty these words of Jesus of all meaning. Disciples, in the true sense, soon reveal certain definite facts about the perfection which Jesus is recommending which are neither vacuous nor unimportant.

First of all, a surrender to the Lord Jesus Christ brings a perfection of 'direction'. Like the discovery of a mountain-trail, the acceptance of the four absolutes—honesty, purity, unselfishness and love — shows which way a man should go, and shows it with precision. A mountain climber is not usually interested in bypaths; only the trail that leads to the peak commands his attention. For him that is the perfect trail, for it alone, takes him where he wants to go.

Conceivably there may be another path close by; it may be just as clear a trail and just as beautiful, but if it misses the summit by just a little bit, it will not bear comparison. So with a ship, there is only one perfect direction; however fast the speed, however constant the progress, a variation of even a point on the compass changes everything.

There is a Christian philosopher who is fond of saying, "If I did as well for a man as Ronald (a collie) does for a dog, I would be satisfied." The perfection of Christ's followers includes also what someone has termed a perfection of 'effort." To return to the mountain, it is comparatively unimportant where one discovers the trail, in the shady forest at the foot or farther up on the rugged mountainside. But once on the path, it makes considerable difference whether one spends the next few hours in, let us say, gathering berries or in climbing. If there is a time for relaxation, there is also a time for stiff, concentrated exercise. Jesus expects the climber to use whatever strength and skill and perseverance he has, and climb. Given your size, your experience, your condition, what is your best? That is the question.

Finally, there is a more subtle way in which a Christian should experience perfection. This has to do with the experience of forgiveness, the change in inner man. The new life is marked by a mysterious freedom, which is definitely God-given, and relates somehow directly to the person of Jesus Christ and to the cross and to all that he wrought there. It is not a sense of "getting off Scot-free" from past mistakes; nor is it promised escape from future difficulty, although with conversion there does come a certain bouyancy which lightens every load. It is rather a feeling of being made clean, of being allowed a new deal, a dispensation from on high, quite undeserved and unearned. Gratefully one looks ahead, up the trail. Burdens seem lighter. And one is conscious even as he sees the ascent and comprehends its steepness, that he is newly fit and newly ready to undertake the climb.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR FREE STATE TEXT BOOKS

Dr. J. A. Keller, state superintendent of education and secretary of the state textbook purchasing board, made the following statement with the release of the 1935 adoption of textbooks:

"Plans are under way to institute a system of free textbooks in Alabama. We hope that at least a part of this plan will be executed this year. Wherever possible, the Textbook Purchasing Board has selected the lowest price available, the State Textbook Committee having heretofore given attention to the very important business of selecting the best books available at these prices.

"The cost of the books to the individual pupil in all grades, with the exception of the sixth and eight, has been materially reduced. The total bill of expense in the elementary grades, assuming that every child is provided with basal books for his or her grade, represents a saving of approximately $280,000.00. A total saving of approximately $87,000.00 is made by the new adoption on the required books for the several high school grades.

"In the first grade alone the total price of basal books per child has been reduced from $1.56 to $1.02, or by 35 per cent. The enrollment in this grade averages annually about 165,000. At a saving of 54 per cent per child, the new adoption makes a total saving of approximately $89,000.00 for this grade alone.

"An obvious advantage of a free distribution of textbooks is the fact that every child is supplied at the expense of the State with all the books he may need to do his work successfully. It is well known that under the present system of purchasing books by the individual consumer, there has been and is now a vast shortage of books among the pupils of the entire State. The small sale of textbooks during the past two years is proof of this. The total sales of the State Textbook Depository for the past two years was only about $500,000.0o. In many sections of the State pupils are provided with less than one half of the books necessary to do their work. In some section of the State they have less than one-third of the needed books. This shortage of books is no doubt largely the cause of the larger proportion of failures in Alabama over other sections of the country. Approximately fifty per cent of the pupils in the first grade in Alabama fail of promotion each year as compared with twenty-five per cent failures for the country at large. The average enrollment for the first grade has been around 165,000 annually for several years. The enrollment in the second grade is annually about 80,000. The cost of re-teaching the failures for the first grade alone amounts to approximately $1,000,000.oo annually. We do not believe that our children have less native ability than the children of other States. We believe that the high percentage of failures can be materially reduced by the selection of the best books available and by getting them into the hands of all the children."

The State Textbook Purchasing Board is composed of Governor Bibb Graves, State Superintendent of Education J. A. Keller, and Honorable C. B. Rogers, Chairman of the State Board of Administration.

FORD CARS ARE BEING BUILT MORE STYLISH

Style in commercial transportation is being emphasized more and more, according to Mr. G. T. Towery, local Ford dealer, and the 1935 Ford V-8 commercial cars and trucks are an outstanding example of this trend, he points out.

"The new Ford V-8 sedan delivery and the panel delivery cars are especially attractive," Mr. Towery says.

"They are cars with which the smartest store can add to its prestige. However, the popularity of the new Ford V-8 commercial car types is not limited to proprietors of exclusive shops. The prices are so low that they are in demand throughout a wide range of businesses and industries.

"Delivery equipment is a traveling billboard and it should always reflect the prestige of the company or individual using it. Trade of the so-called smart shop would be lost if deliveries were made in old and battered automotive equipment, and the prestige of the concern would soon be lost. No matter what the nature of the business, good-looking delivery equipment increases its standing with its customers.

"One of the most popular of the 1935 Ford commercial creations is the cab 'pick up'. This Ford V-8 is a small truck which combines attractice appearance with utility industry.

"The 'pick-up' model, like the Ford V-8 commercial car, has the same 123-inch spring base as the passenger car. This perimts increased load space and re-ditribution of weight, yet all the ease of handling is retained with the continuance of he 112-inch wheelbase.

Aline Bright, head of English Department of Murphy High School at Mobile, will lead the next discussion group on Vocabulary Mastery and Related Language Skills. Miss Elizabeth Coleman, of the University of Alabama, will be heard on this program.

Dr. W. L. Spencer, of the State Department of Education, is discussion chairman for the closing session. At that time a report of the committee on findings and course of study recommendations will be made by Dr. Paul Honchel. of Florence State Teachers College.

There will be a display of teaching materials and a textbooks library, with copies of the adopted texts for the use of conference members, in Palmer Hall. It has been announced that there will be no conference fee and that the only expense to delegates will be for actual expense. The recreational facilities of the college will be available for those attending the session, while the Progressive Education Demonstration High and Elementary schools will be open for their observation. Requests for dormitory registrations are now being received by Dr. A. W. Vaughan, of Alabama College chairman of the conference committee.

BETTER RURAL SCHOOLS IN THE STATE URGED

Education Body Is Told That County Children Are Being Neglected

The inequality of educational opportunities of rural children, as compared with those of urban centers in Alabama and other Southern states, was declared "the most challenging problem now facing education in the South," by P. O. Davis, executive secretary of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, in an address Sunday before the Southern central regional conference of the Progressive Education Association.

Mr. Davis quoted figures showing that in 1930 Alabama spent $42 per child for urban schools and only $23 per child for rural schools; that the average number of school days in 1932-33 per student in Alabama was 168.4 for urban boys and girls and 104.9 for rural students; that in 1929-30 the average value of school property per student for urban children in Alabama was $259, as compared with only $74 for rural children.

The notion that Southern people are inferior in intellect and ideals, harbored by "more than a few people in certain parts of this nation," was attacked by Mr. Davis.

Mr. Davis defended the processing taxes designed to help agriculture as "a protective policy coming 117 years late."

"It is said," asserted Davis, "that the processing tax on cotton is destroying our export business and increasing our import business . . . The truth is that the processing tax has nothing to do with exports and imports of cotton goods because it is refunded on exports and foreign spinners who ship their products to us pay it the same as do American spinners."

FORD V-8 TOURING SEDAN IS POPULAR WITH PUBLIC

With the approach of the vacation season the minds of the motor car buying public is turning to the subject of motor cars—and more especially to motor cars that have suitable equipment to improve the vacation trip.

Perhaps that is the reason that Ford dealers report such great interest in the Ford V-8 touring sedan, for here is a car with exceptional baggage carrying facilities which are bound to win the heart and the applause of everyone who has ever tried to make a long trip with the family's luggage stored under his or her feet or jammed inconveniently between the legs and feet of the rear seat passengers.

The new Ford touring sedan has a trunk which is a built-in feature of the car with about two and one half times as much luggage capacity as the trunk which was formerly sold as an extra for the Ford sedan.

"To scores of motorists their car is their means of transportation when they go on cross-country trips," said Towery Motor Co., local Ford dealers. "To them this trunk means that they have ample room for all the baggage of the family without crowding. This adds materially to the comfort of the touring party and the pleasure of the trip, especially when it is a long journey.

REGIONAL CONFERENCE CLOSED LAST SATURDAY

The second annual Regional Conference of the Progressive Education Association, held at Alabama College, came to a close Saturday morning with the discussion by Dr. W. W. Beatty and Dr. Alice V. Keliher of the Administration of the Progressive School.

Ralph E. Wager, of Emory University, presided at the meeting. The speakers considered the following questions: Administrative problems in initiating progressive practices in public schools; adjusting the curriculum to the child whose individual rate of progress is faster or slower than the average; methods of recording and reporting to parents children's school progress; and how to make faculty meetings and teachers meetings a vital part of the school program.

The conference program committee included Miss Norma Smith, Regional Director of the Progressive Education Association; E. G. McGehee, of Montgomery; Dr. M. L. Orr and A. C. Anderson, of Mnotevallo.

Bride Didn't Arrive Used A Substitute

Failure of his bride, Lillie Mae Montgomery, of Oxford, to show up for the wedding Monday night did not deter Douglas Lacey from getting married. Another dusky damsel, Nancy Jones, saved the occasion by taking Lillie Mae's place and becoming the wife of Douglas.

The wedding was sponsored by Hendrick-Hudson Post of the American Legion, at the Hut. Attendance was good. Net proceeds amounted to $10, which goes into the Post funds for community service.

The Legion Post expresses its thanks to merchants of Montevallo for donation of the gifts, and to those who supported the event by their attendance.

Game And Fish Conservation Ass'n Is Planning Big Membership Drive

Montgomery, Ala.—Picking its way slowly but surely, the newly organized Jackson County Game and Fish Conservation Association has begun a vigorous membership drive after carrying the message of conservation to something like 3,000 farmers in the county.

Since the association was organized April 23, Secretary J. F. Hodges of Scottsboro reports that 20 community meetings have been held in various parts of the county and he estimates at least 3,000 landowners listened attentively to an explanation of the club's motives and objectives.

"We found all of them intensley interested in the protection of the county's game and fish resources," said Mr. Hodges. "It was our desire to build up public sentiment before we undertook a membership campaign.

"We explained the purpose of the movement and let it soak in before we started our drive and now they are coming in fast. We had 132 members to start with and expect to enroll between 300 and 400 before very long."

Mr. Hodges said the association is trying to persuade the Tennessee Valley Authority to establish a game preserve in Jackson County. At a meeting in June the association organized a "Hawk Club."

It offered 25 cents a head for each hawk killed up to 200. Thereafter each hawk would be worth 10 cents to the member killing it.

As an inspiration for a fish planting program it hopes to undertake in cooperation with the state department of game and fisheries, the association is planning a fish fry in July and has asked James M. White to show some of the department's educational films depicting its fish cultural activities. A moving picture theater has been reserved for the occasion.

The organization also is anxious to perfect a warden system that will protect certain areas in the county now vulnerable to non-residents who fish and hunt illegally.

New residences are now under construction for Barney Burnette and Sam Klotzman.

The first tour will leave Birmingham Thursday, July 18, via Jacksonville, Clyde Line to New York. Several days may be spent in both New York and Washington, thence return to Birmingham.

The second tour will leave Birmingham Wednesday, August 14, going by Bristol. Two days may be spent in Washington, several days in New York, thence return by Washington and Bristol.

These tours will be under the personal direction and escort of Mrs. J. W. Luke, of Birmingham, who is prominently identified throughout Alabama and is a successful tour operator.

South's Governors To Attend Rodeo

Montgomery — The governor of Maryland has definitely decide dto attend Alabama's seventh annual deep sea fishing rodeo, five other governors are pondering the invitation extended to them by Gov. Bibb Graves and T. J. Rester, as the personal representative of Mayor Cecil Bates of Mobile has gone all the way to Hollywood to persuade Will Rogers to enter.

In reply to Governor Graves mid-June invitation to the governors of the forty-eight states to attend the rodeo as guests of the Alabama Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo Association, Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, advised that he plans to attend and requested all the information possible about the big angling contest that will be held off Dauphin Island July 22, 23 and 24.

The five executives indicating they might come to the rodeo are Gov. H. G. Crump, of West Virginia; Gov. J. M. Futrell, of Arkansas; Gov. Olin D. Johnson, of South Carolina; Gov. R. L. Cochran of Nebraska, and Gov. Louis J. Mann of Maine. Pressing business or other vacation plans interferred with the attendance of a majority of the others, but Gov. H. G. Hoffman of New Jersey, asked for a "rain check."

With registrations 100 per cent greater than they were this far in advance of the rodeo last year, L. G. Adams of Mobile, president of the rodeo association, expects the 1935 tarpon-busting tournament to shatter the attendance record of 525 anglers set at last summer's rodeo. Boat chairman Albert Gill reports craft have been entered by boatmen all the way along the coast from Pensacola, Fla., to New Orleans and that six boats have been chartered for a party of 60 southern Coca-Cola company dealers.

Game and Fisheries Commissioner I. T. Quinn, who is chairman of the prize committee, has completed the official prize list and announces that it will include eight complete deep sea fishing and surf casting outfits. In addition to these prizes a huge "grab bag" is being filled with valuable merchandise by Mobile merchants to be distributed at a big fish fry on the night of the annual liar's contest.

Meanwhile, Mayor Bates has a large crew of workmen busy repairing the Fort Gaines barracks on the island, putting roads and driveways in shape and repairing the pier. The rodeo is held in lower Mobile Bay in the Gulf waters surrounding Dauphin Island. The island is 30 miles southwest of Mobile and lies in the mouth of the channel leading into the bay. The prize game fish is the "silver king" tarpon, but competition always is keen in a dozen other competitive events for similar game fish.

RETAIL FORD DELIVERIES PAST HALF-MILLION MARK

Dearborn, Mich.—Retail deliveries for the year to date of Ford V-8 cars, commercial cars and trucks passed the half-million mark during the last 10-day period in May, it was announced today at the home office of the Ford Motor Company.

May was the third consecutive month this year in which retail deliveries exceeded 100,000 units, it was said.

The last 10-day period in May was the second best 10-day period for retail deliveries in the last five years.

Retail deliveries in the first five months averaged better than 100,000 units per month.

The total of retail deliveries of Ford trucks and commercial cars in the first five months was 66 per cent ahead of the total for the similar five-month period last year and greater than the total for any other similar period since 1930.

Retail deliveries of Lincoln motor cars in the last 10-day period in May were greatest in volume of any 10-day period thus far this year.

Mr. Pattillo of Hartselle, who has been visiting his sister-in-law, Mrs. W. P. McConaughy, became seriously ill and was carried to South Highlands Infirmary Wednesday morning by Jeter's ambulance.

Bad company is something which usually does not improve with age.

General Johnson may not be a master mind but he certainly has a master voice.

It appears that the revenue bill of the State legislature will pass into law without any provision for homestead exemption.

The State revenue bill to be adopted as a law sets the gross annual salary of tax assessors and tax collectors at $5,400.

The old fashioned woman who used to bake a dozen loaves of golden brown bread every Saturday now has a married daughter who gets sore if her husband brings home an unsliced loaf from the bakery.

If this invention which will enable parties in a telephone conversation to see each other is perfected, will we go to the phone and find that we have got the wrong face.

Plans announced at the capitol in Montgomery Tuesday night were for the Senate and House to pass Wednesday what is generally regarded as the administration revenue bill and adjourn until next Wednesday, when the bill must be signed in the presence of both houses of the legislature. It is expected that when the legislature recesses next week it will again convene the second week in August to complete the seventeen remaining days of the present session.

A PLEA FOR BETTER RURAL SCHOOLS

The appeal made by Mr. P. O. Davis, of Auburn, at Alabama College last Sunday, on behalf of better rural schools in Alabama is regarded as another significant contribution to a cause that has long been recognized by many as one of Alabama's outstanding educational problems.

Mr. Davis is executive Secretary of Alabama Polytechnic Institute. He was here to speak on the program of the Southern Central Regional Conference of the Progressive Education Association.

Practical common-sense analysis and solution of present problems is known to be a principle of practice peculiar to Mr. Davis. His approach to the common school question in this instance last Sunday bears the mark of his genius in analysis.

It is no new experience for us to hear the declaration that "country children are being neglected" in educational planning.

The statements made by Mr. Davis, however, do not have the same sound as similar ones frequently heard from politicians.

Mr. Davis speaks from a different viewpoint from the politician. He is a man associated with higher education in Alabama. His warnings with reference to the opportunities afforded the beginners in education should bring a measure of encouragement to many of us who, with our children, are in the rear ranks, and hoping, seeking a future opportunity to get up to the front.

The practical thing for Alabama to do is to guarantee full opportunity to beginners in education. The most of the beginners are in rural communities and must depend upon rural schools for their early educational training.

We welcome the assertions of Mr. Davis in his appeal for the beginners, the boys and girls of the country districts.

If we had in Alabama adequate educational facilities to give every available boy and girl a high school education (to which they are entitled at the hands of the State) we would have to make our colleges and higher institutions double the present size in order to accommodate the numbers that would be knocking at the doors for admission to higher education.

Instruments have just been invented which enable scientists to measure accurately the interior of the human skull. We are informed that Congress is going to pass a law against their use.

Nye Committee Points Need of Protecting Defense Funds From Shipbuilders—Congress Divorces Tax-the-Rich Bill From Nuisance Tax.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SENATOR NYE of North Dakota and his committee on munitions do not have a very high opinion of American shipbuilders and they feel that strong legislation is needed to keep them from confusing "public defense needs with their private pocketbooks." Therefore the committee, in a preliminary report, asks that laws be enacted to do these things:

Senator Nye

1. Prevent "collusion" in bidding for navy construction jobs.
2. Prevent American patents from getting into the hands of foreign powers.
3. Limit profits to 5 per cent of the total cost to the government, in cases where the government assumes the risks of the enterprise, or to 10 per cent where the government does not.
4. Require that shipbuilders' "lobbyists" register with the government and disclose their income and expenditures.

The committee finds, in the matter of collusion, that there was "telepathy" among shipyard officials so that in bidding for many contracts each concern was able to get the contracts it wanted at profits that ran as high as 36 per cent. It says the navy has been at the mercy of the shipyards in preparing plans for war vessels and also in determining what were fair prices.

Construction of naval vessels is declared to be more costly in private yards than in government yards.

"While the evidence is not all in," th report says, "the indications are that the private yards cost the government from one to two million dollars more per cruiser than the navy yards."

The committee charges big shipbuilders with breaking up the Geneva naval limitation conference in 1927 and immediately launching a price-increase campaign that "made profits of 35 and 25.4 and 36.9 per cent on the cruisers."

LEGISLATIVE administration leaders, for a while in a frenzy of anxiety to hitch the President's tax-the-rich program to the resolution extending the so-called "nuisance" excise taxes, thereby speeding it through the Washington legislative factory in four days, suddenly disclaimed any intention of such procedure, and let the $500,000,000 tax extension ride along unappended. Congress will consider the new taxation program during early July.

This program is expected to produce some $340,000,000 in new revenue, principally from inheritance and gift taxes, increased taxes on the highest income brackets, and corporation taxes graduated from 10 per cent to 17½ per cent.

The program has been held up as a sweetmeat to placate the sugar palate of Louisiana's Kingfish. Actually, a wealth of $340,000,000 shared among 120,000,000 Americans would amount to about $2.83 a head—all of which would be applied to a public debt of $29,000,000,000 and a budget of $8,500,000,000, anyway.

The net taxable worth of the 133 estates which paid taxes based on a valuation of $1,000,000 each in 1933 was $284,000,000. If the government had taxed these estates 100 per cent, seizing them entirely, they would have been worth only $2.37 a head to the American population. If the government confiscated all income of more than $1,000,000 in 1933, it would have taken an army of trucks loaded with small change to distribute it, for each American would get only 45 cents. And the general opinion of administration leaders in the senate was that the taxes obtained from the rich might possibly eliminate the necessity of the "nuisance" taxes after another year.

YOUTH between sixteen and twenty-five will be served $50,000,000 for a nation-wide job hunt and further training of young men and women to hold jobs after they get them, through President Roosevelt's new "national youth administration," itself administered under the works-relief program by Miss Josephine Roche, assistant secretary of the treasury, and Aubrey Williams, assistant to Harry L. Hopkins, works-progress administrator.

The new organization will endeavor to:

1. Find employment in private industry for unemployed youth.
2. Train and retrain for industrial technical and professional employment opportunities.
3. Provide for a continuing attendance at high school and college.
4. Provide work-relief projects designed to meet the needs of youth.

The average payment for youths on relief work will be $15 a month; those going to high school would be given $6 a month, and those attending college $15 a month.

The problem of what to do with the youth who finishes school, supposedly equipped to make his real start in life, and finds what few jobs there are are given to older and married men and women, as well as the youth who is unable to finish school because of poor circumstances, has been one of the most discouraging aspects of the entire depression.

LIKE most Utopias, the new one in Alaska's Matanuska valley has been reported a nest of discontent: the disillusionment apparently was manifest even quicker than usual in this case. Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin farm families who made up a large share of the recent expedition to begin life anew in the North Pacific territory drafted a list of grievances for the FERA trouble shooter, Eugene Carr.

Many of them said the project was misrepresented, that the land is poor and that housing is not what they were led to believe it would be. Neither are medical service, school facilities, seeds disbursed for planting, the climate and prices for groceries measuring up to advance word-pictures. There is considerable jealousy existent over the distribution of farm land. And to top it all off, the Utopians want government pay for their work.

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON, once ambitious to direct the $3,000,000,000 public works program, was named to direct a comparatively small part of the President's now $4,000,000,000 works-relief schedule. As director of works-relief in New York city, he will co-ordinate the program in that area.

Gen. Johnson

With the famed fighting jaw determinedly set, he revealed the four conditions under which he accepted the new job:

He will get no pay, only $7,800 for a year's expenses. (He got $6,000 a year for this purpose during most of his time as keeper of the Blue Eagle.) His job will end October 1, unless he and the administration agree that it shall continue. He will devote a minimum of four days a week to his official duties. And he will consult with Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia as far as possible, but will be responsible to Harry L. Hopkins alone.

Electricity Cheaper Than Other Fuels

"Your objective for giving 85% of customers using more electricity, lower rates, so that everybody can get electricity even cheaper than the low rate at which they now buy, marks you as one of the progressive businesses of this state," writes Mr. James L. Hicks, of Talladega, Ala.

"For the past five years I have cooked and heated water electrically and run an electrical refrigerator. My consumption has been between 500 and 1000 kilowatt hours, and I honestly believe that I am doing this cheaper with electricity than I could with other fuels." Adv Alabama Power Co

THE BOY WHO WILL "INHERIT" $1,706
And How It Is Changing His Whole Future

A boy born near the end of the Great War is the son of parents who were determined from the first that when he grew up he should not be as poor as they were when they married.

The father, something of a philosopher, desired that his son should inherit three highly coveted possessions. "One of these," he said, "is health and the second is education. We shall do what we can to aid him in securing these and they will be the means of his acquiring the third, namely material well-being."

Out of their limited income these parents, through a plan suggested by an agency representative of The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York, set aside $83.82 a year. This money has paid for an endowment policy on the life of the father guaranteeing $1500 at maturity or in the event of his death.

It is now nearly 18 years since this action was taken. It has not only insured the father but also the boy's chance to have a college education which otherwise might have been impossible.

When this fund is entirely accumulated it will amount, as anticipated, to $1,706 which will provide approximately $50 per month to be paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York for the 36 months the son will spend in college. This income may not be enough for certain colleges in some parts of the country and it may need to be supplemented by additional funds, but it is the difference to him of college or no college.

By this program these parents, working with The Mutual Life, have fortified themselves and their son against adversity. Their boy is going to college and will acquire one of the world's most coveted possessions.

If you wish to think further about planning a college education for your son or daughter by providing a thorough life insurance for the amount you may consider necessary, send for the new Mutual Life booklet "The Boy Who Will 'Inherit' $1,706 and How It is Changing His Whole Future."

Planning An Income At 55, 60 or 65

Plan to have an income for yourself at a time when you may need it. Arrange this with a Mutual Life representative. He will explain how it may be done under the standard forms of ordinary Life, Limited Payment Life, or Endowment insurance, all of which give you life insurance protection in addition to the income you may wish to provide under one of the Mutual Life's "Modes of Settlement" plans.

Or you can arrange for a Mutual Life Retirement Income Contract with income guaranteed at 55, 60 or 65 (as you may choose) to continue for the rest of your life. Make convenient payments annually, semi-annually, quarterly or monthly.

Do not complicate this all-important subject by trying to think about it alone. A Mutual Life representative will explain it in simple, non-technical terms, without obligation, for your present or future consideration. The attached card or a letter or phone call, will bring the information desired.

LET US MAKE YOUR VACATION TRIP SAFER

BEFORE you start on your holiday trip, let us completely inspect your car. There is no charge for this service and it will assure you of a safer and more enjoyable trip.

For the convenience and safety of car owners Firestone has established more than 500 Auto Supply and Service Stores throughout the country, and thousands of Firestone Dealers are also equipped with complete Auto Supplies and complete Service Departments, to test and service your tires, brakes, batteries, spark plugs, in addition to power lubrication and crank case service.

AVOID THE DANGER OF BLOWOUTS

Firestone removes the danger of blowouts by preventing their main cause—internal friction and heat. This is accomplished by Gum-Dipping.

THERE ARE THREE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS THAT WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM OF WHAT TIRES TO BUY:

1 "Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

— Recent tests by a leading University show that Firestone High Speed Non-Skid Tires stop a car 15% quicker than any other of the leading makes.

—Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires have the most amazing records for being blowout-proof of any tires ever built. In the gruelling 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis, May 30th, every one of the 33 cars was equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. Not one of the 33 drivers had tire trouble of any kind.

Ab Jenkins drove his 5,000 pound car on Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires over the hot salt beds of Utah, 3,000 miles, averaging 127.2 miles per hour, with temperatures as high as 120°, without tire trouble of any kind.

3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

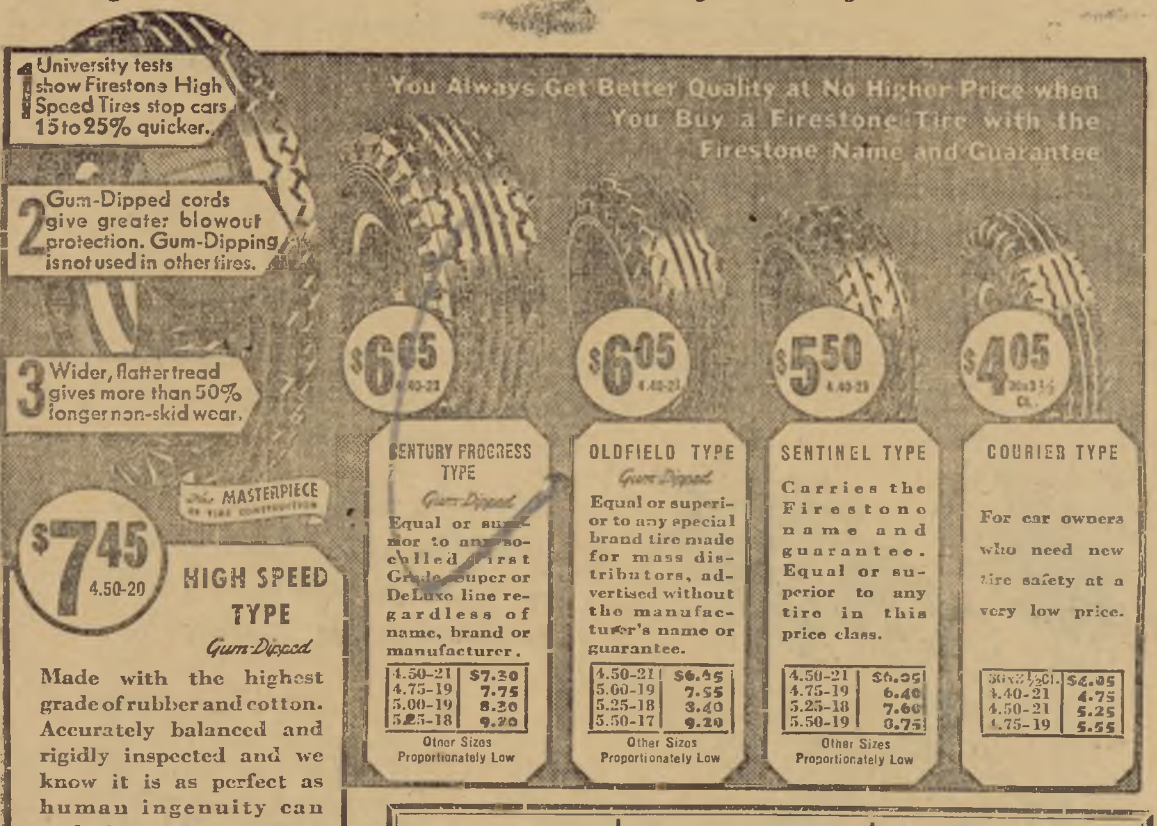
— Firestone High Speed Tires not only give you more than 50% longer wear, but also lowest cost per mile. In fact, unequaled mileage records of thousands of car owners add undisputed evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Equip your car with a set of Firestone Gum-Dipped Non-Skid Tires, the safest tires ever built and avoid the dangers of skidding and blowouts.



1 University tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop cars 15 to 25% quicker.
3 Wider, flatter tread gives more than 50% longer non-skid wear.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND WEAR AN OVERCOAT IN SUMMERTIME?

Actually it's lots worse to stay indoors and cook on a blistering, sizzling midsummer day than to wear an overcoat outdoors in July or August. If your husband doesn't believe it, let him try it sometime.

Tell your husband about this. Bring him 'round to see us and we'll help you sell him on that cool kitchen this summer.

VOLUME 2, NUMBER 16 MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA. FRIDAY, JULY 12, 1935 SUBSCRIPTION $1.50 PER YEAR

TEN MILLION IS GIVEN ALABAMA

TOTAL OF 172 PROJECTS LISTED IN DISPATCH FROM WASHINGTON

Washington, July 3.—A partial works program for Alabama, embracing 172 projects for which government will allot $10,196,364, received today the approval of President Roosevelt

Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, said the state and its subdivisions had agreed to provide an additional $2,848,642 for the projects, which were expected to employ a maximum of near 30,000 persons on relief.

The president, at his regular press conference today, read off projects from the Alabama and Georgia programs to illustrate the usefulness of the works progress plan.

Hopkins gave the estimated number of daily employees after the Alabama program is launched as 6,200 the first month, 12,400 the second, 28,000 for the third to eighth inclusive, 24,800 the ninth, 21,700 tenth, 20,400 eleventh and 13,166 the twelfth.

It was understood the money for getting things started would be available in about 10 days.

Of the Alabama allocation, $5,759,946 was for the construction and improvement of secondary roads and streets. The sponsors will provide $1,019,350. These projects will number 93.

Projects of the state government, including its subdivisions, will get $2,015,845, and the sponsors will furnish $371,047.

There were 59 of these.

A third type of project, including sanitation in local communities, prevention of stream pollution, and miscellaneous undertakings, will cost $5,269,203, and the sponsor swill participate to the extent of $1,458,251.

To complete the Alabama projects approved today, officials estimated 15,581 unskilled laborers will be given work and will have the opportunity to earn $4,127,305 in a year. The set-up would employ 5,237 skilled laborers at a cost of $2,627,000. There will be jobs for 1,396 technical men and clerks who will divide an aggregate payroll of $750,478 during the life of the projects.

Work on municipal airports, now maintained on leased land in some parts of Alabama, are approved under this program contingent upon the municipalities obtaining title to the fee. It is stipulated in the approvals that no work will be done at airports of this character until title to the land actually vests in the municipality.

Shelby County, culverts and bridges, $18,677 and $8,657. Another project for Shelby County is stated as $16,088 and $16,176.

It appears from the above figures taken from a news dispatch from Washington concerning the matter, that Shelby County is comfortably well represented in the first list of work projects announced. From these figures it appears that Shelby County projects listed are allotted a total of $62,229, against which the sponsors of the projects must provide from local funds a total of $28,504.

Montgomery Sportsmen Will Form Association

Montgomery— Meeting a demand of longstanding, Montgomery sportsmen are planning to organize a permanent county-wide conservation association this month.

The meeting was first called for June 20 by Sheriff Haygood Paterson at the urging of a number of nimrods and anglers, but due to previously arranged engagements of some of the speakers it was deferred until early July.

Sheriff Paterson, one of the county's outstanding sportsmen, said a new date would be agreed upon and announced very shortly. He has invited Game Commissioner I. T. Quinn to address the sportsmen and James M. White of the State Game and Fisheries Department, will show several reels of Alabama wildlife pictures.

The purpose of the organization as outlined in advance by its backers, will be to cooperate with the Game and Fisheries Department in the enforcement of game and fish laws, place protective barriers around the game and fish resources of Montgomery county with particular attention to be paid to the dynamiter and trapper.

"Montgomery county offers an excellent opportunity for fish and game protection," Sheriff Paterson declared. "There are many power lakes near the city which are well stocked with bass and other game fish which should have the protection of organized sportsmen.

"Seining, trapping and dynamiting should and must be abolished and such practices can only be combatted successfully if every hunter and fisherman lends his support in law enforcement.

"Jefferson county recetly formed an association of sportsmen with a charter enrollent of 1,000 members. Montgomery county has just as many sporting enthusiasts and this county should effect an organization equally as strong."

WE FAIR-WEATHER HEROES

When your tummy acts in a funny way to which you are not accustomed, you call up a physician for a little friendly advice. When your teeth disturb you, you get to a dentist as quickly as possible. When your eyes, ears or throat, or all of them, trouble you, you hunt up the kind of doctor that limits his activities to the eyes, ears, and throat.

If you are a farmer, and your mule grows ill, you call in a horse doctor.

If, as some do, you feel full of sin, you consult one gifted in prayer.

If your car fails, you call in a mechanic.

If your typewriter goes haywire, you call in a typewriter mechanic. He files it quickly, and you are ready to work again.

If impoverished, you either borrow or beg.

And so on down the line.

When we are in good health all over, when all of our mechanisms are functioning smoothly, when we are getting paid off regularly and having a little left at the end of the month, we find it easy to be heroes.

But when all of these things go wrong, as they sometimes do—although it is seldom that all fail at once—how brave are we?

We are close to break-downs of one kind or another all the time.—Montgomery Advertiser.

SAVE OUR 'TATERS

Every plant that men love seems to have its natural enemy among the insects and bacteria. Fruits, vegetables, field crops and trees, all are subject to vicious, sustained attack from minute enemies.

The Mexican boll weevil has told its own story at the firesides of all Southern homes since 1915.

The corn-borer and the pink boll worm have had their say.

Numerous other insect enemies have attacked various Southern crops.

Now comes the snout beetle to lay low our sweet potato patches.

It is distressing news. The sweet potato is of the South Southy. We have made it a glorious vegetable. It does not do so well elsewhere. It is full of calories and vitamins. Eaten with field peas and buttermilk it has carried thousands of Southern plowhands safely through and delighted others who live on plowhands.

Oh, Nature, don't take our 'taters away from us!—Montgomery Advertiser.

TOO MUCH POLITICS HURTS EVERYBODY

One of the worst phases of restrictive, tax-creating destructive legislation is its effect on the agencies to which the public looks to safeguard its savings and investments—life insurance companies, banks and trust companies.

Institutions of this kind, for example, are heavy investors in the securities of our basic industries—utilities, railroads, and grade-A industrial concerns. Anything that makes it difficult for these industries to progress prosper and pay interest and dividends strikes directly at the institutions entrusted with billions of dollars of the people's money—money which principally belongs to persons of small means, who count on it to protect themselves and their dependents from want.

In addition, universities, research organizations, libraries, endowed hospitals and similar non-profit making institutions which serve an essential purpose, customarily receive a large part of their total revenue from industrial investments. If political policies force industry to retrench the services of these institutions must likewise be curtailed.

When we strike at an industry, the blow is felt throughout the entire social and economic structure. It destroys jobs, opportunities, investments. It imperils savings. It forces retrogression. Everyone loses and no one gains.

Holders of life insurance policies, savings bank accounts and industrial securities have had this forcibly impressed upon them by loss of dividends, a large part of which is due to destructive legislation and regulation—in other words, too much politics.

A MILLION MORE FOR STATE REVENUE

Passage of the general revenue bill by the Alabama Legislature last week marked what is termed a major administration victory, for, as finally passed, it was almost entirely in the form desired by Governor Graves. Its major tax increases, expected to produce approximately a million dollars a year more revenue than at present, were:

1. Increase in income taxes of approximately 50 per cent.

2. An automobile license tax nearly 30 per cent under the present schedule, with tags ranging from $5 to $18. The scale represents the $4 minimum tag promised by Governor Graves in his campaign, plus the $1 cost of manufacturing each tag.

3. No exemptions from payment of the six-cent state gasoline tax. A determined effort to exempt school boards and city and county governing bodies from payment of the tax lost after a bitter Senate battle.

4. Increase in the gross receipts tax of telephone companies from a rate of 2 and one-half per cent to four per cent.

5. Increase in the gross premium tax on insurance companies from two per cent to a rate of 2 and one-half per cent.

6. Increase in chain store license of a straight 50 per cent, making the highest license cost $112.50.

7. A ten per cent tax on snuff and chewing tobacco with the proceeds earmarked for the special educational trust fund.

8. Drastic tightening of state tax collection machinery to permit much increased collection of present taxes and close the legal loopholes formerly wide open to tax evaders.

"WE MISS YOU, DADDY"

The following editorial was printed in the Rockville, Connecticut, Journal, about a year ago. Thereafter, to the editor's surprise, it was reprinted by most of the other papers of the state, and was used by highway safety officials, insurance companies, accident prevention organizations, motorists' publications and by others who are fighting the great war against the toll of automobile deaths. Here it is—and any motorist will surely think twice about taking chances after reading it:

"Tuesday morning there was a fatal accident on the Minterburn Hill and when the medical examiner was going through the pockets of the dead man . . . a telegram was found. It was not very long, just the ordinary ten-word length, but it was a message that would make any father happy. It read: 'We miss you daddy. When are you coming home?'

"That was all. It was a message sent by one of the children of the man who was killed. He had received the message and was homeward bound. The clothes were minus money but in his pocket he carried that message.

"Those who have children, and those who were once little children, can think of the great blow to the child when the father did return home—DEAD.

"'Daddy' will be missed by those children in the long years ahead. No longer will they have his support, his earnings, and, more important, his companionship.

"If ever there was a reason for people driving more carefully on the road, it is that they might get in an accident and deprive their children of their 'Daddy.'

"More might be written, but just let us repeat those words: 'We miss you, Daddy. When are you coming home?'"

TAX-INFESTED NATIONS

The American citizen who regards our tax burden with equanimity merely because it is less than that visited on some European countries, may be due for a rude awakening.

An exhaustive survey of national budgets throughout the world, made by the New York Trust Company, shows that the tremendous increases in our public debt caused by emergency spending is likely to burden us with greater taxes than those of any European nation in paying the ultimate cost of the measures taken to cope with depression.

In other words, the spendings of the past five years to banish depression are likely to continue depression indefinitely because of the vast sums that will be taken out of the future national income to pay the bill! It is the old story of nations which have attempted to spend themselves into recovery—and have then found that recovery was getting farther away all the time.

Politics cannot be trusted to reverse the present trend, because the politician, far from worrying about a tax-infested nation, continually wants more money for the present, irrespective of where it comes from or what it does to sources of productive wealth.

A drive is now on to tap new wells of capital for tax revenue, by passing new "nuisance taxes," by increasing the levies against estates, by raising income taxes, etc., etc. This money that would be used for jobs, for homes, for farm buildings, for industrial development and for investment in all lines of private endeavor.

The nation faces a financial crisis, forced on us by exorbitant taxation which confiscates capital and therefore destroys the source of future earnings. Only the public, which in the long run determines all national policies, holds the power to save itself from destruction.

THE LONG SUFFERING MOTORIST

The motorist is a helpless victim of taxation because there is no practical substitute for gasoline.

For almost any other commodity the consumer can use a substitute.

But when it comes to gasoline, it's pay the tax or stop driving.

The states started taxing gasoline "moderately" but, as with all special taxes, the gas tax soon became exorbitant.

Then the federal government decided to take its pound of flesh from the motorist.

Motorists have it in their power to demand a reduction of exorbitant gas taxes, including the actual repeal of the federal gas tax.

They also have the right to demand that gasoline taxes be not used for other than road purposes.

When taxes run from 25 to 50 per cent of the retail price of any article, as the gasoline tax does, it is high time to correct the abuse.

AFTER THE ILL WIND

Maybe this late lamented chain letter craze wasn't entirely a dead loss, after all.

Postal authorities at Denver, where the whole business started, checked up on the results the other day, and discovered that the extra mail caused by the fad netted Denver postoffice workers extra pay to the extent of about $20,000.

Furthermore, Uncle Sam himself profited, Denver postoffice receipts for the two months the fad lasted running some $50,000 above normal.

It is both surprising and gratifying to learn that this, one of the silliest fads the American people ever took up, actually did someone some good. In fact, it looks as if everyone profited by it—except the suckers who mailed the dimes and the dollars.—Huntsville Times.

House Democrats Defy President—Lobbying for and Against Utilities Bill to Be Investigated—Senator Glass Bests Eccles.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

REVOLT in congress against alleged dictatorial attempts of the administration reached a climax when the house, by the decisive vote of 258 to 148, rejected the "death sentence" in the utility holding companies bill as passed by the senate and demanded by the President. The record vote came on a motion to substitute the house bill placing utility holding companies under regulation of the securities and exchange commission for the senate bill which prescribed the dissolution of the holding companies of more than first degree beginning in 1940.

Rep. Brewster

The adoption of this motion killed the "death sentence." After substituting the house bill for the senate bill, the perfected measure was passed by a vote of 322 to 81.

Immediately after this action, the house voted unanimously for an investigation of alleged lobbying by both the supporters and the foes of the utility measure. During the debate on the bill it was frequently charged that the capitol was swarming with utility company lobbyists, and then came two serious accusations against the other side. Representative John H. Hoeppel of California, Democrat, asserted an unnamed administration lobbyist had offered to get California's relief allotment increased if Hoeppel would vote for the bill as the President wanted it. This didn't greatly impress the house, but later Representative Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, Republican, charged that Thomas G. Corcoran, a young brain truster who is co-author of the administration bill, had threatened cessation of construction of the $37,000,000 Passamaquoddy dam project in the congressman's district if Brewster should vote against the "death sentence."

Mr. Brewster said he did not believe the President was aware that such tactics were being used by his aids or would countenance them, and Rankin of Mississippi and Moran of Maine defended Mr. Roosevelt. But the President's contact man, Charles West, and Postmaster General Farley's lobbyist, Emil Hurja, had been so active among the house members that the resentment of the lawmakers was aroused and they gladly directed that the lobbying charges be investigated.

WHAT would be the final fate of the utility measure was doubtful. Senator Wheeler of Montana, after a call at the White House, said he was confident a satisfactory bill would come out of the conference, and if one did not, the measure would be allowed to die. In either case the war on the holding companies is likely to be made a major issue of the next Presidential campaign, and administration leaders are predicting that the Democratic congressmen who dared to vote against the "death sentence" will be defeated at the polls. These "doomed" men number 166, as against 131 Democrats who stood by the President.

Republican leaders were jubilant, professing to see in the episode the beginning of a real uprising against the President and his New Dealers; many neutral observers looked upon it as only a battle between the two lobbies in which the victory went to the utilities lobby.

IN THE battle between Senator Carter Glass and Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board, the former has, at this writing, scored the most points. The astute Virginian extracted from the Eccles-Currie banking bill most of the radical provisions that would have led to government or public ownership of the federal reserve system, and, indeed, practically rewrote the measure. Then his subcommittee handed it on to the senate banking and currency committee, which promptly gave the bill its approval, without a record vote, and after making only two minor changes.

Sen. Glass

Governor Eccles and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau expected to be called before the committee and were prepared to tell why the bill would not suit the administration, but the committee didn't give them a chance.

As passed by the house, the banking bill would give autocratic powers over the banking system to a politically dominated federal reserve board; and the party in power would have the authority to force the twelve reserve banks to lend unlimited amounts to the national treasury. Under the bill as rewritten by Glass, reserve board members are to be appointed for 14-year terms and are to be discharged only for cause; chief officers of the reserve banks are to be chosen by their directors, subject to reserve board approval, for five-year periods, and the reserve banks need not buy additional government bonds unless they choose to do so.

INVESTIGATION of the administration of the Virgin Islands by a senate committee was certain to be lively. The very first witness heard, Charles H. Gibson, was threatened with jail by Secretary of the Interior Ickes for removing official documents from the files. Mr. Gibson, who was government attorney for the islands until Ickes ousted him, had testified rather vaguely against the regime of Gov. Paul M. Pearson.

Gibson testified that Governor Pearson had exceeded his authority under the law, was unpopular with a large section of the population of the islands, and was not frank in his administration. To support his testimony Gibson introduced several letters which were the documents to which Ickes alluded.

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON assumed his new office of federal works relief administrator for New York city. "Robbie," his ever present secretary, fended off the reporters for a day, but let them in then, and to them the general wailed:

"I hate this thing! It isn't helping anybody, anywhere. When the source of money is cut off we'll be right back where we started. It's disheartening to sit here, knowing that when the funds are gone, the jobs will be gone."

ATTORNEY GENERAL CUMMINGS announced that on July 29 a school would be opened by his department in Washington for the purpose of training state, county and city police in law enforcement theory and practice. A twelve weeks' course will be given to selected officers, the instruction being free.

REPUBLICAN senators were advised that former President Herbert Hoover will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Presidential race of 1936. They were advised that Mr. Hoover would make the formal announcement some time this summer. He is staying out, it was said, because he intends to remain in private life and has planned his future career along that line. For his active criticisms of administration policies the reason was given that, although he does not "choose to run," he thought the party needed some sort of direction; now that his candidacy is shelved, it is expected that his political utterances will be clothed in less authority.

Herbert Hoover

The informers, however, assured the senators that Mr. Hoover would get behind the party's candidate and enter the campaign for him, and that he thinks, with unification growing, the Republican prospects are looking brighter day by day.

WORLD war veterans from both the Allied and the Central powers met officially in Paris and debated ways in which future wars may be averted. They denounced as enemies of their own countries those who would seek to foment a new war, and passed a resolution declaring: "The respect for treaties being the basis of international relations, this confidence can be durable only when international accords and the resulting obligations are mutually and sincerely respected."

BURR T. ANSELL, a young attorney whose father, Gen. S. T. Ansell, is suing Senator Huey Long for libel, was enraged when Long intruded on his party at a Washington hotel and took a swing at the Kingfish. One of the senator's companions seized Ansell's arm and the young man says Long then ran away.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, whose New Deal program was not well received by the British government, has resumed active participation in politics, "reluctantly," but with expressed determination to "go on with it." The little Welsh veteran statesman addressed the national convention of the peace and reconstruction movement, and asserted the menace to peace and the economic confusion throughout the world are growing worse.

JAPAN'S beautiful inland sea was the scene of a terrible disaster that cost 104 lives. The steamer Midori Maru, crowded with holiday passengers, collided with a freighter in the foggy night and sank almost immediately. Rescue boats picked up 91 of the 166 passengers and 56 of the crew All the victims were Japanese.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE proclaimed the establishment of an AAA adjustment program for the 1935 rye crop which will include benefit payments of amounts not yet disclosed. Representatives from 16 rye growing states met in Washington to discuss the program and outline plans for its operation.

Farmers from the principal wheat producing states met with AAA officials and gave their approval to a tentative flexible plan for the payment of benefits to wheat growers.

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, England's journeyman trouble shooter, electrified the British Isles by announcing that Great Britain had offered to give Haile Selassie, emperor of Abyssinia, a generous strip of British Somaliland to replace territory acquired by Italy, if the Italian government would promise not to wage war against the domain of Africa's "Conquering Lion of Judah."

Nothing doing, said Premier Mussolini, who has turned a deaf ear to all Britain's proposals of an Italo-Ethiopian compromise. He was reported as intending to go right ahead with his plan of a four-years' war to effect the complete pacification of the African empire. He insists that there must be more room in Africa for over-populated Italy to expand.

Mussolini has threatened to "remember" the nations which have offered to furnish Abyssinia with arms, and they have withdrawn or modified their offers. The African emperor pleaded:

"If we are in the right and if civilized nations are unable to prevent this war, at least do not deny us the means of defending ourselves."

The British parliament was no better pleased with Eden's "offer" of land than was Italy, and the colonial secretary, son of former Prime Minister MacDonald, had a hard time explaining it.

Then Italy heard that the British government was considering a proposal to invite other nations to join in an economic blockade of Italy to check her aggression on Ethopia. Rome was astonished by this report but didn't seem in the least alarmed. Neither were the Italians frightened when they learned officially that Ethiopia had asked the United States to study means of persuading Italy to respect the Kellogg pact outlawing war. The emperor himself made the appeal to W. Perry George, charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa.

ANDRE CITROEN, famous for years as "the Henry Ford of France" because he built most of that country's low cost motor cars, is dead. And probably he was happy to pass on, for his vast enterprises had collapsed and his once huge fortune was gone.

THE federal government began a new fiscal year with intentions of spending more money than in any previous year of peace. Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would spend $8,520,000,000, of which $4,582,000,000 will go for "recovery and relief." He expects the treasury to collect $3,991,000,000. No, it doesn't add up. The deficit for the new fiscal year will be $4,528,000,000, it is estimated.

The fiscal year just passed came to an end with the public debt at a new peace-time peak of $28,665,000,000, still some shy of the $31,000,000,000 the President estimated a year ago. To finance the new budget, he had counted in part upon the $500,000,000 extension of "nuisance" taxes just passed by congress, but not upon the tax-the-rich program which the New Dealers hope to jockey through some time in August. Estimates have it that this will net another $340,000,000.

The expenditure for the past year is only $7,258,000,000 instead of $8,571,000,000 forecast at the start of the year. The deficit was $3,472,347,000 instead of the proposed $4,869,000,000.

If the expenditures outlined in the 1936 budget reach the estimated total, the public debt on July 1 next year would stand at $34,239,000,000.

During the next year the President expects to spend $4,880,000,000 for relief and for the employment of 3,500,000 idle workers. A general upswing in business would improve the revenue expected by the treasury. The President counted on $3,711,000,000 coming in during the 1935 fiscal year. Receipts proved to be $3,785,000,000.

THE week's peak in crime was reached when Detroit police found Howard Carter Dickinson, prominent New York attorney and nephew of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, lying dead in a ditch beside a lonely Rouge park road with a bullet through his head and another through his chest.

Dickinson, a law associate of Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., had been in Detroit on business of the $40,000,000 estate of the late William H. Yawkey. Apparently, he had driven to Rouge park while on a drinking party after business hours. His companions on the ride, who were William Schweitzer, Detroit underworld character, and three burlesque-show girls, all of whom he had picked up at his hotel in the motor city, fled the scene and were traced to Fort Wayne, Ind., where they were arrested.

After several days of grilling by police, the four confessed they had plotted the murder to rob Dickinson. Sweitzer admitted firing the shots. Their loot was $134.

DETERMINED that what goes up must stay up, Fred and Al Key, endurance fliers, broke the world's time record for keeping a plane aloft, landing after 653½ hours in the air at Meridan, Miss. They passed the unoficial endurance record of 647 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds set in 1930 by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brien at St. Louis.

LINES FROM OWN PEN TO SHOW ON TOMB OF WOMAN

Montgomery, Ala.,—Lines from her own pen, a salute to night and its peace and contentment will be engraven on the tomb of Addie Scarbrough Norman, of Fort Deposit, on whom final night has fallen in deep tragedy that brought death to her husband, John E. Norman, at the door of a neighbor's house, June 20, when he shot them down.

Mrs. Norman was a poet who wrote for the joy of winged words. Since girlhood she had been producing verse and while at Alabama College, Montevallo, her verse appeared frequently in the annual. She was also known as the prettiest girl at college, and she was photorgaphed with Gov. Brandon as he congratulated her on her beauty.

The lines that have been chosen for Mrs. Norman's tomb are:

"Length'nin, shadows, after sun;
Stillness, twilight, work day done.
Pale gold moon 'mid stars alight,
Peace, contentment, calmness night."

Wishes Other Costs Would Drop Like Electricity

Like lots of other Alabama folks, Mrs A. R. Steele, of Huntsville, is delighted with the way her bills for electricity have steadily gone down while other living costs were going up. Recently she wrote: "In the times we are having today, I am sure you will be surprised to receive this kind of a letter but I am tempted to write it, as I am very much satisfied with my electric bills from your company.

"I have an electric range, water heater and refrigerator together with miscellaneous lighting and other appliances and I have used these appliances for the past seven years. Instead of my bills getting larger year by year they have been materially reduced.

"If the price on some of the other things we have to use were reduced correspondingly things would be a whole lot easier." Adv. Alabama Power Co

SPECIAL DAY AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH AUGUST THE FOURTH

On the first Sunday in August, the 4th, we are to have a special church day. We want every member of the church who lives in reach of the church to attend the services on that day, especially the morning service. Also, we want every member to make some offering to the church. The purpose of the offering is to catch up with all local expenses and to make a payment of our paving debt. Information will be gotten out to all the membership before that time. Make your plans now to attend church on that day. The church needs you and you need the church. We are counting on you to be present and to do your part.

Baptist Revival Being Held Here This Week

Our revival services are in progress now and will continue through Sunday evening. The attendance is gratifying and the interest is good. Those who are hearing Dr. Gwaltney are enjoying his great messages of grace and power. He is a man sent from God and is preaching with the power of the Holy Spirit. What a blessing it is to have him with us for these few days.

The services are for everybody. We extend a most cordial invitation to everyone to attend all the services and to join in this effort to win men to God. There are many men, women, boys and girls in our community who are without God, who are lost, who are fast passing on to eternal night. Every Christian has a responsibility to help win them to God. Are you doing your part? Let every Christian pray for a revival and for the salvation of the lost. Invite the unsaved to church. Tell them you are praying for them. Set a good example by living a Christ-like life and by taking your place at God's house.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. Augustus J. Cox, B. D.

11 a.m.—Church worship. The sermon topic will be: "Indicision and Its Cure."

Let each citizen do his or her part to make Montevallo the kind of city we all desire. Everyone is cordially invited to worship with us.

Sellers Of Milk In Montevallo Warned

A thorough check has just been completed on the milk supply for Monteavllo, by the Sanitation Officer, W. C. Evers, of the county health department. He states there are several people violating the city milk ordinance by selling milk and milk products.

For the benefit of those who do not know they are violating the laws of the town, we are now stating that anyone found selling milk or milk products in Montevallo other than those operating Grade A dairies, will be arrested and fined by the city officials.

First Term of Summer School To End Friday

The first term of summer school at Alabama College is to end July 19. The second term is scheduled July 22 August 24. The total summer enrollment will far exceed any within the past several years, the first term enrollment having been forty percent larger than that of the preceding summer.

During the summer already the following conferences have been held on the campus Writers Conclave, Epworth League Assembly, Progressive Education Association meeting, assembly of English Teachers and Principals of the state and Student Career Conference. The College Camp for girls begins July 22, continuing until August 17.

Cities now brag only about that part of their population who are not on relief.

In poker it is possible to draw 40 different straight flushes. But no one ever does.

"DICTATORS" IS THE SUBJECT THIS WEEK BY REV. AUGUSTUS J. COX

"Our instant need is an army of men and women mobilized under the dictatorship of the Living Spirit of God," says the founder of the Oxford Group. If the citizens of this old world will put themselves under that divine dictator ship, they will create a new world. Such is the breath-taking vision of what may come to pass in the not-so-distant future.

But we are already, in the present, individually and collectively, under the dictatorship of man. One need not look to Italy or Germany, to Russia or Turkey, for human dictatorship. We are all under a dictatorship of some form or other; in our home, or business of government. We are under the dictatorship of other people's opinions. We are under the dictatorship of our own imperious human nature.

And if we choose the divine dictatorship in place of the human, there is bound to be war between the two. It was ever thus. Peter and John, forbidden by the human authorities to speak in the name of Jesus, announced their allegiance to a higher Authority and in obedience to Him went right ahead: "Whether it be right in the sight of God to harken unto you more than unto God judge ye; for we cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard." And today he who is committed to the dictatorship of the Holy Spirit must sometimes make the same choice over the protests of those who are his human dictators: his family, or the president of his company, or his government or public opinion in general.

But that does not mean that those who choose God's authority will be a constant state of rebellion against man's. The divine allegiance does not carry with it the right to flaunt every human allegiance. The same Peter, who wrote on another occasion: "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king, as supreme, or unto governors . . . Servants, be the subject to your masters." In a great many instances, God's order is that we obey man's order.

But how can one follow God's dictatorship in this mysterious adventure in which His will sometimes concides with and sometimes clashes with man's? There is only one requirement: willingness to follow His orders wherever they lead. "He that willeth to do God's will shall know of the doctrine"—whether it confirms or contravenes man. We know a man who achieved that willingness and made that choice several years ago in his own business, where he was a subordinate. Consistently following God's orders brought him sometimes into conflict with those over him and sometimes into complete agreement with them. In both situations he worked on courageously, with God vindicating him and again, till today those who at first could not understand what they thought were his vagaries have made him a director in the company: a God-directed director! That kind of experience is happening in individual lives, in business, in families, in social, economic, political and international life wherever there are men and women who have encouraged us enough to do that simple thing; to mobilize under the dictatorship of the living Spirit of God, come what might in all human relationships where authority was involved. And what does come, in actual fact, in those relationships of parent and child, employer and employee, leader and follower, is their transformation, till they are as they were meant to be, with all parties comented together in mutual commitment to One Who is building of them the kingdom of God on earth.

Art Work Adds Color To All Class Rooms

In every classroom in the Montevallo Demonstration School the observer may see evidences of the teaching of Miss Elizabeth Gilmartin, supervisor of art. There are colorful friezes, clay objects, crayon and charcoal sketches and other decorative things on walls, on tables, in cabinets.

Miss Gilmartin has two high school classes and a class in teaching methods. In addition to meeting these groups daily she helps the other classes with their projects|

Miss Gilmartin's regular classes have done sketches of familiar scenes around Montevallo. They have also painted thythmic patterns in wooden bowls and have fashioned clay heads.

Under Miss Gilmartin's direction one grammar grade did its room over more colorfully; another grammar grade made a frieze to illustrate the sources of light, a project upon which the pupils were working; another grade did a series of animal heads and animal dens. The pupils made the heads from paper, then colored them.

DRAMATIC WORK AT ALABAMA COLLEGE GIVEN HIGH PRAISE

In arecent issue of the Springfield Republician an account is given of the dramatic work at Alabama College under the leadership of Dr. W. H. Trumbauer, professor of Dramatic Literature and director of the College Theatre. It states that "Excellent opportunities are given girls to learn not only acting but directin, staging costuming, lighting and make-up." pointing out the opportunity under the new curriclum of the college for students to have a major in speech and a minor in art.

The article tells of the expansion of the play program at Alabama College and of the inclusion of a College Theatre production on the Lecture and Concert Series, a Greek play having been selected last year to fit into the new freshman course in the History of Civilization. It also deals at length with the develoment of the playwriting contest and the efforts to produce the prize winning plays that can be fitted into the theatre program.

AIRPLANE WILL BE HERE SUNDAY

WILL CARRY PASSENGERS TO RIDE OVER MONTEVALLO ALDRICH AND WILTON

Mr. J. W. Allen, who operates a flying school at Clanton, will visit Montevallo over the week end to feel out the possibilities of forming a flying club as soon as the field is fully completed. He has invited all who are interested in flying to come out to the field, as he would like very much to contact every one who would be interested in having a flying club formed in Montevallo.

Mr. Allen says that with the encouragement of the Department of Commerce the low priced airplane has made great stride in the last year, and that it is very likely you will see more and more private flying done in this section in the future.

Shelby County has three airports, all built within the last year, of which all the people of this county should feel very proud, as this work has made the county a leader in this field.

Everybody who wants to ride over the city has been invited out to the field Sunday to go up. Mr. Allen is a licensed transport pilot and has been flying since 1928. He has carried over ten thousand passengers in that time in all parts of the country. He says he has yet to see anyone who does not enjoy flying after they have once flown, and beileves before lony most everyone will fly and think nothing of it.

Two Millionth Ford V-8 Built June 13th

Dearborn, Mich., June 13.—The 2,000,000 V-8 Ford—the one millionth Ford built in less than 12 months and approximately the 23,000,000th Ford ever built—was produced today at the Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company here.

Henry Ford, founder, and Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, watched the final assembly of the historic Ford. The car started at once on a 2,700-mile journey to San Deigo, Calif., where it will be placed on exhibit in the Ford Exposition at the California Pacific International Exposition.

The completion of 1,000,000 Fords in less than a year since the 1,000,000th V-8 Ford was manufactured on June 19, 1934, recalled Mr. Ford's prediction late last year that the Ford Motor Company "would build better than a million in 1935."

The 2,000,000th V-8 Ford is the fourth historic Ford car which has blazed a transcontinental trail to the Pacific Coast, each over one of the principal trunk highways between the Atlantic and Pacfic.

Back in 1909, a Model T Ford, then virtually a newcomer in the automobile field but destined to become the most famous type of motor car ever manufactured, dashed across the continent from New York to Seattle to win the Guggenheim trophy in a transcontinental race ending at the Alaska - Yukon - Pacific Exposition. Mr. Ford himself greeted the winning Ford car at the finish.

The next historic Ford to write transcontinental history was the 10,000,000th Ford, another model T which, after it came off the final assembly line at the Highland Park plant in 1924, was driven from New York to San Francisco over the Lincoln Highway.

The third was the 20,000,000th Ford, a Model A. After it was completed at the Rouge plant in 1931 it was driven to New York and thence across the country to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The fourth Ford to make transportation history was the 1,000,000th V-8 Ford which was manufactured at the Rouge plant June 19 last year and driven to Chicago where it was placed on exhibit at the Ford Exposition at the World's Fair.

HOME EXEMPTION COMING UP

With four of his major campaign pledges already passed by the legislature, Governor Graves laid plans this week to carry out the remainder of his promises to the people when the legislature returns from its 30 day recess the first part of August.

Homestead exemption is expected to be one of the high lights of the final session. There is some talk of coupling the constitutional amendment for home exemption with a sales tax.

SILK WORMS IN MOBILE

Silk worms have been found busily at work making [illegible] in the Mulberry trees of Mobile County and the suggestion is ventured that the Gulf border might be a suitable site for a silk industry. There are two difficulties about realizing this ambition. One is that Japan can make her silk worms work so cheaply that American growers would have a hard time living. The other is that so much rayon and artifical silk are being made from the South's cotton that silk demand has been waning.

CASH IN ADVANCE

Anyway, the "share the wealth" idea is fine for the lazy and shiftless.

WHO DARE ADVERTISE

Usually the argument is made that every business concern should advertise. Generally speaking, this is true, but there are exceptions. In fact, some concerns hardly dare advertise, because they cannot make good according to the requirements of modern practices.

When advertising is untruthful and misleading it does more harm than good. Only an enterprise which fulfills the promises made in its advertising can stand the spotlight of publicity. Hence, when we find a firm boldly advertising its wares of service, month after month and year after year, we may generally conclude that it can and does give real values.

Obsering that advertised businesses of any community large or small we will enable one to identify the most dependable concerns in that community. Only efficient and reputable establishments dare to advertise.

SONGS THAT LIVE

A little more than 100 years ago there was born near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, Stephen Collins Foster, whose best known songs have stirred the emotions of four generations and live today in the hearts of his countrymen as do those of no other American.

Millions who have sung and heard them never knew the name of their author, who was of a quite and retiring disposition, delicate as a child and never robust.

He began writing songs at the age of 13, and by the time he was 20 his compositions had gained considerable favor. He wrote in all about 125 songs, of which the most famous have a Southern setting, although he was born, lived and died in the North.

Among Foster's songs which had a universal appeal may be mentioned "Old Black Joe," "Old Folks at Home," "Massa's in the Cold Cold Ground," and the exquisite vocal quartette, "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming." These and others have been popular on both sides of the Atlantic and their words have been translated into many tongues. Great musicians incorporated several of these melodies into elaborate concert fantasias.

Foster wrote both words and music of his songs, which made an epoch in popular music. He died in New York in 1864, but his plaintive haunting melodies seem destined for immortality.

Hon. Pete Jarman continues to circulate around the Sixth District.. Although not an avowed candidate, it is generally known that he has his eye constantly on the Sixth District seat in Congress. There are plenty of people in the District who declare that the only thing Pete lacks of being in Congress is counting of the votes in the next election.

TALLADEGA YOUTH'S BRAVERY

From Talladega county comes the story of Ludwig Schmidt, a youth who was cleaning out a turbine at his father's mill near Lincoln last week when his foot slipped and a turbine blade six feet under water cut off his leg. In that condition he not only swam to the shore but got out on the bank and used his belt as a tourniquet to stop the blood flow until he could get help. These modern boys not only have the nerve when emergencies come, but they also have knowledge of what to do.

HUCKLEBERRY MARKET

T. H. Shropshire in the Coosa River News, "with all due deference to the Alabama Journal," belives the Sylacauga News correct in its testimonials to the fine quality of brandy made from Talladega county huckleberries and offers to produce witnesses to class such brandy with the "most exsuisite spiritus frumenti extant."

Seriously the huckleberry business in this section has been both abundant and remunerative. Citizens of the Ball Play section, reaching to and along Weisner mountain, gathered and marketed thousands of gallons of these berries, and the price ranged all the way from $1 at the beginning to 25 cents per gallon at the end of the season. If vandals could be kept from burning the woods this new volunteer source of wealth should pan out thousands more each recurring summer.

This is an Alabama wild resource which seems to be growing in importance each year to judge by the demand for the product and the returns it yields to the gatherers of the berries on Alabama's mountain slopes. —Alabama Journal.

UNHEEDED WARNINGS

It is one of the most amazing facts connected with modern life that the number of deaths resulting from carelessness makes no greater impression upon the general public.

In spite of the daily record of accidents, drivers continue to take a chance, with an inevitable percentage of fatal results. The same is true of other practices which take their grim toll of human life.

Persons who are ordinarily careful in protecting their property or health appear to throw discretion to the winds the moment they grasp the wheel of an automobile, and positively invite disaster through failing to observe the most elementary cautions.

The Jaywalker is equally reckless, taking the chance of being run down for the sake of saving a few steps or a moment's time. Those who are careless of other dangers help to swell the harvest of deaths.

And the most lamentable fact is that no amount of warning appears to have any appreciable effect.

COMMUNITY ISOLATION

When a community hesitates to ask for a paved highway because of a fear that the highway may carry some of its customers to a larger city to shop, it might consider the experience of a small town Alabama jeweler.

An enterprising Birmingham jewelry establishment, hoping to expand its business, placed some attractive silverware on display in a small town hotel window. The small town jeweler was up in arms that his field should be thus invaded and entered bitter protest. After a couple of weeks he found that his sales of silverware had been larger than during any previous two weeks in his history. the big town display had made the people of the community silver conscious and put a lot of them in the frame of mind to buy.

The good highway will bring much more to the small town than it takes away. It opens up new sources of wealth and it adds to all values. A desire for complete isolation means death for any community. It is contacts and competition which will make things prosperous.—Alabama Journal.

MORE ALABAMA FARMS

In 1930 Alabama had a total of 257,395 farms, but the preliminary census for 1935 shows that the state now has 275,604 farms, an increase of seven per cent.

This is a healthy indication and it is hoped that the number of individual farms may continue to increase It means a better and more prosperous state. Great plantations owned by absentee landlords are a handicap to the state. They cannot inspire the initative and personal incentive that stir the best efforts of the man who has his own little farm. Anything that will help to increase the number of farms in Alabama will help the state as a whole.

CHICKENS IN ALABAMA

The Greenville Advocate remarks that chickens this season are "scarce, high and hard to get." Why should chickens in Alabama be scarce and hard to get? This state ought to be able to produce all the poultry and eggs that our people could possibly consume. With all the conditions so favorable for poultry raising it seems incredible that Alabama should permit continuance of spasituation where chickens are "scarce, high and hard to get."—The Alabama Journal.

As we see it, so many farmers never stop to think what a good income is to be made from chickens and eggs, milk and butter,small fruits and vegetables Right through this section of Alabama is the finest fruit belt in the state.

We predict the time will come when more attenton will be paid to these things—then we will all begin to live better and the farmers will live easier.

Lobbying and Virgin Islands Investigations Develop Lively Scraps—House "Rebels" Are Tame Concerning TVA Amendments.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

FIFTY thousand dollars was appropriated by the house for investigation by the rules committee of lobbying for and against bills affecting utilities, interests. Representative Rankin of Mississippi declared that Representative O'Connor of New York, chairman of the committee, was unfit to conduct the inquiry because he was antagonistic to the administration. O'Connor, rising to reply, was given an ovation by the house, and promised the investigation would be thorough and impartial.

T. G. Corcoran

Already the committee had begun its work, the first witness being Representative Brewster of Maine, who declared Thomas G. Corcoran, New Deal lawyer, had tried to force him to vote for the "death sentence" provision in the utilities bill by threats of stopping work on the Passamaquoddy project. Corcoran was then put on the stand and denied the main features of Brewster's story, whereupon the Maine congressman shouted, "You're a liar." Corcoran explained with facility his activities in behalf of the utilities measure. He said he was assigned to help with the original drafting of the bill "through a direct request from the President." Senators Wheeler and Rayburn, he said, asked him to help bring about passage of the bill.

The senate committee on audit and controls reported favorably on a resolution calling for a $50,000 appropriation to investigate lobbying in connection with all legislation at this session, and the resolution was adopted by the senate.

PERHAPS it was the summer heat in Washington; perhaps there was a lot of pressure from the direction of the White House. Anyhow, the backbones of the house Democrats, recently so stiff against "dictation" by the administration, weakened most noticeably when the house took up the redrafting of the Tennessee Valley authority act. Nearly all the recent "rebels" among the Democrats fell into line and the bill was shorn of every major provision that was objectionable to the President. These amendments were approved:

To delete a clause saying the TVA must sell power or chemicals at not less than cost after July 1, 1937.

To let the TVA operate without absolute control by the comptroller general over its expenditures.

To let the authority decide whether private interests may build dams or appurtenant works on the Tennessee river or tributaries.

This victory greatly heartened the administration forces, and they pressed forward to try for another in the conference on the utilities bill. Also in the senate they carried on a determined fight for the amendments broadening the powers of the AAA. Senators Borah and Byrd were the chief opponents of the New Dealers in this latter battle.

ONE of the hottest scraps of the year developed between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Senator Tydings of Maryland over the inquiry into the administration of Gov. Paul M. Pearson in the Virgin Islands. The secretary accused the senator of "white-washing" a witness before the Tydings committee; and the senator retorted by advising the secretary to "confine yourself to the duties for which you have been appointed." Both of them were thoroughly angry and Tydings in a letter accused Ickes of seeking "cheap publicity."

Sec'y Ickes

Federal Judge T. Webber Wilson of the Virgin islands had given testimony that exasperated Ickes and the secretary demanded that the judge be removed from office for "official misconduct." Then Ickes wrote to Tydings a letter carrying his charge of "white-washing" and saying of the judge's testimony: "There was no cross-examination to test his truthfulness, and if any statement ever needed such a test, it was his."

Judge Wilson had told the committee that there had been "administrative interference" with his court and that Morris Ernst, counsel for the Civil Liberties union, while a guest of Governor Pearson, had threatened to put him "on the spot" in the press unless he granted a rehearing to a government employee accused of theft.

Tydings accused Secretary Ickes of "gross deceit upon the American people" by stating in an Interior department press release that Paul C. Yates, administrative assistant of Pearson, had been discharged, when "you know and I know that Mr. Yates had resigned five days before your press release was issued."

TO PROVIDE quick employment and end the dole, the entire four-billion-dollar works-relief fund must be expended within the next twelve months. Such was the flat statement of President Roosevelt to the state PWA directors, who were gathered in Washington for a two day conference. After discussing the old PWA program, the President said: "You are now an important part of an even greater effort—one to be made during the next year which will provide quick employment, so that we can attain, if possible, the goal we have set within this year 1935. Before the year is ended we will end the dole we have been paying to employable persons during the last two years. In other words, we must give useful work to three and one-half million people and I believe we are going to do it.

"In order to do it, of course, we are faced by a problem of arithmetic which is comparatively simple. We have four billion dollars and three and one-half million people to put to work with it. That means we have to average things up. It means that we have on the average about $1,140 per man year.

"That has to include the cost of the material, so that the four billion dollars includes not only the amount we pay the men but also the cost of the material. It is a perfectly simple arithmetical problem—we have to work out an average that will come within the sum of money divided by the number of people we have to put to work.

"You know, of course, that we have spent a great deal of money during the last two years, but we find now not only that there are additional funds at our disposal but also that the need of permanent work all over the United States is not yet ended. We find that the deeper we go into it the more opportunities we have to do constructive work in almost every community in the country."

STANDING atop a cannon, Benito Mussolini told 15,000 Black Shirt volunteers and the world as well that in the matter of Ethiopia "We have decided upon a struggle in which we as a government and a people will not turn back. The decision is irretrievable."

W. P. George

Unless Emperor Haile Selassie gets right down on his knees to Il Duce, the war in his dominion will begin in September when the rainy season ends. No one expects the "king of kings" to submit tamely, so other nations are advising their nationals in Ethiopia to get out of the country. William Perry George, the American charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa, was authorized by the State department to advise American citizens to leave, or take whatever other steps he deemed necessary to protect their safety.

Mr. George transmitted to the emperor the rather curt reply of the American government to his majesty's appeal for aid in stopping Italy. Secretary of State Hull, writing by authority of the President, told the emperor the United States was "loath to believe" the two countries actually will engage in warfare as they are both signatories of the Kellogg pact. The note also pointed out that the arbitration proceedings might arrive at a satisfactory decision.

The chances that war might be averted by the arbitrators seemed slight. Those gentlemen met again at Scheveningen and their session was disrupted by the Italian representatives when a spokesman for Ethiopia set forth the fact that Ualual, scene of the bloody clash last December, is well within the Ethiopian border.

Emperor Haile Selassie made another attempt to get international action by calling for a meeting of the League of Nations council to thresh out the dispute with Italy. At the same time the emperor appealed to the world for fair play and protested to five European powers against their refusal to permit the shipment of arms and munitions to Ethiopia. It was said in Geneva the league council probably would be called into session within a few weeks. The protest about arms shipments was not likely to do Ethiopia any good. Indeed, it was said Great Britain had provisionally joined the nations banning such transactions.

NIKOLA TESLA, famed scientist, celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday in New York city by giving out the news of three astonishing developments in the sciences. They are:

Passage of an induction current with a varying flux one way only through a circuit without use of a commutator.

COMPTROLLER GENERAL M'CARL doesn't care where the chips fall when he starts hewing. He has just given an opinion that ruins the President's plan to require bidders on government contracts to bind themselves to abide by any future legislation providing for minimum wages and maximum hours of labor in employment on such contracts. A proviso to this effect was being exacted of bidders.

Mr. McCarl holds that the proviso may be viewed as a "request" only and a bid could not be rejected because the person making it refused to subscribe to this principle.

The plan was advanced from the procurement division of the treasury, which proposed that the government replace the requirement for code compliance on all government bidders, knocked out when the recovery act was voided by the Supreme court.

THOUGH the naval treaties of Washington and London have been abrogated by Japan, the American government still keeps its eye on the maximum permitted for our navy by 1942 and is making a determined effort to reach it, much to the delight of the "big navy" men and to citizens generally who believe in adequate preparedness.

Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson has announced that a ship construction program has been decided upon which calls for the construction of 12 destroyers and six submarines. These are in addition to the 15 destroyers and six submarines for which bids have been advertised and will be opened next month.

The airplane building program calls for 555 new planes during the current fiscal year. Of these, 282 will be replacement planes for those now in service and 273 will be new craft. Two airplane carriers and six cruisers now under construction and scheduled for completion in 1937 are to house some of the new planes.

FLOODS in several eastern states, following torrential rains, took about three score lives and did vast property damage. The Finger lakes and Catskill mountain regions in New York suffered most severely. The deaths there numbered forty, and thousands were rendered homeless. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman announced an immediate allocation of $300,000 for use in rehabilitation.

NOBODY who knew Ray Long well was surprised to hear that formerly famous magazine editor had committed suicide at his California home. In late years he had not been very successful in business, his most recent ventures being in the field of scenario writing. He was not one to put up with adversity very long, and it was characteristic of him to take the easy way out, of suicide.

CRITICS of the President's program have made up their minds that he is deliberately building up a "crisis" which will provide excuse for a demand for constitutional amendments in the campaign of 1936. Their conviction was strengthened by Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Congressman Samuel B. Hill, chairman of the interstate commerce subcommittee, urging the passage of the Guffey coal bill regardless of doubts as to its constitutionality.

President Roosevelt followed the suggestion of Attorney General Cummings that the legislation should be put through congress because "the situation is so urgent," and that the question of constitutionality should be left up to the courts.

The President, admitting that coal mining is in itself an intrastate transaction, nevertheless wrote that the final test of the validity of the Guffey bill would depend upon whether production conditions directly affect, promote, or obstruct interstate commerce. The Supreme court, in the Schechter NRA case, quoted a previous opinion that mining, manufacturing, and other forms of production were as local in their character as the production of crops, and hence beyond the reach of congress.

THE secretary of the treasury appeared before the house ways and means committee which was trying to formulate the new tax bill wanted by the administration, and declared that, depending on the rates of taxation adopted, the measure might bring in as much as $1,000,000,000 a year or as little as $118,000,000 annually. As the representative of the administration, the young secretary declined to advise as to the rates, though the Republican members of the committee tried to pin him down to details. The legislation outlined by the President includes taxation of inheritances and gifts, higher surtaxes on million dollar incomes and graduated income taxes on corporations.

Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, predicted that congress either would recess and reconvene in the fall or would put off enactment of the tax bill until the session beginning January 3 next.

OUR army lost an able and distinguished officer in the death of Maj. Gen. Stuart Heintzelman at the army and navy hospital in Hot Springs, Ark. The grandson and son of army officers, General Heintzelman was graduated from West Point in 1899. After service in the Philippines and China he was sent to France as an observer, and when America entered the war he held high staff assignments. He won the D. S. M. and was decorated by France and Italy. From the inception of the CCC General Heintzelman was in charge of federal reclamation projects in Missouri until last February, when he was given command of the Seventh corps area.

Elementary Children Stage Open House

The second and third grade pupils of Mrs. J .V. Adams held open house yesterday morning in their class room from 9:00 to 10:30 o'clock. The children acted as hostesses. Committees of children had worked out all the details and were in complete charge.

The children exhibited animal masks they had made from brown paper sacks, then painted. They exhibited also the habitats they had made, explaining that they had modeled them from the real ones they had seen at the Talladega museum.

Souvenirs of animal poems the pupils wrote themselves were given to all the visitors.

After all the animal articles had been exhibited, the pupils and their visitors went to the assembly hall for a period of music and dancing. The children used the animal masks and gave interpretative dancing.

STUDENTS OF SUMMER SCHOOL MAKE TOUR TO TUSCALOOSA

To study at close range the influences of heredity and to tour several state buildings the biology class of the Montevallo Demonstration High School and the teacher of the class, Mr. R. G. Sagebeer, made a trip to Tuscaloosa on Friday, July 5. The party visited Bryce Hospital, the Institute for Feeble-Minded Children, and Smith Hall, the museum on the campus of the University of Alabama.

The first stop was at Bryce Hospital. Here the members of the class saw the details of organization of a large institution. In the kitchen they saw the various pots and pans in which food for the 3,500 patients is prepared. In the sewing room they examined the beautiful work done by insane women.

The party was taken on tour through the Institution for Feeble- and Miss Edith Garrison. The pupils learned here that the majority of the children had inherited their condition. They learned also that of the 615 youngsters in the hospital only about one hundred of them are able to go to school.

In Smith Hall, the museum dedicated to geology and natural his- the Montevallo tourists saw in- ing collections of ores, shells, ancient pottery and stuffed ls. They expressed great in- in the live snake exhibit on the lawn behind the museum, especially in the huge rattler that was just awaking from a long sleep.

The class returned to Montevallo in the bus at 5:30 o'clock. All the tourists were laughing good-naturedly despite the fact that they were hot and dust-covered.

FOURTH OF JULY ORATORS PLEA FOR RIGHTS, LIBERTY

Washington—Pleas for the protection of individual liberties and the rights of the States today dominated Forth of July oratory, lending a strong political tinge to the holiday celebration.

So worded were the addresses of several headlined speakers of both parties that in some observers read indirect thrusts at the New Deal. Others were loaded with loudly-spoken specific denunciation of President Roosevelt's activities. Still others carried his praise.

Leading one wing of the parade, former President Herbert Hoover asserted that "wherever in the world individual liberty has been maintained" the people have been better fed, clothed and housed, happier and more self-respecting.

From the South came a call for safe-guarding State rights, with Gov. Talmadge, of Georgia, outspoken New Deal critic, demanding abandonment of the Roosevelt program "as the only road to recovery."

Also from within the Democratic Party, Senator Byrd, of Virginia, headlining the capital's own celebration at the foot of the Washington Monument, stressed President Washington's views on individual freedom and praised him as "for his day a conservative in thought and judgement".

Washington's celebration, in many respects a counterpart of thousands throughout the Nation, consisted of a band concert the Byrd speech, fireworks, and ceremoines in Arlington National Cemetery, where Senator Clark (D), Missouri, denounced worldwide armament races as ominously inevitable breeders of war.

Hoover spoke first at a luncheon meeting in Grass Valley, Calif. With a few introductory remarks he swung directly into a discussion of individual liberty. He made no mention of President Roosevelt or the New Deal, but many contended his meaning, in the light of his past assertions, was nine-the-less plain.

"When our forefathers set up the Government they embedded in its constitution those inalienable rights," he said. "They built this bill of rights into a frame work of self-government whose checks and balances safeguard this system of orderly individual liberty.

"They insured the perpetuation of that liberty by providing for orderly change to meet a growing civilization solely upon action of the people themselves. . . .

"Even in America, where liberty first blazed the brightest and by its glow shed light on all the world, it is now questioned and attacked from both at home and abroad. Our safety from thesee attacks upon American principles and American institutions lies in holding fast to the fundamentals of the great constitutional charter of our liberties."

From the South, too ,came a defense of the President. Senator Russell (D), Georgia, described the Chief Executive as "a man who did not and will not yield to demagogues. Talk that Mr. Roosevelt is assuming the powers of a dictatorship he denounced as "utter folly."

Former Senator Blease, South Carolina Democrat, lashed the national administration without memtioning the President and urged that he termed a return to basic constitutional government and the premise of State rights.

STRONG SPEAKERS HEARD AT STUDENT CAREER CONFERENCE

On the closing day of the Student Career Conference at Alabama College the high school graduates attending heard a strong appeal to convert their ambition into energy to carry them toward professional achievement and service. The speakers at the two general meeting were Miss Helen M. Voorhees, leader of the conference, and Charles T. Zukowski, of Birmingham.

Speaking on the subject A Career as a Means of Self-Expression, Miss Voorhees considered these four types of careers: home economics, farming, teaching and the general field of health. She stated that in the home and in these phases of work there is opportunity for self expression as corpletely as in the arts.

Mr. Zukowski spoke on "What the Employer Expects." He pointed out the fact that the prepared person, enthusiastic and effective, is always occupied and usually employed. He said that an employer likes the kind of enthusiasm that means an "active pleasure in the work being done and an interest in seeing it forwarded to the fullest extent of one's capacity." For this qualification,, he said, there is no adquate substitute. Among other traits sought in the professional person he emphasized personality and self-confidence among the "demandments of an employer."

Dr. Hallie Farmer, of Alabama College, and Mrs. Mary H. Fowler, of Birmingham, presided at the two meetings Friday, the evening program being followed by an informal reception at the home of Dr. and Mrs. O. C. Carmichael.

Saturday morning Miss Voorhees addressed a large group of Alabama business women, assembled in special session in connection with the Student Career Conference. She discussed the subject "Professional Hurdles," telling of the relative progress of women in this and other countries in business recognition for women.

Miss Rochelle Rodd Gachet, of Birmingham, presided at this meeting.

Following an expression of welcome by President Carmichael on behalf of the college, Dr. Katherine Vickery, of the Psychology Department, spoke on "Tests for the Business Woman; Dr Minnie L. Steckel, student counselor, on "Reports of Interviews;" Mrs. Mollie C. Walker, of the National Reemployment Service, on "Employment of Professional Women in Alabama;" and Mrs. Angus Taylor, of Birmingham, on "A Business of One's Own." A general discussion followed.

This is the first time that the conference for business women has been held. The second annual conference for high school representatives began Wednesday. It was limited by scholarship to the upper fourth of the graduating classes. The students took personality, intelligence and vocational tests and afterwards were given private conferences on the professions for which they seem best qualified. Round table discussions in thirteen major fields were held on Friday.

P. H. Searcy, of Enterprise, Ala., Tells Why He Purchased Additional Electrical Appliances

Observing that his friends were making more liberal use of electricity in their homes, and wishing to give his family all modern comforts and conveniences, P. H. Searcy, prominent business man of Enterprise, Ala., investigated the cost of electricity under the new low rates, and found that even with additional electric appliances his bill still would be surprisingly low.

"Until just recently there has been in the minds of myself and my family a firm conviction that electricity came too high for more than the barest use, and consequently we economized in this direction all possible. Observing use our friends made of your current led me at last to investigate the actual cost of electricity. I was amazed to find that it cost me less than one-third of a cent to burn a 60 watt bulb for one hour." Mr Searcy says in a letter recently addressed to Alabama Power Company.

"On making inquiries at my local office, I also found that the more current I used, the less it cost. This encouraged me to put in electrical equipment in the form of a range and water heater and to install the proper size bulbs in our sockets. We are now enjoying the many comforts and conveniences that electricity can bring one, in addition to protecting our eyes by using sufficient light, and are glad to report that our electric bills are much less than the amount we had imagined they would be.

"We consider the day we really investigated the price of electric current and found it so reasonable a very lucky day for us."—Adv. Alabama Power Co.

STREET PAVING HERE PLANNED

OFFICIALS WILL ESTIMATE THE COST AND GET PROPERTY OWNERS' OPINION

The city officials of Montevallo are preparing to submit to the Works Administration a program of paving streets and sidewalks in the residence sections of the city. It is stated that the plans include about eight miles of additional sidewalks. The extent of the street paving will depend upon the willingness of the property owners to cooperate and pay their part of the cost.

Already a survey has been made by an engineer, Mr. Mullins, of Montgomery, from which he will prepare an estimate of the cost of the work and report it to the city officials in the next few days.

After the estimate of the cost has been made and the cost per property front foot to the owner has been detrmined, the city officials expect to take the matter up with the property owners along the streets proposed to be paved and determine the willingness of the owners to bear their part of the cost.

Under the plans of the Works Progress Administration, if the projects can be approved, the cost of paving to the property owners will be only a fraction of what the same work would cost if the city and property owners should do the work themselves.

During the trip the Montevallo scouts won the following number of merit badges: Bob C. Anderson, 3; Henry Clay Griffin, 2; Donald Vaughan, 2, and J. A. Brown 1.

The patrol, which included the five Montevallo scouts, won the patrol contest in which fifty scouts from Birmingham and Bessemer districts competed. On the first day of the camp Henry Clay Griffin was named the Honor Camper and Donald Vaughan was given the honor the second day. The most willing worker, selected within each patrol, was Donald Vaughan with Henry Clay Griffin, Bob C. Anderson and J. A. Brown placing in that order.

Two Negro Children Drown in Coosa River

Two negro girls about twelve years old were drowned last Friday afternoon when the car in which they were riding plunged into the Coosa River at McGowan's Ferry near Childersburg. A young negro man was driving the car, and went around a curve and into the water before he realized the car was so near the river, it is stated.

One of the girls whose home was at Fayetteville, was wedged in the car when it was pulled out of the river later Friday afternoon. The other girl, a daughter of Mose Browder, near Verbena, was not recovered until Monday morning of this week.

There were two or three other larger girls in the car, but they managed to get out without serious injury.

PLAY TO BE GIVEN ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Those who enjoy musical comedy of the highest type will be delighted to know that the ladies of the Methodist Church have secured one of the most popular musical comedies of the South for their entertainment this year to be presented by local talent Friday evening at Palmer Hall.

"Here Comes Arabella" contains a cast of about fifty of the town's and the college's best talent, wit, music, choruses, brilliant costuming, and an excellent plot. Rehearsals began last week. Much interest and progress has been shown, and people of Montevallo are expecting to see one of the best performancs ever given here. Those taking part are well-known local artists.

It will be quite a pleasure to see Taylor Hardy as Bob Adair, struggling young artist and most popular man in the city. He charms the audience as usual with his vocal numbers.

Much pep and modern atmosphere is furnished by Allen Gresky and Hoyt Stevens as Jack and Bill, young men about town while Warren Brown as Sydney, Bob's roommate, shows one the inside of the art of play writing.

Beatrice Looney, as the giggling young co-ed, keeps the audience in stitches as she reminds one forcibly of Gracie Allen at her best.

Virginia Moore and Mary C. De Shazo as Prudence and Debby, Bob's old maid aunts, keep everyone in stitches with their oldfashioned ideas. manners and clothes. Only Uncle Josh, their brother, Leon Perry, can really change their ideas for them. Uncle Josh can out josh the best of them.

One of the high lights of the show is the meeting of the Ladies Aid, wherein many prominent local people unsuspectingly takes part. The most efficient members are Mrs. E. E. Craig as Mrs. Lurkins, Retha Pope Brown as Mrs. Waddles, and Myrtle Cloninger as Mrs. Macks.

Whether gentlemen prefer blondes or brunettes or redheads they will be delighted with the sparkling smile of the beautiful young ladies who sing and dance in Arabella's choruses to tunes ranging all the way from the dreamy waltz of minuet days to the haunting gypsy love dance. About twenty of the town's most attractive children and younger girls take part in costume as Ladies Aiders and Robin Redbreasts.

Dr. L. L. Gwaltney Was Speaker At Civic Club

At the meeting of the Montevallo Civic Club last week Dr. L. L. Gwaltney, of Birmingham, was the speaker. He discussed some current problems in a very interesting way.

COLLEGE CAMP FOR GIRLS BEING HELD

The Councillors of the Alabama College Camp for Girls, being held from July 22 to August 17, arrived on the campus Saturday to greet the largest group of campers the event has ever drawn. The group will represent many sections of Alabama as well as other Southern states.

Miss Helen Hewell, of Mobile, was recently appointed councillor in speech. She has had wide experience in that work at Alabama College, having taken the lead in several major theatrical productions. Another councillor is to be appointed to serve in the field of music, which with speech is to be given greater stress in the campers' activities this year.

Dr. Minnie L. Steckle, student counselor at Alabama College and camp director, has announced several additions to the program. Campers will be asked to use cameras in connection with their study in art. A camp newspaper will be issued every two weeks to give writing experience and to carry home news of the group.

The three camp scholarship winners are to reach Montevallo Saturday to assist the councillors in advance arrangements and in meeting the campers at buses and trains. The camp has been held for three years. During that time as many as three members of some families have attended while some campers have returned each summer. It is planned to give the camp another name during the coming session.

SHALL WE DESTROY THE WEALTH?

The recent proposals to create new and more stringent federal taxes, based on the demagogic demand of "share-the wealth," have met with virtually unanimous denunciation from newspapers, from industrial leaders, and from the best economic commentators.

As many unbiased experts have pointed out, "share-the-wealth" would really "destroy-the-wealth." It is all very well to talk about soaking the rich, and about breaking up accumulated capital, but when you do that you break up industry, you destroy jobs, you artificially dry up the springs of productive enterprise, you stop progress—and in the long run, the person who gets soaked hardest is the man looking for a job.

These new proposals are not primarily destined to raise revenue—drastic and confiscatory as they are, they would produce but a minute fraction of the money that is being spent today for federal activities. The rich are too few and far between, and the great estates that would be taxed almost into non-existence are rarer yet. The proposals come under the head of "reform"—and they are put forward at a time when other unprecedented "reforms" are the greatest obstacles in the way of recovery. We need to stimulate capital, not to frighten it; we need to give the investor the confidence that will make him put his money to work, not make him give up in despair because of policies that would destroy the accumulations and labors of generations.

Fair, equitable and reasonable taxation is essential to economic and social stability; inequitable, unfair and confiscatory taxation can create only havoc—at the expense of every worker, every home-owner, every citizen.

ALL SHOULD PAY

In a recent newspaper article, Walter Lippman, the distinguished publicist, pointed out that any sound national taxing system must see to it that every citizen, no matter how large or small his income, pays something in direct taxes.

Under present conditions, only a minority of citizens pay any direct taxes whatsoever, and that has given rise to the highly erroneous belief that the majority of citizens are free from taxation—that the services of government come to them for nothing, being paid for by the tax-paying minority.

That attitude has been responsible for the amazing indifference of the average citizen toward wasteful, extravagant and over-extending government. He feels that governmental spending means nothing to him, so far as paying his share of the bill is concerned; that deficits are the worry of others, and that increasing appropriations cannot damage his pocketbook—and may benefit it.

As a matter of fact, the majority of citizens, who pay no direct taxes, pay the great bulk of government costs—indirectly. They pay them in higher costs for commodities of all kinds—shoes, electricity, amusment, transportation, everything they use. They pay more rent, more insurance, more for medical and hospital care—because the taxes levied against businesses and corporations must be passed on to the consumer. It is folly to talk of industry "absorbing" taxes—the user of a product or a service always foots the bill in the long run.

If, as Mr. Lipp man suggests, every income were subjected to some direct taxation—even if it amounted to only a dollar a year, every citizen would get an inkling of the real meaning of government spending. And when his small tax doubled or trebled he would know what it meant. He would realize his responsibility, and his personal interest in every public appropriation that is made. And that would mark the beginning of an aggressive, nationally-backed movement to force government to be efficient, conservative, economical.

THE HOLE IN YOUR POCKET

Press dispatches from Washington state that in the last twelve months $7,375,000,000 has been spent, which, with the $7,100,000,000 that was spent the preceding year, makes a total peacetime record spending of $14,475,000,000 for the past two years. Money has been spent twice as fast as it has been collected from the taxpayers. But all the spendings and all the borrowed money must eventually be extracted from the taxpayers' pockets.

At the end of the new fiscal year, it is estimated the national debt will be approximately $35,000,000,000, or a per capita debt of $270 on every man, woman and child in the country.

These figures are so staggering in size that one cannot grasp them. But the individual tax bills of various kinds that will soon be coming due, can be readily understood by every taxpayer whose pockets will be emptied in order to pay them.

Colonel Robinson, of the Yakima, Washington, Republic, in answering a "reactionary" citizen who asserted that taxpayers should have a voice in how their money is spent and that it should be spent as economically as possible, said:

"The idea that money should be spent economically is just as far out of date as the other. If tax money were spent economically, there wouldn't be more than half of it spent, and that fact alone is sufficient to condemn the idea. The prevailing thought is to spend public funds uneconomically, so that more funds can be raised and spent, thus putting more money into circulation and increasing the purchasing power of the people."

Sarcastic as is this paragraph of the Colonel's, it states a distressingly plain truth. Its lucidity is positively flawless. Some day the people will wake up to the fact that they pay the bill for all the "political presents" that are given to them.

COUNTRY PRESS TO THE RESCUE

California has had a pretty tough dose of agitation for public ownership of industries, including public utilities.

It has been threatened with legislation that would permit the issuance of a veritable flood of so-called "revenue" bonds which could be authorized by local politicians. These would have permitted the wildest kind of "wild cat" financing under political management.

California had a bad scare. From a state that had for years attracted capital, it bid fair to become a state that was known for its radical laws and tax infestation.

It is hardly fair to single out California alone for these undesirable "honors." It is simply an outstanding example of conditions that many states face.

But the country free press is coming to the rescue. Next to the United States Constitution, it is the greatest safeguard of the rights and liberties of the people. Typical of the comment that is now appearing throughout the nation, is the following editorial quotation from the Napa, California, Daily Register:

Californians and Americans generally, have come to realize that if we are ever to find our way out of the depression and back into the paths of prosperity again, it will be because of the activity of private industry, the growth of private payrolls, and the decreased taxpaying power of privately-owned properties—not because of lenghtening payrolls, increased patronage in the hands of politicians, or added number of tax-exempt properties.

"We have already too much government in business.

"We already have too much government in direct competition with business.

"Less government in business is now the demand of the American citizen and taxpayer."

News Review of Current Events the World Over

New Deal Badly Hurt by Ruling That AAA Processing Taxes Are Unconstitutional—Democratic Senators Score Schall of Minnesota.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

TWO to one against the New Deal was the week's score in Federal court decisions. The administration suffered severely. The Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati first held unconstitutional the condemnation of land by the PWA for slum clearance. Then the Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston dealt the AAA a terrific blow by declaring unconstitutional the processing and flour taxes. The one favorable decision was by the Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and was that the sale of cheap electric power by the Tennessee Valley authority was constitutional.

Chester Davis

Harold Ickes, who is PWA administrator, said the slum clearance work would be carried on, though necessarily in modified form. But Chester Davis, AAA administrator, openly admitted that "the end of the processing taxes would mean the end of the Agricultural Adjustment administration in all its important aspects." He would not confess that he believed for a minute the Supreme court would confirm the ruling of the court at Boston. He asserted he had expected that decision to be adverse, saying: "That section around Boston is a hotbed of resistance to the processing taxes. Why, it's right up there among all those cotton manufacturers." This was most extraordinary comment from a high government official, but the Appeals court in Boston has not yet cited Davis for contempt.

Most well informed and unbiased persons have never believed the processing taxes would stand up under court test. The Guffey coal bill has some similar features, so that those who debate it should read these paragraphs in the Boston decision:

"The power of congress to regulate interstate commerce does not authorize it to do so by taxing products either of agriculture or industry before they enter interstate commerce, or otherwise to control their production merely because their production may indirectly affect interstate commerce.

"The issue is not, as the government contended, whether congress can appropriate funds for any purpose deemed by congress in furtherance of the 'general welfare,' but whether congress has any power to control or regulate matters left to the state and lay a special tax for that purpose."

Several hundred suits to enjoin collection of the processing taxes have been filed in Federal courts by processors. If they pay the taxes and the act is held unconstitutional by the Supreme court, they will not be able to recover, under a provision of the pending amendments prohibiting recovery suits against the government.

DROPPING all their rebellious indignation, the Democrats of the house did everything the administration wished in considering the social security bill as altered by the senate. The conferees had settled all differences after two weeks of hard work, but one of the amendments they accepted was that permitting private pension systems to function under the measure. The majority members of the house were informed that President Roosevelt was opposed to this, so they refused to accept it. The senate would not permit the elimination of the amendment, so back to conference went the bill.

THOMAS D. SCHALL, the blind senator from Minnesota, has been one of the sharpest tongued critics of the administration in the senate. Recently he described President Roosevelt as a "megalomaniac," and, though the word was subsequently eliminated from the Record, the Democratic senators were decidedly miffed. So a little later Senators Robinson, Black and Bone found opportunity to tell Schall what they think of him and to demand that he conform to the rules of "decency."

Senator Schall

The argument started when Schall had read by a clerk an editorial from a Texas editor, and an address of his own—all critical of the administration.

Robinson protested. He asserted "when one whose moral obliquities are so great as are those of the senator from Minnesota, it becomes necessary for some one to object." He added Schall "cannot shield himself behind an unfortunate affliction."

The Schall speech said President Roosevelt was imitating Mussolini, and that Ben Cohen, an administration aid and bill drafter, had "assumed the legislative functions usurped by the Executive."

Robinson called Schall the "misrepresentative from Minnesota" and expressed the opinion the senator had "employed" some one to write his speeches.

"It is small business and only could be done by a man of small mentality," said the Arkansas senator.

Replying, Schall said, "If the people knew what was behind this government they would not stand for it a minute."

SENDING floods of telegrams to senators or representatives for or against pending legislation will not be so effective in the future, as a result of the disclosures before the senate lobby investigators. They heard evidence to the effect that large numbers of telegrams against the utilities bill were sent from Warren, Pa., by an employee of the Associated Gas and Electric system, that the messages were signed with names taken from a city directory and that the originals were destroyed at Warren.

The senate committee, evidently planning a nation-wide inquiry, asked the Western Union Telegraph company to prohibit the destruction of any messages transmitted during the last year, and officials of the company promised to co-operate.

TWENTY months of apparently futile moves to revitalize the commercial relations between the United States and Russia, and then suddenly Washington announces that the two nations had concluded a one-year trade agreement under which the Soviet Republics agreed to increase their American imports by 150 per cent. In return for purchase of $30,000,000 worth of American goods Russia is to be granted wide tariff concessions by the United States.

Secretary Hull

Russia will buy railroad equipment, machinery for making new automobile models and other products of heavy industry. In addition the Soviets will buy cotton. The railroad equipment is needed badly for modernization of a weak transportation system.

In return Russia expects to sell sausage casings, certain grades of iron ore, manganese, furs and dairy products in large quantities to the United States.

The pact, concluded by the exchange of notes between Ambassador Bullitt in Moscow and Maxim Litvinov, commissar for foreign affairs, provides for no further loans to Russia and makes no mention of the more than $700,000,000 in debts contracted by former Russian governments. It is in line with Secretary Hull's policy of trade agreements. For these two reasons especially it is attacked by many Republicans and not a few Democrats in congress. Senator Pat McCarren of Nevada was one of the angriest of these gentlemen. He declared Secretary Hull was a "prize diplomatic dupe" and announced that he would demand an immediate modification of the reciprocal tariff act to rescind powers under which Hull is negotiating such treaties. Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, also is earnestly opposed to Hull's trade program.

SENATOR J. HAMILTON LEWIS of Illinois, a member of the foreign relations committee, long has urged that Great Britain be persuaded to cede to the United States her island possessions in the Caribbean sea in payment of her war debt. The other day he was moved to bring the subject up again and delivered an interesting speech in the senate. This time he based his proposal upon the "peace offer" of England to cede a portion of her territory in Somaliland to Ethiopia, which in turn would cede certain territory to Italy with a view of averting the impending war between those countries.

Senator Lewis

The senator also suggested that England surrender all rights she claims to privileges of constructing a Nicaraguan canal, recalling, as a precedent, that England compelled France to yield all claims to territory adjacent to the Suez canal.

The British islands in the West Indies, the senator said, are both useful as defense and necessary as protection for the United States. They "could be seized in time of war between nations fighting among themselves to possess the Caribbean and Southern seas. They could be used as the backyard of the United States from which supplies could be stored to be used in assault on America."

CHARLES TAUSSIG, who had served the administration for two years without official title or position, has been appointed chairman of the advisory committee of the National Youth administration. In announcing the creation of the NYA the President allocated to it $50,000,000 of work-relief funds.

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE appeared before the Ethiopian parliament and made an impassioned appeal to his countrymen to fight Italy to the death, declaring he had prepared himself to die in the contest if need be.

"Ethiopia knows how to fight to preserve its independence and its sovereignty," he said.

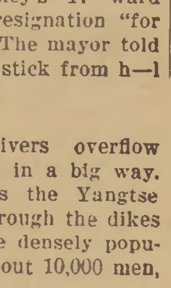
"Soldiers! Follow the example of your warrior ancestors. Soldiers! Traders! Peasants! Young and old, men and women: Unite to face the invader! Your sovereign will be among you and will not hesitate to give his blood for the independence of his country."

Though the League of Nations council was scheduled to meet for consideration of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel between July 25 and August 2, there were indications that the European nations were about ready to abandon Ethiopia to its fate and that if "The Lion of Judah" doesn't give in completely, Mussolini will be permitted to have his way with him. That probably will mean a long guerrilla warfare the details of which will not be pleasant reading.

Newspapers of northern Italy intimated that Premier Mussolini might abandon his projected war with Ethiopia if he could find a way of backing out without losing face. But the Roman public was quite sure the duce's aggressive policy would be unimpaired. This opinion was strengthened by the sending of more troops to East Africa.

Secretary of State Hull entered the picture again with a rather mild statement expressing America's abhorrence of war and confidence in the Kellogg pact. The Italians didn't like this at all.

SENATOR HUEY LONG has the political fate of his chief opponent, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans, in the palm of his hand. But he is forcing the people of the city to put the mayor out. A majority of Walmsley's followers, tired of the conflict, formally deserted him when the commission council adopted a resolution endorsing recent statements of two commissioners calling for the city to make peace with Long. The mayor, standing almost alone, declined to yield. He told the council he "would not deal with men who have been called 'crooks and thieves' by every member of the commission council."



T. Semmes Walmsley

In a caucus preceding the council session, 13 of Walmsley's 17 ward leaders voted for his resignation "for the good of the city." The mayor told them he was "going to stick from h—l to breakfast."

WHEN Chinese rivers overflow they do the thing in a big way. The Han, which joins the Yangtse near Hankow, broke through the dikes and rushed through the densely populated land, drowning about 10,000 men, women and children.

UNOFFICIALLY and informally, the general opinion seems to be that the Wagner labor disputes act is unconstitutional and will be so declared by the United States Supreme court when that tribunal is called on for a decision. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urges labor leaders to pay no attention to claims that the law is invalid.

"Leading legal authorities of the nation are of the opinion that the act is Constitutional in every respect," he wrote, but added in a letter that he expects a court test and that the American Federation of Labor will get "the best legal talent."

Even if the Wagner law is knocked out by the Supreme court, the administration believes it has a plan that will avert at least 90 per cent of the usual number of strikes, walk-outs, lock-outs and other disorders. It is being launched in Toledo, Ohio, and has been called the "Toledo plan" because it was conceived by Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady when he was trying to settle a dispute in that Ohio city.

It has no sectional characteristics; carries no federal compulsion, and rests solely upon the willingness of workers and employers in every city that adopts the plan, to abandon the harsh economic weapons of old and substitute peaceful discussion for violence.

Here again Green throws a monkey-wrench into the machinery. He says the A. F. of L. will not co-operate in promoting the McGrady plan because it provides that the mediation panels would include on the labor side representatives of company unions and of independent and rival unions. Under Green's leadership the policy of the A. F. of L. evidently is all for the federation, or nothing for anyone.

WITH the approval of the house labor committee a new bill intended to replace the NRA was brought forward in congress, but its chances of passage at this session were small. It would create a federal commission to license industries sending goods or commodities into interstate commerce. To obtain a federal license, an industry would be compelled to:

Work employees not more than 30 hours a week, provide wages adequate for "a decent and comfortable standard of living," accept collective bargaining, outlaw dealings with parties to "yellow dog" contracts and ban workers under sixteen years of age and convict or forced labor.

Who Would Pay This $2,000,000 Loss In Alabama Tax Revenues?

COULD Alabama, its counties and municipalities and institutions afford to lose the sorely needed sum of $2,000,000 annually in tax revenue?

What new taxes would be levied to make up this huge deficit?

These are not mere idle questions. They are vital questions, which may soon call for answers from the taxpayers and citizens of this State.

If the Tennessee Valley Authority should extend its operations throughout Alabama and pay taxes only on the basis agreed upon, Alabama, its counties and cities, would lose tax revenues amounting yearly to approximately TWO MILLIONS.

This grim prospect, whose grave significance is as yet only faintly realized, is this:

The Tennessee Valley Authority has agreed to pay as its total taxes in the State of Alabama, only 5 per cent upon its proceeds from the sale of power at wholesale rates.

On this same basis, private power companies in Alabama would have paid in taxes in this State during 1934, less than $400,000 instead of approximately $2,400,000 which they actually did pay.

In brief, the State, its institutions, its counties and municipalities would lose the difference in $2,400,000 and $400,000 which is $2,000,000.

What State funds, what State institutions, what Counties would lose this $2,000,000?

COUNTY AND CITY SCHOOLS
Would Lose Over $955,000

ALABAMA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE
Would Lose Over $ 30,000

UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA
Would Lose Over $ 22,000

ALABAMA COLLEGE, MONTEVALLO,
Would Lose Over $ 10,000

STATE TEACHERS' COLLEGES, NORMAL SCHOOLS AND OTHER EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES
Would Lose About $ 53,000

THE CONFEDERATE PENSION FUND
Would Lose Over $ 75,000

OTHER STATE, COUNTY, CITY AGENCIES
Would Lose About $855,000

To make up this huge loss of $2,000,000 annually, existing taxes would have to be increased or new taxes levied.

Are you willing to pay more taxes to make up this huge loss?

RA TO START REHABILITAT'N

Montgomery, Ala.—Resettlement of rehabilitation families who have proven their integrity worth and ability to purchase small farm and home sites is expected to begin during the winter months, R. K. Greene, Alabama rehabilitation director of the federal resettlement Administration, announced here.

'Families who first will be offered an opportunity of purchasing small farms on a long term basis will be carefully selected by the rehabilitation division according to their past performance and records, Mr. Greene said. He emphasized that the resettlement plan held out no bounty or "something for nothing" inducement but would be operated as the Rural Rehabilitation Program has been operated — strictly upon business principles and a "pay-as-you-go" basis.

Not one of the more than 14,000 families now on rehabilitation has been given a dime, Greene pointed out, and every family has been and will be required to repay the Resettlement Administration in full for all advances. Last year the average amount advanced per family for the crop season was $95.67, and 83.36 per cent of the $542,071 total advanced was repaid.

Thus, repayment of debts will be primary consideraton in offering a habilitation family the opportunity i purchasing a small farm.

Among the qualifications to be checked in offering rehabilitation families the privileges of farm buying are honesty, character, dependability; willingness and desire to work; the pioneer spirit which meets any challenge of adversity; resourcefulness in helping themselves rather than depending upon others; thrift, preparation for future emergencies; growing and storing and preservation of crops and foodstuffs; conservation and care of land and buildings now occupied by the family; saving surplus feed crops, care of animal and demonstrated managerial ability, which would embrace all enumerated qualifications.

Director Greene emphasized that the resettlement program did not contemplate removal of families to other sections of the state or to counties other than those in which they are now located if it were possible to obtain suitable land at a reasonable price in sections where they now reside.

All land to be purchased, he said, would be appraised according to its crop value and "no land will be purchased above its appraised value in terms of farm income."

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Miller of Boothton, had as their dinner guests Sunday Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Spivey, Mrs. Richard Tinney, Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Spivey's mother and their immediate families. The dinner was celebrating Mrs. Spivey's birthday.

THE RIGHT TO CRITICIZE
By Rev. Augustus J. Cox

In the ordinary give and take of life there is a tremendous amount of free diagnosis, criticism and advice given—a great deal more given, in fact, than there is received.

It is less frequently received not because it is not true—it very often is—but rather because it does not grow out of a positive relationship between the people involved. There is one condition for gaining a hearing for advice, and that is identification of ones self with the person one is trying to help. It is only because that condition is so seldom met that it is easier to give advice than to persuade another to take it.

It is well for the Christian who is keen to introduce others to the new life, which comes from Christ, to remember that fact. Confidence comes before conviction in the winning of your friend. It may come almost immediately between two people, or it may require months and years to build up—but come it must, through positive, humble, patient self-identification. The other person must know that you have much in common with him, or on his level, have his best interest at heart. You may know that is true, but you must wait until he knows it. Otherwise your advice is premature; it will not only not be received, but may offend the other person to such an extent that he will avoid you in the future as he would any busybody. When enthusiastic, well-intentional personal work fails to bring people to Christ, more times than not the reason is that the person doing it has jumped past confidence and is trying to produce conviction.

The same principle holds true in criticizing an institution, such as the church. If you want a hearing for your opinions on the church, become a positive, working part of it, identified with its successes and its failures, helping it to function at its maximum because you love Christ and are a member of His body. That is not to pretend that it has no faults; that is to win the right to correct those faults. If you do that, the church will listen to your suggestions. If you do not, it will disregard them, and justly so.

One has to win the right to criticize. And when he does, there are no limits to the positive results which may be achieved, when two people, mutually identified, speak the truth to one another in love.

VOLUME 3, NUMBER 19 MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA. THURSDAY, AUGUST 1, 1935 SUBSCRIPTION $1.50 PER YEAR

ESTIMATE MADE ON PAVING COST

CITY COUNCIL WANTS APPROVAL OF PROPERTY OWNERS ON PROJECT

The cost estimate on proposed concrete paving on residence streets recently prepared and announced by the city council is $1.81 per front foot for 20-foot streets and $2.75 per front foot for 30-foot streets.

The council hopes to secure consent of property owners along certain important residence streets for submission of the paving program to the Works Progress Administration.

It is stated that considerable opposition has been expressed, and it is yet undetermined as to whether the proposition will be submitted.

It should be easy for property owners to see that the cost of $1.81 and $2.25 per front foot for concrete street paving and concrete sidewalks is a most unusually low price for such improvements.

By comparison it is pointed out that former paving of the same kind done in Montevallo has cost the property owners $6.00 to $10 a front foot.

If the present opportunity to have this work done under the Works Administration is not accepted by the property owners, it is most likely certain that another such chance will never come along.

The city officials hope that everyone concerned will think seriously about this matter and consent to join in the movement.

Every Baptist Asked To Attend Services

The pastor continues in revival services at Antioch church in Bibb County. He will be home the last of the week and will preach at both services Sunday. The morning theme will be: "His Church and Yours." In the evening "The More Earnest Heed" will be the subject.

Every Baptist in Montevallo, including the unaffiliated Baptists ought to be present for the worship service Sunday morning. Those who find it impossible to come in the morning should come in the evening. Moreover everyone who can possibly do so ought to give something for the support of the church. We are counting on you. NEW CITY HALL PROPOSED HERE

TWO-STORY BRICK STRUCTURE ESTIMATED TO COST ABOUT $8,000

The City Council of Montevallo is about ready to submit to the Works Progress Administration full specifications on public projects for the erection of a city hall and about eight miles of concrete sidewalks paving in the residence districts.

The city hall, as proposed, will be a two-story brick building located on the city property back of Hayes Chevrolet Company.

The ground floor will contain a city jail and quarters for the city fire fighting equipment.

The second floor will be devoted to office space for city officials and an auditorium to seat about one hundred The total cost of the building is estimated at $8,000.00.

The sidewalks project includes about 8 miles of concrete paving four feet wide, which will involve a cost of about 22 cents per running foot to the property owners.

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama farmers received $8,594,693.91 in rental and benefit payments from July 1, 1934, to July 1, 1935, reports Dr. L. N. Duncan, director of the state extension service. Cotton farmers were paid $8,145,224.97 and corn-hog farmers $477,525.15. The payments were made by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Bids Requested For Shoal Creek Bridge

ESTIMATED COST OF THE JOB WILL BE AROUND $87,000

Sealed bids will be received by the State Highway Commission of Alabama on August 14 for constructing the steel and concrete bridge and approaches over Shoals Creek and the Southern Railway in Montevallo. This bridge constitutes a part of the proposed project to extend Middle Street across the creek and railroad to intersect the Calera Highway about the old cotton mill site. The cost of the bridge is estimated to be about $87,000.

The advertisement for bids says the minimum wage paid to skilled labor on this contract shall be 85 cents per hour; for intermediate grade labor 40 cents per hour; for unskilled labor 25 cents per hour.

The length of the project is stated as .37 mile, and the entire project shall be finished in 150 working days.

NEW VOTE ON LIQUOR LAWS

QUESTION IS LIVE AGAIN NOW AMONG MEMBERS OF LEGISLATURE

Montgomery, Ala.,—Advocates in the Legislature of changing Alabama's drastic prohibition laws decided Tuesday night at an organization meeting, held at a downtown hotel, to send a committee to Gov. Graves seeking his endorsement of another referendum on the liquor and beer question.

This course was proposed by Senator C. M. A. Rogers, of Mobile, sponsor of a resolution authorizing Representative A. L. Staples, chairman of the caucus, to send a committee to interview the governor.

Gov. Graves who ran for office on a platform that he would not approve any changes in the dry laws until the people had voted on them at the polls, will be asked to lend the strength of his administration behind the new referendum movement.

Followng the meeting Representative Staples said he would name a committee of five members Wednesday to call on the governor.

Before reaching a decision to seek another referendum, howeer, several legislators expressed their views on the prohibition question.

Senator Isham Dorsey, of Lee, told the group he strongly favored the creation of a state liquor control board to be composed of three or five members drawing adequate compensation and serving appointive overlapping terms. In addition, Senator Dorsey said he advocated another liquor referendum with counties voting wet to come under the liquor control board. Besides the state board Senator Dorsey said his plans contemplates the establishment of local boards to supervise and regulate liquor for sale. Liquor would be sold in regulated liquor stores, he said, the number to depend upon the size of the community.

Senator Dorsey added, moreover, that he favored state wide sale of beer, strictly regulated.

An additional feature of the Dorsey plan would be that the state board would be authorized to establish distilleries for makng old-fashioned corn and rye liquor to be sold in competition with outside visitors.

He is survived by his widow; two daughters, Mrs. R. R. Hassler, Birmingham, and Mrs. W. J. Mitchell, Monteavllo.

LAWLEY MAN IS KILLED LOADING A LOG TRUCK

Jack Collins, 29 years old, timber man, of Lawley, was instantly killed last Friday afternoon while loading a log truck in the woods near Lawley.

Funeral services were held at 10 a.m. Sunday, at Rehobeth church.

The accident victim is survived by his wife and three children; two sisters and five brothers.

Mrs. W. M. Davis and baby have returned to their home in Montevallo from the hospital in Clanton.

Dr. Acker Requests Milk Law Observance

Quite a number of our citizens have asked me if the present city council passed a new ordinance covering the handling and sale of milk and milk products. To clear up some confusion I wish to state that we are only concerned with safeguarding the health of our people, and asking the owners of cows to observe carefully both the letter and the spirit of the law of the state of Alabama as endorsed by the State Health Department, and required of every incorporated town as an ordinance. There is nothing severe nor unreasonable in the Model Ordinance covering milk and milk products and owners of cows are not only working in cooperation with the health laws but for their own personal interest where they comply cheerfully and fully with this state health law.—Chas. T. Acker, city health officer.

Many Relief Offices Close August 1

Following through with an announced determination to demobilize the federal relief system in Alabama, Thad Holt, director of the Alabama Relief Administration announced yesterday, that effective Aug. 1, Federal relief would be removed from the front door of citizens in all except 12 counties in the state.

Effective on that date, he said, county relief offices would be closed and instead about eight or ten district offices in the more populous centers would remain open for a short period.

It is probable, Mr. Holt indicated, that the district relief offices would be located in Mobile, Montgomery, Jefferson, Calhoun, Tuscaloosa and three other counties. Each district will in turn administer the relief needs for the entire district.

The effect of the order will be to make relief offices less accessible to applicants. Persons in need of relief in counties where relief offices have been closed, however, will still have access to the representative of the State Child Welfare Department in the county, and the welfare representative in turn may take the matter up with the district office.

HARMAN READY FOR JOB

Dr. A. F. Harmon, newly elected president of Alabama College at Montevallo, spent a few hours at the Capitol Friday. Dr. Harman came to confer with Gov. Graves about college matters He will officially take over the duties of president of the institution on September 1.

Dr. Harmon has had a splendid career as an educator in Alabama. Not the least of the fine jobs he has done was his work for the schools of Montgomery County as county superintendent. Montgomery County's schools became an object lesson to the nation during his regime. And then be became state superintendent of education by appointment ,of Gov. Graves. He was later elected to the job and served his regular four-year term. His call to head the Montevallo institution, after the resignation of Dr. Carmichael, was not unexpected in view of the outstanding service he has rendered to education in this state.

We believe that the board of trustees of Montevallo wrought well for the institution when Dr. Harman was called to head it. And we believe the people of Alabama will say the same thing after Dr. Harman gets intó harness and into the swing of the thing.—Montgomery Advertiser.

ITALIAN ETHIOPIAN EMBROGLIO

Students of European affairs have no lack of material these days—material that is both absorbing and appalling.

Top in interest is the Italian-Ethiopian embroglio, which progresses steadily toward war—most observers think actual hostilities will start in the fall. Premier Mussolini does most of his speakng from gun-carriages at present—and his remarks are the most warlike in post-war history. On the other side of the fence, black Emperor Haile Selassie pledges the life of every one of his subjects to the defense of Ethiopian independence. In the meantime, foreigners are evacuating Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital, on the advice of their consular representatives.

If war comes, Ethiopia will have two advantages—it will be able to muster an army of several million men accustomed to the almost incredibly hard country in which they live. A recent book on Ethiopia bears the title, "The Hell Hole of Creation," and visitors to Ethiopia say that description is not exaggerated. On the other hand, it has no artillery worthy of the name, only a few out-of-date airplanes, and even lacks modern repeating military rifles.

Italy is of course equipped in up-to-the-minute military style, with the latest in machine guns, tanks, field guns, rifles, gas, etc. Military authorities are confident she will win—though at a terrific cost of life, and over a longish period of time.

The period is further complicated now by the appearance of Japan with a warning to Italy that Nippon intends to keep her Ethiopoian markets. Japan is as much a first-class military power as Italy—and Mussolini dosen't want trouble with her.

DIFFUSED WEALTH

In spite of constant demagogic claims to the effect that the wealth of this country is concentrated in the hands of the few who exploits the many, the statistics paint a different picture.

The fact is that the wealth of America is widely diffused—probably more widely than in any other major power. For example, incomes of $100,000 per year and over constitute but on per cent of the nation's total income. Salaries and wages constitute 85 per cent. The remaining 14 per cent is represented by return on capital—in other words, by dividends and interest on securities, the bulk of which are held in small quanities by persons of moderate means.

In the words of the Manufacturer's Record, "People cannot be taxed into prosperity. They can be taxed into poverty and the quickest way to do it is to destroy wealth and savings which have made possible inventions, machinery and enterprise that give employment to labor."

America's hope for the future lies in the existence of capital—which simply means the factories, the industries, the stores and all other productive agencies that produce jobs, payrolls, income.

IN THE CAUSE OF INDUSTRIAL PEACE

A pamphlet issued by the Standard Oil Company of California provides an example of what progressive industries have done for the cause of industrial pace.

During the concern's long history, no group of its employes, with two unimportant exceptions, has ever struck for higher kages, shorter hours, better worfking conditions or for any other cause originating within the company. Reason: There has been nothing to strike about.

The company voluntarily introduced the eight-hour day. I twas the first to adopt the six-day week for drilling crews. It was among the first to provide pensions, sickness benefits, accident benefits and life insurance. When depression started it was one of the first to adopt the Share-the-Work plan, thus saving the jobs of 3,000 workers.

Policies such as these are shared by a legion of other businesses, large and small, and they speak well for American industry and the American workman. In spite of occasional strikes, the great mass of workers are well satisfied with their jobs and their employers, and are the last to make extortionate and unmeetable demands.

A FUMBLE THAT BRINGS DISASTER

In an ancient religious rite, citizens stood at equal intervals, forming a chain. The one nearest the altar lighted a torch, then ran and gave it to the next, who in turn passed it on to the third, and so on. Each man ran without looking back. His sole interest was to pass on the flaming symbol.

These citizens are warned against fumbling the torch. An "Don't fumble the torch" is a good axiom to apply to modrn times. The " torch," in this connection, is very small— a match— but what terrible havoc is wrought when it is fumbled. Tall buildings are razed, homes destroyed, virgin forests laid waste, and worst of all, hundreds of human lives are lost by fire every year. The toll of fire from the careless use of matches, and from smoking, in 1932 was almost $30,000,000, according to figures compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

And yet—what a simple matter it is to be careful. The extra seconds required to make certain that butts or matches are completely extinguished are well spent when you consider what may happen if the torch is fumbled. Just place your heel on the butt and crush out every spark, or if it is a match, break it between your fingers. You fumble only when you toss them away carelessly. Don't do it!

THE ISSUE OF FREEDOM

A recent editorial in Liberty said: "Our pioneer ancestors were determined to be free men. They wanted the privilege of guiding their own destiny, of forming their own government, of living their own lives in accordance with the dictates of their conscience and intelligence. And they valued their citizenship, the Constitutional rights delegated to them. As citizens they were far better informed about their government than we are today. We were born into it. It has come to us through inheritance. And like the idle shiftless sons of rich men, having made no sacrifices for our liberties, we value them lightly. And perhaps much of the freedom we now enjoy may be lost before we awaken to the dangers that now confronts us."

Too many Americans pay no attention to government. They accept the proposal and passage of laws that are opposed to both the letter and spirit of the Constitution without complaint. They watch the growth of political bureaucracy, and the centralization of politicial power, without the slightest regard as to what they may do to our institutions.

Recent decisions of the Supreme Court in the NRA and other cases have, it is to be hoped, helped to focus a measure of public attention on the issue of freedom versus politicaal dictatorship. If America is to be maintained as a free democracy, the home of the free men, every citizen must do his part to keep it so. He must realize that there can be no temporizing with those who would change our system of government—even as there can be no compromise between individualism and socialism, communism of fascism.

WHERE THERE IS NO SATURATION POINT

The Insurance Field observes that it is occasionally said that life insurance has reached the saturation point But statistics paint a different picture.

Life insurance policies have been purchased by about half the people of this country. Their investment in life insurance totals some $22,000,000,000. Yet vast as that figure is, the average individual policy outstanding is for only $1,670—and the average share of life insurance assets per policyholder amounts to only $364. As the Insurance Field says: "What a field for additional insurance!"

As a matter of fact, there can be no real saturation point in life insurance. No person can have too much security. No one can have investments that are too safe. And there are few of us who don't want more money in old age, both for ourselves and our dependents.

If the average man has only $1,600 of insurance, there is a market for ten or twenty times that amount. By the time that is reached, it is very possible that the average man will want to increase his insurance holdings still further.

Every time a larger part of the income is spent for insurance, the national assets increase and spending rises. More money goes for the necessities and luxuries that make jobs and investmens—and that, in turn, begets still more spending. The potentialities of life insurance as an economic force, entirely aside from its social benefits would require an Einstein to figure.

ADULT EDUCATION PROGRAM IS BEING CARRIED ON HERE

Five hundred students in the Adult Education Program, in addition to the regular college enrollment, are at Alabama College for the second summer term. Representing every section of the state, they are being trained in a variety of fields for instuction of adult classes in the fall. Judson Snead, of the state department of Education, is directing the program in cooperation with committees from the college and the department. Dr. M. L. Orr is chairman of the Alabama College group.

The required courses include general education for adults and a course of methods in this connection. The former embraces adult phychology, organization of adult classes and methods and plans for special development meetings. It is being taught by H. G. Dowling, superintendent of education, Tuscaloosa County.

The elective courses include crafts, home improvement, buying and preparation of food, buying and making of clothing, child care and parent education, home nursing, health education, citizenship, play activities, music appreciation, home gardening, landscaping, poultry culture, dairying, home meat supply, soil conservation and rural social organization and agricultural economy.

The extra curriculum activities include a program in dramatics, stressing selection and production of plays for rural communities. Miss Evelyn Walker of Birmingham is in charge of this work. In addition, Miss Martha Allen, of Montevallo, is conducting some special work in pottery.

Among the staff members for the courses are Mrs. M. T. Hatton, Miss Elizabeth Slaughter, Capt. J. Johnson, Miss Ethel F. Johnson, Miss Lillian Carnes, Miss Dorothy Hatcher, Mrs. Fannie Cotney, Miss Alma Bentley, Mrs. Pearl B. Crawford, W. F. Tidwell, Lewis Stookey, J. R. Farmby, Miss Mary Mitchell, Miss Mary Ford, H. F. Gibson and Miss Young Hayes.

The entire facilities of the college are open to the adult teachers just as to the regular summer school student body, and the combined registration is approximately equal to that of the regular session.

President's Way of Ending Virgin Islands Row Arouses Criticism—Senator Black Probes for Truth About Utilities Cigar Box.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

THAT row over the administration of the Virgin islands was so unpleasant that President Roosevelt felt impelled to settle it himself. So he removed from office the two chief battlers. Gov. Paul M. Pearson and Judge T. Webber Wilson, had other jobs found for them, and nominated as Pearson's successor Lawrence W. Cramer, who was serving as lieutenant governor of St. Croix island. Confirmation of this appointment was not immediate. The senate committee investigating the islands affairs was slow in making up its mind about Cramer, and from St. Thomas came the news that the foes of the Pearson administration there, together with a delegation from St. Croix, were protesting vigorously against the President's selection of a new governor.

L. W. Cramer

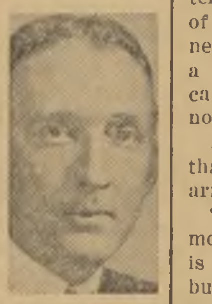
The Emancipator, opposition paper, said editorially:

"The islanders would about as soon have Pearson, for under Cramer no change of policy can be expected. Poor and unknown as the humble people of the Virgin islands may be, they are entitled to an example of honor and courage from the President of the American Republic."

The disposal of Pearson and Wilson also aroused criticism in Washington. The former had been attacked steadily by Pat Harrison of Mississippi and other Democratic senators, but Secretary of the Interior Ickes had defended him warmly, so he was given a job under Ickes, being made assistant director of housing in the PWA at $8,000 a year, a place not previously filled.

In order to provide a job for Judge Wilson, a former congressman from Mississippi and a protege of Senator Harrison, a woman was forced off the federal parole board. Attorney General Cummings requested and obtained the resignation of Dr. Amy A. Stannard, a psychiatrist who has been in the government service 12 years with a civil service status and had been a member of the parole board since 1930. Wilson was sworn in as her successor. Since Wilson's qualifications for the place appeared to be chiefly political, observers in Washington noted sadly that the parole board was getting back into political hands.

WHAT was in the cigar box wrapped in a newspaper? That is what Senator Hugo Black, chairman of the senate lobby committee, wanted to know. Before the committee for questioning was John W. Carpenter of Dallas, president of the Texas Power and Light company. He admitted freely that he and other utility men had hotel conferences, dinners and a trip down Chesapeake bay with congressmen durthe fight over the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, and that he himself had centered his efforts on Texas congressmen. But of the mysterious box he could or would tell nothing. Black probed and probed, and finally asked:



Senator Black

"Do you still say that in the morning (of the day before the vote on the utilities bill 'death sentence') you didn't give a congressman a box wrapped up in a newspaper?"

Carpenter replied quietly: "I don't think I did, unless it was a few cigars."

Senate and house conferees met to consider the utility control bill, but there were small signs that they could get together, and one session ended abruptly in a real row. Two administration lobbyists, Benjamin Cohen and Dozier A. De Vane, were brought into the executive session by Senators Wheeler and Barkley and though Representative George Huddleston protested, their continued presence was insisted upon. Whereupon the fiery Alabama congressman and his fellows from the house walked out and broke up the meeting. Cohen is generally given credit for writing the measure.

After leaving the committee room, Huddleston said flatly that the house conferees woud not recede from the position that the "death sentence" must be eliminated.

OPPONENTS of the AAA amendments designed to strengthen the powers of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace decided to let the basic act go up to the Supreme court, so the administration bill was passed by the senate with only 15 adverse votes.

Both Republican and conservative Democratic foes of the AAA are confident that the Supreme court will hold the basic act unconstitutional and an early test is assured by a senate amendment permitting suits to recover processing taxes that have not been passed on to producers or consumers. One of the major purposes of the amendments was to close the courts, but the senate rejected this scheme by a vote of 41 to 23. As a result, the Hoosack Mills case, in which the Boston Circuit Courts of Appeals held the AAA unconstitutional, will not be thrown out and the highest tribunal will have a chance to pass upon it.

Amid so much adverse criticism, the action of the Midwest farm leaders gathered in Chicago must have been soothing to Mr. Wallace. Resolutions were passed praising the secretary and congressional leaders for their efforts in behalf of "agricultural equality."

The farm leaders urged senate approval for the commodity exchange bill, passed by the house, and asked re-establishment of the Pacific Northwest Wheat Export corporation under the AAA to prevent wheat surpluses in that area from competing with Midwest wheat and other grains.

The meeting voiced opposition to the plans for transportation co-ordination, suggesting farmers would profit more by competition among carriers.

PERMANENT federal control of the liquor business is provided for in a bill which was passed by the house and sent to the senate with prospects of early adoption by that body. The measure, which creates within the treasury a new agency to be known as the federal alcohol administration, was asked by the President to replace the FACA killed by the Supreme court's NRA decision. Mr. Roosevelt wanted the new agency to be an independent office, but the house decided otherwise.

IMMEDIATE convocation of the League of Nations council to deal with the Italo-Ethiopian question was demanded by Haile Selassie, emperor of Ethiopia. On his behalf the demand was telegraphed to the league secretariat at Geneva by Tacla Hawariat, Ethiopian minister to France and delegate to the league. He insisted that the council proceed to the examination of the situation under article XV of the league covenant, Ethiopia invoking this article because of the "threat to her independence from Italy."

Emperor Haile Selassie

British dispatches said Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and leading members of his cabinet were believed to favor full league action, if other nations agreed, as a last resort to avert the threatened conflict. Diplomatic quarters in London heard that the British government probably would alter its policy and permit the export of arms to Ethiopia. The emperor's new minister there, W. C. Martin, had a conference at the foreign office and came out smiling happily but saying nothing.

Previously Mr. Martin had admitted that Ethiopia was short not only of arms but also of money.

"At the moment we have very little money," he said. "I am doing all that is possible to raise loans in London, but thus far I have not met with a great measure of success."

PARTIAL investigation of the milk industry by the federal trade commission was said to have revealed deplorable conditions and the administration asked for $200,000 to continue the inquiry. The senate committee in considering the deficiency appropriation bill cut out that item altogether, but when the measure came before the senate Duffy of Wisconsin moved an amendment adding the sum asked. After a hot debate this was approved by a vote of 51 to 18 and the bill was then passed. The numerous senate amendments had added a total of more than $80,000,000 to the house measure, so the $306,000,000 bill was sent to conference.

FARMERS in the Middle West, ready to harvest their crops, found they couldn't get hands to do the work. The idle men ordinarily counted on for this were on the relief rolls and declined offers of farm labor for two reasons: The wages paid by the farmers were less than the sums received from the relief organization or for government works, and if the men once went off the dole they feared they would have trouble getting back there when the harvest was over. The situation was desperate and emergency relief commissions were urged to take action. This they did in the states affected and it was announced the "revolt" was under control.

The Illinois commission stopped all relief works in the rural areas until after harvest. In Kansas persons refusing any temporary employment were removed from the relief rolls. In Nebraska 26 counties were cut off from federal relief allotments and in 15 others the allotments were cut in half.

In nearly a score of Iowa counties officials denied relief and able-bodied men on relief rolls were admonished to accept employment in the harvest fields.

In North Dakota all but specialized projects were halted and the state administrator announced that as soon as the harvest was over the new works progress administration would take care of unemployables.

CHESTER C. DAVIS, AAA administrator, and his fellow officials were greviously shocked when they were shown this classified real estate advertisement in the Globe of Joplin, Mo.:

"Dandy way to make money: Buy this 13 acres for hog raising. Sign up with the government to not raise, say, 500 hogs. It will pay you $1,000. That will pay for the acres and have some left."

"It's preposterous!" exploded Mr. Davis. "It's at least preliminary to fraud. It's deliberate misrepresentation and not in any way possible. I shall begin an investigation at once."

DETERMINATION of the Nazis to put an end to "political Catholicism" in Germany and their consequent drive against Catholic youth organizations may bring on results more serious even than has the Nazi anti-semitism. General Goering, head of the secret police, gave out a warning to Catholic priests to be careful in their comments from the pulpit, and Franz Guertner, minister of justice, issued a decree threatening prosecution for any priest violating Goering's injunction. Throughout the country generally the Catholic clergy was cautious, but in Freiburg, Baden, where the Goering order had not been published before Sunday, the priests read in their pulpits a letter from the episcopate calling the Nazi action a violation of the concordat with the Vatican. To this charge the Nazis reply that the Catholics were the first to violate the concordat by making attacks on the Hitler youth movement in their parish papers.

Franz Guertner

This new "purge" by the Nazis includes a renewed crusade against the Jews and dissolution of the Steel Helmets, veterans' organization, in various provinces. The Jews are helpless and, if Julius Streicher has his way, will be all driven out of Berlin or segregated in ghettos. But the Steel Helmets, whose chief is Minister of Labor Franz Seldte, are likely to cause the Hitler government a lot of trouble. The organization's weekly paper is using language that is not often heard in Germany these days, and Seldte is demanding the reason for suppression of the local divisions.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA of New York has created an international incident all by himself. He backed up License Commissioner Paul Moss in his refusal to license one "Mr. K" to work in the metropolis as a massage operator because he is a German. The German diplomatic officials were preparing to complain to the State department that the city was violating the German-American commercial treaty of 1925. But Mr. La Guardia declared the treaty is null and void "because Germany has discriminated against American citizens of Jewish origin."

He indicated that not even the State department can force him to back down.

"This order shall be carried out until such time as we are directed to do otherwise by the courts," he said.

The German question also threatened to come up in the senate, for Senator King of Utah said he would ask an investigation to determine whether the United States would be warranted in "severing diplomatic relations" with Germany.

THAT wholly un-American procedure, the general strike, was tried out by organized labor in Indiana and the 67,000 inhabitants of Terre Haute were deprived of all food supplies. The local authorities of Vigo county called on the governor for help and Mr. McNutt promptly ordered 14 companies of the National Guard to the scene. Brig. Gen. Wray De Prez, in command, promised the merchants who had been bullied into shutting their shops would be given protection, and said his first endeavor would be to restore the milk and ice service. This had been cut off even from hospitals.

The general strike was called by 48 unions without warning, because labor leaders had been unable to reach an agreement with the Columbian Enameling and Stamping company. Some 600 of that concern's employees went on strike in March and the plant was closed down, but the union leaders thought it was about to be reopened by strikebreakers.

Conciliators from the Department of Labor arrived and within 48 hours the general strike collapsed and was called off by the union officials in charge. The strike at the stamping company, however, continued in effect and several times the troops were forced to use tear gas bombs to disperse riotous mobs.

Terre Haute merchants estimated that the two days' strike cost them at least half a million dollars. The state spent probably $50,000 in maintaining order by use of the troops. The state federation of labor asserted the sympathy walkout was unauthorized.

DROPPING all their rebellious indignation, the Democrats of the house did everything the administration wished in considering the social security bill as altered by the senate. The conferees had settled all differences after two weeks of hard work, but one of the amendments they accepted was that permitting private pension systems to function under the measure. The majority members of the house were informed that President Roosevelt was opposed to this, so they refused to accept it. The senate would not permit the elimination of the amendment, so back to conference went the bill.

Carpenter's Scale Is To Be 75 Cents Per Hour

According to information given out by officials of Montevallo Local No. 1239, of the Carpenters Union, the hour scale for union carpenters in this vicinity will be raised to 75 cents on August the first.

Official sanction has been given the local to put this increase in effect, raising the hour scale from 60 cents as at present to 75 cents.

Let your correspondent report all activities engaged in by the citizens of your town. Your cooperation will be greatly appreciated. Leave your contributions at the postoffice, please, where they will be mailed to the reporter of your community affairs. Any item in the business religious, social and civic realm is of utmost importance to us. Now let's see how some of our citizens have employed their time in the last few days.

Record crowds have attended the Baptist revival in progress this week. Rev. J. O. Colley, superintendent of the Baptist Orphanage at Troy, has earnestly striven to conduct us to a higher and nobler plane of living by his inspiring messages. The listeners, with rapt attention, have attested that his pleas have not fallen on unwilling ears. Several have united with the church during these services and the Christians are continuing to pray—that meaning more will seek the abundant life.

Several of our good citizens spent Sunday in Atlanta. Mr. and Mrs. John Lacey and children and Mrs. E. S. Ambrost are included in the number.

Mr. Louie Smitherman and children of Randolph have been entertained in the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Gay and Mr. and Mrs. Millard Smitherman for several days.

Mrs. V. L. Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Lance Hubbard and Leslie Hubbard were Friday evening visitors in Maylene at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lacey.

The Baptist W. M. S. met with Mrs. A. B. Canant Monday afternoon. The special speaker for the afternoon was Dr. Colley. He told us many interesting things about the orphanage at Troy. One in which we were intensively interested was the Octagon Soap Coupon campaign because of our active participation in the same. In the last four years, seventeen thousand dollars in cash has been raised for the orphanage through this source, and five electric refrigerators as special gifts. Surely it behooves us as Christians to use the Octagon products and save the coupons for this project engaged in by the Baptists of Alabama to help the motherless children of our state.

Miss Victoria Nolen and J. H. Lee motored to Columbiana on Monday morning.

Rev. J. O. Colley excused himself from the Tuesday evening service to conduct the marriage ceremony of some members of his church at Troy.

Who is happier than a young bride as she begins her life with the companion of her choice? And what will add to this happiness more than the thoughtfulness of friends in the presentation of gifts in a surprise miscellaneous shower? Mrs. Hoye Splawn, a young matron of the above classification, was the happy participant in one of these showers recently at the home of Miss Lanada Ambrose, assisted by the Y. W. A. girls.

Mr. J. S. Ward, one of our efficient barbers, Mrs. Ward and Curry Rhodes Ward spent last Thursday afternoon in Birmingham.

Mrs. Harry Brunson of Montgomery, attractive neice of Mrs. B. B. Curry, and little son, Jimmy Brunson, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Curry and Mrs. R. L. Campbell this week.

Miss Margaret Battle of Six Mile visited Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tatum of Watt's Place on the highway last week.

Miss Laura Killingsworth, nurse at Alabama College, and Aubrey Woolley spent Saturday in Union community in Bibb County.

Cecil Little and son, Carter, of Selma, spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Little, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Little.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Irvin and children of Selma spent several days with Mr. and Mrs. Mae Moreland and J. M. Comer last week.

Messrs. Ausley, Kenneth and Hubert Wells of Selma were guests of their cousins, Francis and Donald Wills last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hardman, who live in the attractive log bungalow, two miles south of Wilton, on the highway, have relatives from Florida as their house guests this week.

Mrs. A. P. O'Berry and O. P., Jr., of Birmingham, are visiting Mrs. Amos Lucas, her sister, who has been very ill, and Mr. Lucas.

The many friends of Mrs. J. P. Logan are delighted to see her at home again after a recent operation in the King Memorial Hospital in Selma. Mrs. Logan has served faithfully as principal of our school for several years. Her service is highly appreciated by our people.

Rev. Jimmie Jones, J. Hill and Geo. Hill of Arizona are visiting in the home of Rev. and Mrs. D. J. Berg.

Miss Carrie Mae Woolley is spending several days visiting friends and relatives in Birmingham.

Some of the "intimate" advertising in the magazines may be highly effective in selling what-have-you refined women but we doubt it.

Come On Montevallo Let's Go Places

As friends and citizens of this beautiful and cultured community let us pull together with the same purpose in mind as did our forefathers back in 1815 when Montevallo was first settled as Wilson Hill by that sturdy soldier and pioneer, Jesse Wilson, and was later joined in 1817 by Edmund King, James T. Walker, James Woodruff, Obediah Lovelady, Samuel Mardis and Daniel Watrous They came, they fought and they conquered against greater odds than are against us today. Their fight was for the things good uplifting and building permanently for the future. We have in Montevallo so many things to be proud of: Institutions of learning, business, coal mines, lime kilns, manufacturers and our splendid churches, womens and mens organizations. Our climate and our friendships as neighbors . Let us boost Montevallo, boost our friends; let's pull together, boost, boost and geep boosting.

Six of the cars which comprise part of the Shell company's special automotive fleet in which Shell Products are being tested under modern "stop-and-go" driving conditions.

Six special white test cars passed through Calera last Sunday morning in a 25,000 mile test run being conducted as a part of the continual testing program of the Shell Company. The fleet has been routed through every one of the 48 states.

Comprised of six new cars, two Fords, two Chevrolets, and two Plymouths, the fleet is engaged in making exhaustive tests of Shell products covering every conceivable driving condition encountered throughout the tour. Special attention, however, will be given their performance in everyday "stop-and-go" driving in rural as well as metropolitan centers.

Shell, through the cooperation of national traffic authorities, was first to give complete recognition to the fact that 80 per cent of the driving done by the average motorist is within 25 miles of his home. Present day driving conditions demand that motor fuels and lubricants must be made to stand up under the severe strain of "stop-and-go" driving, which involves constant starting and acceleration on short trips, as well as longer runs.

The test itself is under the supervision of Dr. C. W. Rippie, Shell Research Engineer. Each of the cars has been equipped with the most modern scientific equipment for measuring gasoline and lubricant performance in actual operation. Behind the scenes, extensive laboratory research is constantly being carried on by Shell to form a basis for comparative analysis of the results of the road tests.

Local Shell representatives, J. R. Wood, local agent, and W. J. Harrel, sales representative, acted as hosts to the personnel of the caravan during their short visit to Calera.

DISTRIBUTING WEALTH IS THE BIGGEST JOB OF HENRY FORD

Dearborn, Mich., July 11.—"My biggest job these days is in distributing wealth in a form that people can use it," Henry Ford said today, as he smiled broadly and handed newspapermen production figures for the first six months of the year.

Last November Ford announced that he would build "a million cars or better" in 1935. With the year but half gone the figures show that, up to June 30th, the Ford Motor Company had built 810,700 units in the United States and Canaada. Foreign manufacture for the six-months period was 37,804, bringing the total world production up to 848,504.

"When do you expect to pass the 1,000,000 mark?" Mr. Ford was asked.

The motor-maker, wearing a fine coat of tan and appearing to be in the best of spirits, again smiled as he said:

"Now, now—that's something else again. I'm just a manfacturer, not a prophet. Our men have had work for which our whole organization is thankful. There are many things that lead us to be hopeful for the next six months. But we're not dead certain. We are just doing the best we can."

Government Competition
DIFFERENT and UNFAIR

WHAT Alabama business would not object to unfair and unequal competition from the Government of the United States?

If you—the reader of this advertisement—are in the retail clothing business, you could not object if some store, financed by private capital, were opened opposite to yours. You could and would meet that competition.

But if that other store were financed by your Government, that would be different.

Different because the Government operated store had unlimited funds with which to buy its stock below the price which you would have to pay.

Different because that Government store could send its advertising matter through the mails free of cost.

Different because that store could obtain freight rate reductions on its merchandise.

Different in a hundred other ways which place any Government operated enterprise on an entirely different footing with any private business.

If you were in the retail clothing business and were faced with that competition, you would think it unfair.

The same reasoning applies to the power business just as much as any other business, in fact more so, because the power business is subject to strict State regulations as to rates and operation while the Government power business (TVA) has a free hand.

It is but a short step from Government competition with the power business in Alabama to Government competition with the Alabama milk business, retail clothing business, retail lumber business, retail hardware business, retail drug business or the farming business.

Recognizing the unfairness of Government competition with its own citizens, our Constitution gave to our Government only certain enumerated powers. These powers do not include the right to engage in any private business unrelated to the performance of a public function, whether that business is the sale of electricity, electric refrigerators, shoes, hats, lumber, groceries or farm products.

ANSWER THIS QUESTION FAIRLY:
What would be your attitude if your own business was confronted by the same unfair, and below cost competition of the Government of the United States?

EXPAND RURAL ELECTRIC SERVICE

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY PLANS WIDER USE OF ELECTRICITY

Birmingham, Ala.—By taking advantage of new construction standards which have been perfected for single phase (2-wire) lines the Alabama Power Company announces that it now believes it possible to expand the extension of electric service to rural customers. While the company has for eleven years been active in the extension of rural service and now operates 2,159 miles of rural line, 40 of which were built this year, and serves 28,000 rural customers at city rates and only 8,700 at rural rates, it recently petitioned the Alabama Public Service Commission to liberalize the rural rates and rural line contract requirements so as to make possible a wider use of electric service among existing rural customers and to enable it to consider the construction of additional rural lines.

The commission acted favorably on petition August 1. Under the adjusted rate schedule, 5,500 or about 60 per cent of the rural customers being served at rural rates will enjoy immediate reductions amounting to $28,500 annually. Customers in Group B of the old classification E-1 have had their minimum bills reduced from $2.00 to $1.25. Customers served under the E-4 classification may now use 15 kilowatt hours for the minimum bill. The rate adjustment results in either a reduction of more electricity for less money for all customers served at rural rates.

A 25 per cent reduction in the capacity required to be contracted for per mile of line is also included in the revision. Alabama Power Company officials state that all requests for extension of rural service are considered in as liberal a light as possible, but that each case must, of course, be determined on its individual merits.

Chevrolet Begins New Series of Advertising

The publisher of The Montevallo Times this week welcomes Chevrolet Motor Company into our advertising columns, as they begin a very distinctive campaign that will keep the appealing qualities of this popular automobile constantly before the public in Montevallo and Shelby County.

The Hayes Chevrolet Company, local dealers in Chevrolet in this territory, have made commendable progress since they began business here. They have put Chevrolet on the map as never before.

We commend to the readers of The Times a careful consideration of the weekly Chevrolet message you will find in our columns. On behalf of Hayes Chevrolet Company, we extend you an invitation to visit their show rooms and see for yourself a demonstration of the wonderful features you read in the advertisements.

BLACK WIDOW SPIDER FOUND

Mr. R. C. Tucker found a black widow spider at his home in Montevallo Thursday morning. He promptly put her in a glass jar for safe inpection of his friends who are interested in keeping away from this somewhat dangerous specimen of the bug kingdom.

Repairing Bridge Near Montevallo Ice Plant

Traffic was blocked on the road out of Montevallo over the old Shoal Creek Bridge near the ice plant on Thursday morning for repairs to the floor.

No statement was available as to how long the work will be under way. This project will not be a hindrance to the public as traffic can be maintained in and out of the city over the new bridge on Main Street.

PROF. H. G. DOWLING ON THE PROGRAM, METHODIST CHURCH

At Montevallo Methodist Church next Sunday the subject of the pastor, Rev. I. T. Carleton, for the morning worship hour will be "Does Jesus Ever Give the Sinner Up?"

For the evening hour a special feature of great interest will be the appearance of Prof. H. G. Dowling as speaker. Professor Dowling is Superintendent of Education of Tuscaloosa County. He is widely known as one of Alabama's outstanding educators and is recognized as a faithful and devoted churchman.

SPEED COPS ON PAVED HIGHWAY

ARE HOLDING SPEEDERS DOWN AND CHECKING HEAVILY LOADED TRUCKS

If you have had occasion to travel on the Birmingham-Montgomery paved highway recently, you perhaps have noticed a difference in the behavior of motorists along the road.

The explanation for this difference lies in the fact that a detachment of State traffic officers have been patroling the highway for several weeks, and have been picking up a great many of the drivers who violate the laws of speed.

The officers have been checking very closely on large trucks to see that they keep within the law as to weight of loads they haul.

The State of Alabama is doing a good service for the safety of the public to see that proper traffic regulations are maintained on this much-used public highway.

Termites Destructive To Many Buildings

Termites (white or flying ants) are to be found in nearly all buildings having wooden understructures. If allowed to work unmolested, they will in a surprisingly short time, completely destroy the foundations of buildings.

The Alabama Termite Exterminators, Inc., are now engaged in treating homes of some of the prominent citizens of this community. They offer convenient terms, and guarantee eradication for a period of five years.

The business address of this concern is Alabama Termite Exterminators, Inc., 1704 Fourth Avenue South, in Birmingham. They will be glad to furnish references to anyone interested in this matter, giving names of local people whom they have served. If you are interested, write them a letter. It might save you many dollars. An inspection of your buildings will not cost you a penny.

Rural Teachers Insist On Rising Early Habit

Waking up students in these classic halls at 4 a.m., is a new deal in education here that's been brought about by scores of teachers from the rural communities attending the special training courses being given teachers of Alabama engaged in the U. S. Adult Education program.

Teachers from the rural schools, accustomed to arise at dawn, do so here as they are wont to back in the country, wash, iron and converse and chatter right merrily to the discomfiture of the regular students, who in contrast, are always to be seen up and frisking about till 11 or midnight then sleep till 7 or 7:30 the next morning.

The rural teachers, many of whom are in the habit of doing their own thinking, discomfort their college teachers by rising up out of their seats in class, shaking a finger at their professors and saying. "That's not so," when the instructors make statements wtih which they disagree. Montevallo professors, whose students usually do not "talk back" haven't experinced anything of this sort before.

Furthermore the rural teachers engaged in this adult training scheme are hard to keep in classes. If a class in which they find themselves proves boresome, many of these rural teachers get up and wander into another class hunting something more interesting. This also is unorthodox, according to previous records set here.

EXTENSIVE ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN IS STARTED IN THE MONTEVALLO TIMES

Chesterfield, America's largest selling cigarette, is going after a still bigger share of Shelby County business, with a new and extensive advertising campaign which begins this week in The Montevallo Times.

Having gained leadership of the entire cigarette industry in 1934, Liggett & Myers have proven their expert ability in knowledge of advertising and selection of advertising mediums.

The Times welcomes the makers of Chesterfield into its advertising columns, and congratulates them upon their decision to go after a greater patronage and good will among the smokers of Montevallo and Shelby County.

The message of Chesterfield will go into a thousand homes in Shelby County every week through the medium of The Montevallo Times, and no doubt will result in winning many new friends for this popular cigarette.

Even admirers of modern art gasped in London recently when a French painter asked $5,000 for a canvas of dots and dashes supposed to portray a single candlestick.

ADVERTISING FOR BIDS ON NEW MONTEVALLO VIADUCT

The Times this week carries the advertisement of the State Highway Department, asking for bids of contractors for construction of the bridge and viaduct on the extension of Middle Street across Shoals Creek and the Southern Railway. The notice says bids will be received on August 14th. Full details of the project are set out in the advertisement. It will be interesting to the public to read the full specifications as provided in this important public improvement.

Funds have been programmed for the construction of this project in the amount of $87,000.

9:45 a.m.—Sunday school.
11:00 a.m.—Morning worship, "The Just Shall Live by Faith."
7:00 p.m.—Baptist Training Unions.
7:45 p.m.—Evening worship, sermon by Rev. A. G. Spinks.

The pastor will speak Sunday morning on "The Just Shall Live By Faith." a text that was first spoken by the prophet Habakkuk, then was used by Paul, and later was the key note of the reformation under Martin Luther and others. It is a text that needs emphasis today.

The pastor will leave Sunday afternoon for a meeting at Mosteller in the eastern end of the county. In his absence the pulpit will be filled Sunday evening by the Rev. A. G. Spinks, of Midland City, Alabama. Brother Spinks was former pastor at Wilton and we came to know and appreciate him and Mrs. Spinks. We are happy to have them in our community for a brief time and to have the opportunity of hearing him at the Sunday evening hour.

GENERAL TONE OF BUSINESS BETTER

An almost universally optimistic tone pervaded American business last week with current indications of the upswing anchored on a firm foundation.

Retail trade, in the aggregate, moved swiftly forward. Merchants noted a good response from consumers to special sales of summer supplies, and into the larger wholesale markets came signs of a lively interest in fall lines.

Private reports show the retail volume has reflected back to the wholesalers who in turn have extended their demands for merchandise to the manufacturers of consumers' goods.

The Department of Commerce in its survey covering 33 cities for the week ended Wednesday declared: "Steadily increased buying also was manifest in building materials, furniture, household equipment and electrical supplies as a corollary of the consistent gains in construction."

Bank clearings for that period were up 5.9 per cent over the same week of 1934, but the previous week gained 24.2 per cent over the like week of last year. Automobile production, due to the shut-down of the Ford plant, dropped abruptly to 69,415 units, as estimated by Cram's, compared with an output of 82,894 in the previous week.

Ford's curtailment, anticipated for several weeks, accounted for 9,500 units of the 13,479 unit loss.

Such restrictions had no effect on the production of steel since the rate of operations were extended to 44 per cent of capacity from 42.2 per cent the previous week.

Steel's upturn from the low point of the year during the first week of July was one of the outstanding developments of the week in industry, and trade authorities were particularly pleased because of the broadening of demand and the mounting evidence that there may be no let-down during August.

Electric power production again set a new high mark for the year for the week ended July 27, but freight car loadings for the same period increased over the prvious week to a point slightly less than expected for this time of year.

Several other lines allied to the construction industry likewise moved higher last week with the upward trend of past weeks becoming more evident with the verification of previous reports.

Surveys of the heavy or durable goods industries, those not producing for direct consumer use, cite definite signs of the beginning of a revival.

Economists have long pointed out that the bulk of employment is in that segment of the nation's workers, and that they foresee an attack on the persistently high total of those out of work should these heavy industries regain their feet.

Earnings reports now being published for the first six months of this year, show general gains, although higher net profits do not apply to all organizations alike.

One private compilation of earnings by 14 oil companies credits them with the highest first half profits snce 1930, but on the other side of the picture stand the railroads which are still bogged down in red ink.

A midseason check-up on Yankee pitching revealed that not one of the hurlers had won 10 games, but on the other hand there wasn't a man on the staff who had lost more than he had won.

The publisher of The Montevallo Times takes pleasure in announcing the installation of new and modern printing equipment which makes our plant capable of doing the finest quality of work.

We are now able to give prompt service to our customers on any order of printing that may be entrusted to us.

The addition of this new equipment will result in our ability to make The Montevallo Times one of the best small town newspapers in Alabama.

We invite the people of Montevallo and surrounding communities to visit our plant and see what we have here to serve you. When you need printing we hope you will give us an opportunity to do your work.

Especially do we urge that you help us make The Times the very best newspaper possible. If you know an item of news value, tell us about it.

If you live in a rural community, send us the news of your locality. Every community should be represented in the news columns every week.

Remember, we are here to make a good newspaper for you and for Montevallo. A good community newspaper can be of service to every citizen in some way at some time. Tell us what we may do for you, and we will do it with pleasure.

THE MONTEVALLO-CALERA HIGHWAY

The editor of The Times chanced to run across a bit of encouraging "dope" this week on the subject of paving on the highway from Montevallo to Calera.

Representative Charley Cox, of Chilton County, is prominently connected with the insides of Alabama's highway development program.

He says the Montevallo-Calera road has been placed by the highway department as one of the projects to get a hard surface in the present program.

Mr. Cox declares his personal interest in this road, and says he will work for it at every opportunity. Knowing of the influence that Mr. Cox has with highway officials and of his good judgment and experience in road matters, it makes us feel good to have him express such interest in this road.

With the bridge and viaduct leading out of Middle Street to connect with this road assured, we feel that it is entirely right and proper to urge the Highway Department to give us paving connection with the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway at Calera.

There is not a piece of road in Alabama more important than this short link. Montevallo has interests touching every section of the state. In most instances those so interested can travel in comfort by auto to Calera, from where they must have their very daylights shaken out to get over the bumps into Montevallo.

We would suggest that officials and citizens of Montevallo write to Mr. Cox at Montgomery and let him know we appreciate his interest in this important road.

STREET IMPROVEMENTS IN MONTEVALLO

Present possibilities of street improvements in Montevallo under the aid that is offered property owners through the Works Progress Administration presents an opportunity that should be most carefully and seriously considered by our citizens.

We should bring ourselves to see our city in its proper place of importance as one of Alabama's most interesting centers. Montevallo is important in the eyes of people from every section of the state. Alabama College brings us to the attention of hundreds of parents who, every year, seek out a suitable place to send their daughters to college. If and when the girls come here, Montevallo becomes the concern of those parents. When mother and father bring the daughter here they get some kind of impression about the surroundings presented by the evidences of progress, cleanliness, and public spirit of the citizenship.

There is now an unusual opportunity for people who own property here to make improvements that will mark Montevallo as a community of progressiveness, and designate our citizens as live and hustling residents. We have a chance to do this at a very small cost to the property owners.

It is commendable that our city officials realize the opportunity that is afforded, and are urging the property owners to avail themselves of the advantages while the opportunity is at hand. It is entirely correct to assume that every bit of improvement that is made in Montevallo will be reflected in added favor with hundreds of prominent people in all parts of Alabama. It will be reflected in an increase of property values.

Montevallo is a good community. It has made fine progress. It can make more and do better, if it will. Opportunity is knocking at our door. We should lift the latch and bid her come in.

Postmaster General Farley says the depression will be over by next summer. And immediately we'll have the presidential campaign.

MY FIRST AIRPLANE RIDE

Have you ever tried to figure out why people who fly in modern airplanes are so enthusiastic about the business, or, perhaps you might more properly say the pleasure?

Doubtless you have thought about or tried to figure it out. Certainly you have observed that every flier is a flying enthusiast.

If you would find the answer to the riddle, just take a ride in one of the things and you will understand.

I had my first trip in an airplane Monday afternoon. With my two boys in the forward pit of Dr. Gragg's Bird, we made the trip from Clanton to Montevallo and return, with pilot-instructor, J. W. Allen doing the steering.

We took off from the Clanton Airport about five o'clock, and in seventeen minutes we were on the ground at Montevallo Airport cool as a cucumber and talking with friends about the wonderful adventure.

Returning we came down over Wilton to the vicinity of Maplesville, and then across the beautiful country back to Clanton.

There is no use in trying to describe the experience. Everyone who has had that first experience in the air knows how helpless words are in attempting to describe the wonderful thrills and beauties that attend one on such a trip.

There were some surprises that should be recorded, I think. First, I was surprised that we did not seem to be going fast, although we were making about ninety. There was a noticeable absence of traffic dangers. Only one other plane was in sight. Leo Thompson was our escort, or body guard, or maybe just curious to observe how we took it. But his plane was miles away from us.

One can never know what a beautiful world we have until he looks at it from an airplane. The people who laid out our fields and towns, trimmed our forests, built our roads and highways, will never perceive what a perfectly beautiful landscape they have made until they go up high enough to see the picture as it really is.

The setting sun was behind us as we turned toward Clanton from Maplesville. The plane was headed directly into a rain cloud of small consequence. A perfect rainbow danced in front of us. Aviation, I thought, is just another of the efforts of man to reach the end of the rainbow.

We know the story of the rainbow's end is only a myth. Yet, men have ever sought to reach it, and will continue the effort. If it were not so, what a dull, lifeless and uninteresting world this would be.

Upon the field from which we started this trip, in that very soil was germinated all my youthful dreams and ambitions. As I chopped cotton in the springtime, toted watermelons from the patch in the summer, picked the fleecy staple in the fall, I gazed at the rainbow of promise.

I am glad I saw the rainbow Monday afternoon as we soared in the mist of the clouds. I am glad Pat and Jim saw it. After I am gone, they will, I hope, have many long years to seek the end of the rainbow.

I am satisfied they will make their conquest in an airplane, and I wish I might be permitted to be with them to enjoy the beauties, the thrills, the splendors of a world that will continue to grow more beautiful with every passing year.

BACKBONE OF TRANSPORTATION

In spite of all claims to the contrary, the railroads remain the backbone of the nation's transportation system.

Other carriers may supplement the rails and perform a valuable service. But it is a limited service.

Trucks can handle but a fraction of the nation's freight, and almost none of its heavy, transcontinental freight—wheat, machinery, etc.

Buses can provide inexpensive and excellent short-haul passenger service—but the vast bulk of travelers still go by rail when embarking on a lengthy journey.

There are definite limits to the airplane—its high cost, its relatively sparse coverage of the nation, its inability to handle freight.

The waterways are limited by geography and by seasons. In addition, they have proven to be constant money losers, and can only be kept in operation by vast governmental subsidies.

The railroads touch every portion of the country. They provide service to remote areas, tiny hamlets, little known farming and mining districts. They run on regular schedules. They provide maximum service at a minimum cost. The railroads did much to bring civilization to the wilderness in the beginning of this nation's expansion—they do much to keep civilized places from degenrating back to wilderness now.

In addition, the railroads are one of our greatest taxpayers, employers, purchasers of supplies. They offer a gigantic market in normal times for lumber, steel, copper, coal. They are a bulwark of all industry—and an essential public servant.

On the same day as the NRA decision, the Supreme Court handed down another opinion which, while not so well publicized, is of equal importance.

The Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium law provided that when a farmer was threatened with foreclosure he could apply to a Federal court for aid. The court was empowered to issue a stay against the foreclosure and have the property revalued by local appraisers. Thereafter, the law provided, the farmer could remain on the property for five years for a small annual rental. At any time during that period he could again regain title to the property by paying the appraised value—which, as the appraisal was made on the basis of depression values, was bound to be much less than the original mortgage.

The Supreme Court, in a unanimous decision read by famed liberal Justice Brandeis, declared this law unconstitutional, as it deprived a mortgage holder of property without just compensation as provided for in the Constitution.

Germany is telling us, in other words, "If anybody won't let us raise our flag, we'll raise the deuce."

Henry Ford insists he has just "spent" his 72nd birthday; he didn't observe it. When he gets old he'll take particular notice of it.

With indications at hand that the extension of Middle Street with the building of a bridge and viaduct across Shoals Creek and the railroad will be under construction in the near future, we are caused to wonder how far away is the building of a hard-surfaced road from Montevallo to Calera.

Statesmen in Geneva Struggle to Prevent Italo-Ethiopian War — Progress of the New Deal Measures in Congress.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

Anthony Eden

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, British minister for League of Nations affairs, was exceedingly busy in Geneva trying to find a way to avert the war between Italy and Ethiopia. He was aided and abetted by Premier Laval of France and together they evolved a plan for procedure by the league council which appeared promising, until it was communicated to Premier Mussolini. Then Baron Aloisi, Italian delegate, announced the Eden-Laval formula was "entirely unacceptable." However, hope was not abandoned for there was a chance that modifications could be made that would satisfy the demands of the Italians.

Unofficially, it was said the British-French formula dealt with these points:

1. Conciliation and arbitration is to continue.
2. Neither Italy nor Ethiopia is to resort to war measures in the meantime.
3. Appointment of a fifth arbitrator to the deadlocked Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission.
4. Signatories of the 1906 treaty—Great Britain, France, and Italy—will lend their good offices to obtain a general broad solution of the conflict.

Italy was expected to protest against time limits fixed in the draft of the projected peace formula.

One deadline was set for September 1, by which time the arbitrators on the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission, who would resume their work, would be required to report to the league council.

Another time limit was set for September 4, when the three powers and Ethiopia would be required to report their findings to the league council.

In any event the council would be scheduled to meet September 4.

One important concession was made to Italy in the formula. It was agreed that the ownership of Ualual, scene of the frontier conflict involved, should not be discussed. The Ethiopian contention has been that responsibility for the border clash could not be established without the ownership of the locality being first determined.

Emperor Haile Selassie met his chieftains in council at Addis Ababa and they told him it might be now too late to prevent war for their tens of thousands of fighters were eager for hostilities to begin and could hardly be restrained. The emperor, however, sought to hold the chiefs back. At the same time he issued another defiant note informing the world that Ethiopia never would accept an Italian or other mandate, adding: "No amount of prosperity under foreign domination would compensate for the loss of independence."

Mussolini seized control of Italy's metal and fuel imports for use in the expected war, and several thousand more soldiers and workmen sailed for Africa.

LED by George Huddleston of Alabama, the members of the house who opposed the "death sentence" in the utilities bill scored another victory over the supporters of that plan of the New Dealers. Sam Rayburn's motion that the house agree to the senate action on the bill was defeated, 210 to 155. Rayburn argued, pleaded and threatened, but to no avail. He warned the representatives that those who voted against his motion would be incurring the wrath of the administration, and at the last moment had read testimony before the senate lobbying committee to the effect that a New Jersey man had suggested the utilities companies start a whispering campaign regarding the sanity of the New Deal leaders. Still the big majority in the house insisted on rejecting the Rayburn motion.

Then the house, by a vote of 183 to 172, adopted a resolution which virtually called for the exclusion of Ben Cohen, administration lobbyist, from future conferences on the bill.

Senator Vandenberg

DEMOCRATIC congressmen started the week briskly determined to push through the President's "soak the rich" tax bill at this session. Opposing them with equal determination were a number of the hardest fighting Republicans who insist that consideration of taxation be postponed until next winter and that meantime the question be studied carefully in connection with the budget for the next fiscal year. These Republicans are urgently calling for an early adjournment of congress. Senator Hastings of Delaware has introduced a resolution setting August 10 as the day for quitting and was trying to have it brought up for consideration before passage of the tax measure. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, often mentioned as a Presidential possibility, also demanded postponement of the tax legislation until January, and he gave out a statement denouncing the administration's plan as a "sterile political gesture" which would raise "only a little extra pocket change" and declared that "we chatter of taxes in millions to offset known deficits in billions."

"The pending tax bill, as it is being developed," said Senator Vandenberg, "will not produce appreciable revenue for Uncle Sam. It will not pay the President's deficit even for the period while the bill is under consideration. As a contribution to the public credit, it is as grim a hoax as was ever perpetrated on the country. As a 'distributor of wealth' it is a mere vagrant flirtation with this left wing idea."

Nevertheless, it appeared probable that the tax measure would be enacted before adjournment, for the administration leaders had promised this to Senator La Follette and other "liberals," and besides that, they have no desire to pass a taxation bill in a Presidential election year. As produced by the house ways and means committee after great travail the measure embodies an 87 per cent confiscation of large fortunes and increased levies on the rich which would produce perhaps $250,000,000 of additional annual revenue.

CONGRESS has passed and the President has signed a bill which assures promotion in the near future for about 5,000 army officers. It accelerates the advancement of commissioned officers below the grade of colonel and takes effect September 1.

The act increases the number of colonels by 158, the number of lieutenant colonels by 364, and the number of majors by 890. More than 1,000 second lieutenants will be advanced immediately to the rank of first lieutenant and 1,769 first lieutenants will become captains. In all, 4,918 officers will receive immediate promotion.

SENATE and house committees investigating the activities of lobbyists went their separate ways, neither thinking very well of what the other was doing. Senator Black's quiz occupied itself much with the doing of representatives of the Associated Gas and Electric corporation. An executive order from the White House directed the secretary of the treasury to make available to the senate committee all incomes, excess profit, and capital stock tax returns to the extent necessary in the investigation with the so-called "holding company bill or any other matter or proposal affecting legislation." Simultaneously President Roosevelt approved a new treasury regulation authorizing the release of this information to the committee.

Representative Patton of Texas went before the house committee again and satisfactorily explained how he had been able to buy $3,000 worth of bonds out of his savings. As to the cigar box he carried away from the hotel room of John W. Carpenter, president of the Texas Power and Light corporation, it contained nothing but cigars, Patton said

Senator Glass

SENATOR GLASS scored perhaps the greatest victory in his long public career when the senate, without a record vote, passed his draft of the 1935 banking act, rejecting the central bank features urged by Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board and favored by the administration. The doughty Virginian, who was once secretary of the treasury, had fought desperately against the Eccles scheme and his triumph was decisive. There was no demand for a roll call on the final vote, for the fate met by the proposers of various amendments showed this procedure would be futile. Senator La Follette sought to strike out a provision permitting commercial banks to underwrite securities and his proposal was beaten, 39 to 22. Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota, another radical Republican, offered the central bank plan of Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, which would set up a government owned and wholly dominated system. It was voted down, 59 to 10.

FROM the Communist Internationale in Moscow comes the word that the reds are planning a strike "of unprecedented scope" by seamen and dock workers on the Pacific coast of the United States, beginning in September. Sam Darcy of San Francisco, an American delegate told about it. He repeated what had already been said by Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist party in the United States, that Communists were responsible for the seamen's and dock workers' strikes last year.

PASSAGE of the bill to restore $46,000,000 of Spanish war veterans' pensions was completed when the senate accepted the house measure, the only opposing vote being cast by Senator Hastings of Delaware. This nullifies the various adjustments made by the President for the purpose of economy to carry out the party pledge of a reduction of at least 25 per cent in the cost of administration of the federal government.

FREDERICK H. GILLETT, who represented Massachusetts in the house for many years, for six years was speaker, and thereafter served as United States senator, died in Springfield, Mass., at the age of eighty-three. Able, dignified and unfailingly courteous, Mr. Gillett was highly esteemed by his fellow congressmen, whatever their party affiliation. In his home town he was known as a politician who said little and did much.

Sec'y Swanson

JAPAN will probably have another cause for complaint against the United States. Secretary of the Navy Swanson has announced that strongly fortified naval bases will be established in the Pacific ocean upon the expiration of the naval limitation treaties on January 1, 1937. He said he considered the creation of naval stepping stones in the Pacific an inevitable result of the treaties' expiration. He revealed that the navy long has given consideration to Pacific fortification problems and that impetus had been given to the study since Japan's abrogation of the naval treaties.

The necessity for adequate bases in the Pacific was demonstrated forcibly last May during the annual fleet maneuvers off Hawaii and the Aleutian islands. According to reports, the navy high command in a report of the lessons learned in the exercises strongly recommended an Aleutian islands base.

The United States naval bases are few and far between as against those of Japan and Great Britain, which lie along the principal courses of English and Japanese traffic lines. The American bases are relatively obsolete.

GERMANY'S diplomatic note concerning the Communist attack on the liner Bremen in the port of New York took the form of a request that the offenders be punished but asked for no apology. Acting Secretary of State William Phillips, in his reply handed to the German charge d'Affaires, Dr. Rudolf Leitner, told briefly the efforts of the New York police to guard the vessel and to subdue the mob, and pointed out that some of those who took part in the attack were arrested. The German note said the incident constituted an insult to Germany.

In his press conference President Roosevelt declined to comment on the affair. Asked about the protest of Jewish organizations against the German government's religious attitude, the President intimated that the administration's view was fully expressed by Mr. Phillips' reply in which he expressed sympathy for anyone who was denied religious liberty.

Representative Dickstein of New York told the house that no apology was due to Germany for the Bremen incident and that neither the federal nor the local authorities were to blame for it. He asserted the attack was made possible by "a selfish desire on the part of the skipper of the Bremen, who would not take police advice to halt visiting to the ship and lose the revenue of visitors."

Over in Germany the saner men in authority recognized that the Nazis were going too far and were probably headed for a fall if not restrained. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank and economic dictator of the reich, uttered a solemn warning to the anti-Jewish and anti-Catholic forces, declaring that the great task which the German people must fulfill to comply with the wishes of Hitler cannot be fulfilled unless "all disturbances are ended, be they in the intellectual or economic field."

Among developments in the current campaign against the Steel Helmets, the World War Veterans' organization, the Schutzstaffel or "black corps" formed to protect the person of Hitler, gave out a warning that it must be reckoned with in the event of a showdown against "state enemies," and asserting its complete loyalty to der fuehrer. The proclamation closed with these ominous words:

"For many reasons it would be deeply regretted if the Steel Helmets, by their own fault, should come to a dishonorable end."

MORE disasters in the Far East. Antung, an important city in Manchukuo, was engulfed by a terrific flood; a thousand persons were drowned and practically the entire population of 110,000 was rendered homeless. Formosa was ravaged by another typhoon which took many lives and did vast damage. Along the Han and Yangtse rivers the surviving Chinese were striving to keep alive and at the same time to bury the tens of thousands who died in the floods there.

ALONG the line of providing help for white collar workers, Harry L. Hopkins appointed four technical assistants to direct the employment of painters, musicians, writers and actors. They are: Nikolai Sokoloff for music, Hallie Flanagan for the theater, Holger Cahill for painters and sculptors, and Henry G. Alsberg for writers.

TELLS HOW BANKS AIDED PROGRESS

Economist Describes the Ways Banking Institutions Have Contributed to Development of United States

OMAHA, Nebr.—Privately owned banking, despite its faults, has served America well, William A. Irwin, Professor of Economics, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, declared in a recent address here on "Banking in a Changing World."

"Under the leadership of individuals banking has helped to bring this country to a foremost place in economic development among the nations of the world," he said. "The small community has been developed by the individual bank. The frontiers of America have been pushed forward by the help and counsel of the individual banker. The shocks of wars and depressions in a century and a half have been withstood with the assistance of the individual banker.

Change May Be Necessary

"It may be that we have reached a tide in the affairs of America when new methods are needed. It may be that we have come to a point where the individual should be submerged for 'the greatest good of the greatest number.

"It may even be that complete centralization of the banking system has become an economic necessity in our complicated social life. But the banker ought to be satisfied that these things are so before he should give up his fight for the system we have known. We came to greatness under that kind of banking; we should not give it up without unmistakable proof of the absolute necessity of such a change."

The American Pattern

Professor Irwin said that the proposal which has been advanced for coordinating banking operations in the national interest under "a 'Supreme Court' for banking is typically American and ought to have the most serious consideration of those elements which are clamoring for political control, which is typically un-American.' It is not wise, he said, to oppose changes as such, but that bankers should "see to it that change, if and when it does come, shall preserve all that is good in the past and stick as closely as possible to the American pattern of things."

Banking is properly a conservative profession, he pointed out, and should cling to practices and principles of banking that are, and always have been fundamentally sound.

"It is to its credit that so large a group of its members never faltered, even in boom times, in their allegiance to those sound principles," he declared. "We probably owe our salvation from chaos to that fact."

BANKS AND COLLEGE LAUNCH NEW SCHOOL

Aims to Offer Studies in Advanced Banking Subjects to Bank Executives—Public Duties of Banks Stressed

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — The Graduate School of Banking, an unprecedented educational project, operated under the joint auspices of the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University, with 220 enrolled students from 35 states and the District of Columbia, inaugurated here in June its first resident session.

The states represented and the number of registrants from each were as follows: Alabama, 2; Arkansas, 2; California, 2; Connecticut, 9; Delaware. 3; District of Columbia, 6; Florida, 2; Georgia, 3; Idaho, 1; Illinois, 8; Indiana, 2; Iowa 1; Kansas, 1; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 3; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 9; Michigan, 5; Minnesota, 1; Missouri, 5; Nebraska, 1; New Jersey, 31; New York, 50; North Carolina, 8; North Dakota, 1; Ohio, 7; Oklahoma, 1; Oregon, 2; Pennsylvania, 32; Rhode Island, 1; Texas, 5; Virginia, 6; Washington, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 4; Wyoming, 1.

The annual resident sessions of the graduate school will be supplemented between periods by continued extension work for the students at their homes. The purpose of the school is described as being to offer in a three year course a comprehensive approach to an advanced study of the various administrative problems in banking and trust institutions. The teaching procedure is a combination of the case system and the lecture discussion method.

The Curriculum

The curriculum embraces banking administrative problems and policies, bank investment problems, legal and managerial aspects of trust business, legal phases of bank administration and economic problems in the field of money and credit. The public relations and responsibilities of banks and methods for meeting these obligations are emphasized in the courses.

It is planned to set up similar schools in cooperation with other universities in various parts of the country. The school will add 200 registrants each year for two years until 600 are enrolled.

The trustees of the Educational Foundation of the American Bankers Association have set aside funds from the foundation to grant 100 loan scholarships of $150 each to qualified applicants for attendance at the school.

SEES INFLATION A SLOW PROCESS

A Real Danger for the Future, Col. Ayres Tells Banking Groups.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Present prospects do not indicate that inflation severe enough to cause further dollar devaluation will come soon in this country, but as an ultimate development it seems to be a very real danger, Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President Cleveland Trust Company, said here tonight in an address before the Graduate School of Banking. He believed this statement to be true "unless the government enters frankly upon a policy of issuing flat money with which to meet its expenses." At present that does not seem to be in sight, he said.

The Graduate School is operated jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University to offer advanced studies for bank officers.

"We have so enormously increased the capacity of our banking system for credit expansion that it is difficult to see how we could have a vigorous business revival without having it develop into a credit inflation," Colonel Ayres declared.

Inflation a Slow Process

If inflation does come it will be a slow process, he said, pointing out that in Germany, France, Belgium and Italy it took about five years to develop from the time when the governments entered upon policies of financing large peace-time deficits by bank credit up to the time when the public generally began to spend money rapidly because of fear that it would still further depreciate in purchasing power.

"If we are to go through such a period here it would seem likely that it might last rather longer than the corresponding periods did abroad," he said. "Its beginning would date from the spring of 1933 when we left the old gold basis for our money and entered upon the policy of financing large governmental deficits by the sale of Federal securities mainly to banks rather than to private investors.

"The method that we are following is the one that proved disastrous in Europe for in all those countries including Germany, the increasing issues of money that caused the inflations were not mere printing press issues of flat currency, but were secured by government bonds and notes discounted at the banks. Nevertheless, the process is inherently a slow one."

Among the clearest lessons taught by the European experience, Colonel Ayres asserted, is that there are "no good hedges against inflation." He added:

Did Not Lighten Debt Burdens

"One of the strange facts about these inflations is that while they destroyed the values of most existing debts, they did not succeed in lightening the debt burdens of either the people as a whole, or of the corporations.

"Inflation destroys the value of bonds and mortgages and so confiscates the property of these holders of obligations and hands it over to the shareholders and the equity owners. However, it introduces so many new economic difficulties that these share and equity holders are at once forced to incur new indebtedness so that when stabilization comes the problems of debt are about as troublesome as they were before, or even more so."

The five requisites of inflation were listed by Colonel Ayres as first, a period of sustained active business; second, a rising stock market; third, real credit expansion; fourth, greater outflow of gold "than we can tolerate which would force us to cut our currency entirely free from gold"; and fifth, continued large budget deficits in government operation.

A PROPHECY

Significant economic developments to be expected in the next decade are listed by a prominent business writer as follows: (1) Higher standard of living. (2) Continued advances in technical processes of production. (3) Factory built houses, better and cheaper than hand made houses. (4) Somewhat cheaper money. (5) Faster travel. (6) News printed by radio. (7) Mechanical cotton picker, revolutionizing the South. (8) Cheaper electric power. (9) Better distribution of goods; more chain stores. (10) Another depression five or six years hence, preceded by an inflationary boom.

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Why is it that one farmer raises 100 bushels of corn to the acre, and the other one, on the other side of the fence, raises 25 bushels to the acre? Why is it that one farmer produces 100 pounds of pork on five bushels of corn, and another uses 25 bushels? Not until power machinery, scientific principles of soil fertilization and restoration, rotation of crops, diversification of crops and economical feeding are applied to the farm, will the farmers' problem be solved, says a farm authority.

BANKING READY

NEW YORK. — There is abundant evidence that banks are in an unusually favorable position to finance a period of industrial growth, says the June issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

An official survey on June 10 indicated that the Government of the United States, through its loans, was the potential owner of more than half of the existing world stocks of American cotton.

A Question to the Taxpayers and School Patrons of
SHELBY COUNTY

Your county (including its municipalities) receives annually in taxes from electric utilities approximately $15,000*

Of which amount approximately

$9,000

Goes Directly to Public Schools

TVA pays no County taxes and no other taxes from which your County will receive any share.

If TVA takes over all electric operations in the State of Alabama, are you prepared, as tax-payers, to make up this huge loss? Are you prepared, as school patrons, to accept this reduction in school revenues?

OPEN HOUSE MONTH FOR ALABAMA POWER COMPANY
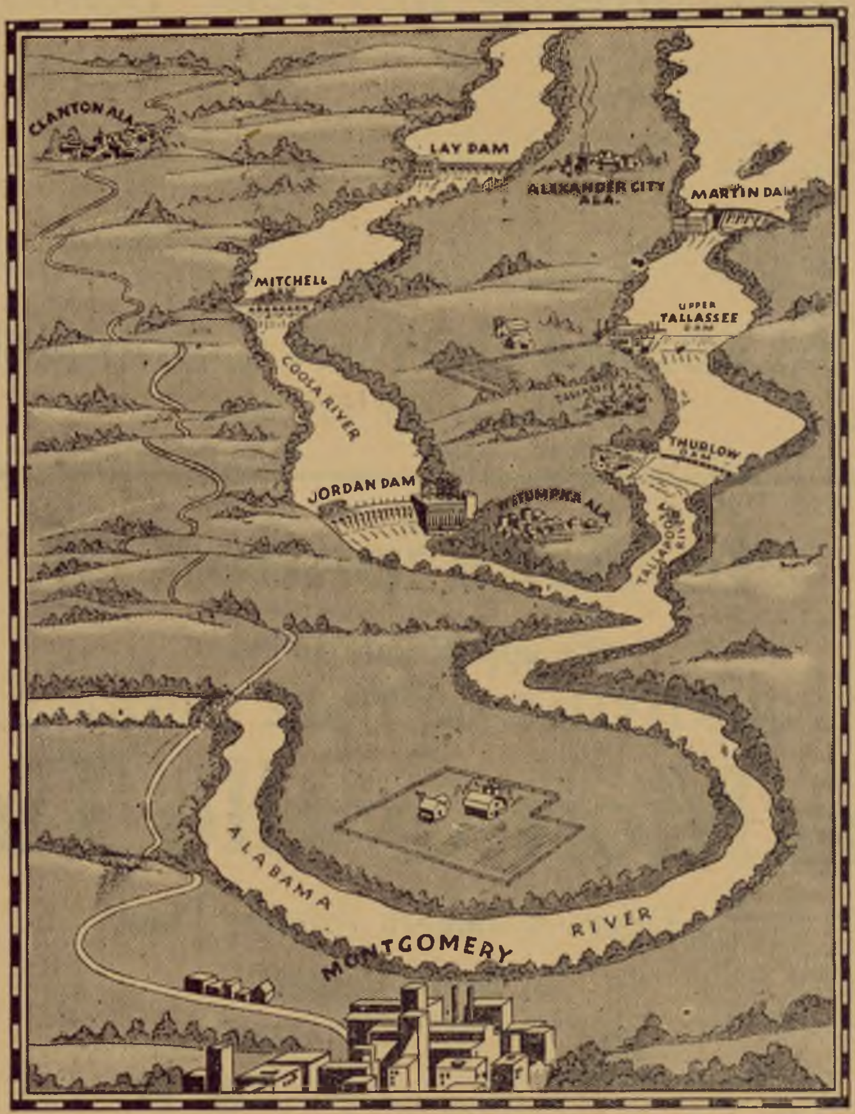
CUSTOMERS AND THEIR FAMILIES



Pack Up A Picnic Lunch, Bring the Family and Neighbors With You and Enjoy Yourself

ALTHOUGH visitors are welcome to our power plants at any time, we have set the month of August aside as "Open House Month", and especially invite you and your friends to spend an enjoyable day at one of our many electric power generating plants. Plenty of refreshing drinking water is available and the shade of many trees makes a pleasant place to eat a picnic lunch.

FOREMOST IN POWER DEVELOPMENT

The power plants of this Company are among the outstanding ones of the Country. Mitchell Dam near Verbena, Ala., is the only one of its kind in existence. Martin Dam at Cherokee Bluffs on the Tallapoosa River backs up one of the largest artificial bodies of water in the United States, making a lake with a shore line of approximately 700 miles. The Gorgas Steam Plant, in the heart of the Alabama coal fields, was built to augment the hydro plants in seasons of drought, so that electric service could always be dependable. Lay Dam is the original large power development in Alabama and one of the first in the South. Jordan Dam, Thurlow Dam and Upper Tallassee all have features of great interest.

VISIT ONE OR MORE OF THESE POWER PLANTS

Your visit will be not only instructive, but you will be impressed with the manner in which electricity is made and will have a better idea of the great part this Company has played in the development of the natural resources of Alabama and the care it takes to keep your electric service dependable.

Any of our stores will give you directions to help you find the dam sites easily. See one or all of them. You will receive a cordial welcome.

Other Points of Interest

Altho not as spectacular as the hydro-electric plants, but fully as interesting, are the substations from which electricity is "directed" to the various towns and communities over the State. On your way to or from the dams, you may want to stop at one of the following substations, to which any filling station in the towns where they are located can direct you.

PLANS FOR FORD PLANT FINISHED

WILL REPLACE OLD ONE LOCATED ON RIVER ROUGE, NORTHVILLE, MICH.

Ground is being broken by the Ford Motor Company at Northville, Mich., for a new plant to replace the present Ford factory in that city, in which all valves used in Ford cars and trucks are made.

The new factory, designed by Albert Kahn, Detroit architect, will be a one-story structure of steel and brick, 200 feet long by 100 feet wide, with a half-basement to house the power plant, set in landscaped grounds near the site of the present factory, which, on the completion of the new one, about the first of the year, will be dismantled and razed. Approximately 300 men will be employed, the number at present working at Northville.

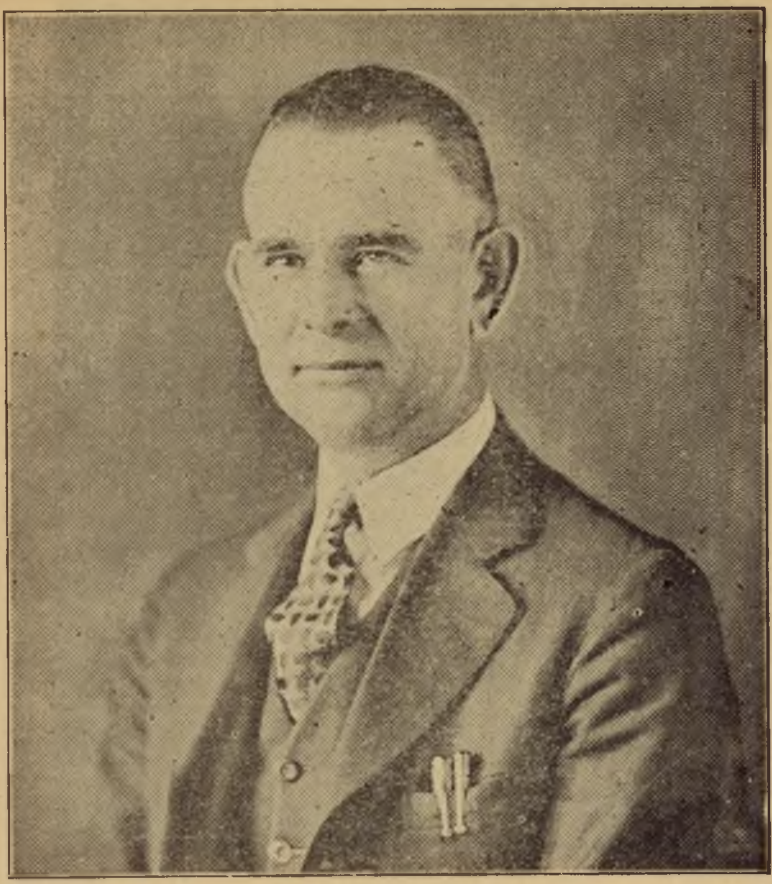
Decorative features of the new layout will be an artifical lake, formed by the damming of the River Rouge just above the seven mile road in Northville, and an overshot wheel, operated by water piped from the head of Yerke's Pond.

This waterwheel likewise will be a part of the power equipment of the plant, but only a minor part since the River Rouge at this point has insufficient power and the new valve factory will require from 1,200 to 1,500 kilowatts.

The present valve factory at Northville is the oldest of the so-called Ford "village industries." It began operations in 1920 and to date has produced more than 163,000,000 valves —50,000,000 for the V-8 type motors alone. The valves are of alloy, cast at the Rouge plant and finished at Northville.

With the completion of the new Northville valve plant, the number of Henry Ford's little industries along the River Rouge, all completely modern and all set in beautifully landscaped grounds, will be six. The others are at Plymouth (taps and dies), Waterford (gauges), Phoenix (generator cut-outs and switches), Nankin Mills (screw machine parts) and Newburg, where a new air-conditioned factory for the manufacture of drills is about to begin operations.

Other factories in the Ford "little industries" chain are on the Huron River, notably the generator and starter plant at Ypsilanti where a thousand men and women are employed, and the lamp factory at Flat Rock, in which approximately the same number of employes produce all headlamps, tail lights and domelights used in the Ford industry.



SAM R. POWERS

Mr. Powers is Superintendent of Lay Dam, the first hydro-electric plant built by Alabama Power Co. Lay Dam was the first step in making the dreams of Capt. W. P. Lay a reality. Sam Powers is really a part of Lay Dam. He has been connected with the plant since the days of its construction. He extends a cordial invitation to everybody to visit Lay Dam during August, "Open House Month." You should see all the Alabama Power Co. plants, but you should see Lay Dam first. It is near Clanton, and can be reached by good roads all the way.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Extracts of Letters from a Coleman Camper

Our unit is building an outdoor kitchen across the river. There are two patrols in merry men, and we are building stoves in pairs, one for each patrol. One patrol is cooking breakfast. This morning we cleaned away leaves and gathered rocks.

This kitchen is located within hearing distance of the swimming pool.

We have a new dock on the river. They have a Camp Coleman Scrapbook of last year's activities, which is very interesting. The Birmingham marines had a meeting here last night. We gave a tea Monday to show off our cabins. Orange punch and cookies were refreshments. That was also Mitzie's birthday and for supper we had peaches, a gift from Mitzi

Thursday, July 4th

I didn't have time to finish my letter yesterday. Last night we had a candy pull and newspaper party combined. In the newspaper party we chose partners and made costumes for each other. My partner and I won. She was Joan of Arc and I Queen Elizabeth.

At the candy pull we all got our hands covered in molasses candy. Before it was pulled enough we all ate it and went to our cabins, after taps.

The camp is going to have supper with the Adirondacks. They say it will be grand with lots of sky rockets to shoot, etc.

Monday

They auctioned off the lost and found today. Besides a penny fine you also had to sing, dance and recite a poem if you were guilty. I haven't lost a single thing.

The three in our cabin have planned a secret surprise for Wednesday night. It is a book costume party We are writing notes and hiding them. At the last we will send out invitations.

The Fourth of July supper was a success. The table was decorated in red, white and blue. We were served a bun full of hot dog and other delicacies, a tomato sandwich, potato salad, punch and watermelons.

Miss Phillipson, a national worker, came that day. She inspected our cabins.

Each unit gave a foreign program, that is, represented some foreign country. Merry men gave France; Peter Pans, Japan; but Adirondacks gave impersonations of the counselors. Last night Merry Men gave an outdoor supper. At Scout's Own we gave a play.

$20,000,000 Loan Application Is Filed

STATE OFFICE OF PWA RE CEIVES REQUEST TO FINANCE ALUMINUM PLANT

An application in behalf of the Alabama Industrial Authority for a loan of $20,000,000 to construct an aluminum plant at Decatur, has been filed by R. J. Gandy, Chicago promoter, with the Public Works Administration, H. S. Geismer, State PWA director said yesterday in announcing a list of recent applications.

Inquiry disclosed that the proposal was very much in the "nebulous" stage. It is proposed that the loan would be secured by revenue bonds based on possible profits of the proposed plant.

The proposal would also offer the Public Works Administration a mortgage on what is represented to be $10,000,000 worth of bauxite land in Arkansas. The bauxite would be transported from Arkansas to Decatur. Decatur was preferred for location of the plant, it was stated, because of the availability of cheap electricity through the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Among other applications received by the State PWA office were:

Gadsden sewer extension, $186,465; Gadsden street paving, $49,783; DeKalb County schools, grant only, $15,750; and total cost $35,000; Cleburne County schools $134,500; Fairfield schools, $105,000; Ragland Waterworks, $39,000; Andalusia schools, $62,023; Jacksonville sewers, $60,026; Ashville waterworks and sewers, $35,000; Town Creek waterworks and sewers, $34,000; Courtland waterworks $28,000; Albertville sewers, $52,000 and Alabama College, grant only, $24,300; and total cost $64,000.

Director Geismer announced that applications for loans and grants in the amount of $34,297,340, including the "nebulous" Alabama Industry Authority application, had been filed with the PWA State office. The amount is sought from 1935 funds for 60 construction projects.

Of the 60 projects proposed, he said, 13 have been passed upon by the State office and forwarded to Washington for final action.

Partial reports on all projects submitted through August 8 will be forwarded to Washington by August 15, he said, in compliance with a request from Secretary Ickes. The reports were requested that the Washington office may take inventory of applications in, it is said.

Efforts To Unite Methodist Bodies

OLD QUESTION WILL BE RENEWED AT THE COMING CONVENTION

Chicago, Aug. 10—Another move toward a permanent truce in a 100-year church war, started because a bishop's wife owned slaves, will be taken here next week by leaders of American Methodism.

A united Methodism, creating the largest Protestant body in America, is the goal of a conference of commission representing three Methodist factions which split when the nation was dividing for the war between the states.

Efforts to cement the rift between the three groups—the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church—have been carried on for almost two decades.

"A general spirit of optimism" that their task will soon be accomplished prevails among the conferences for the sessions, scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday at Northwestern University, Dean James A. James, one of the commissioners, said today.

Six bishops, three from the North and three from the South branch of the church, will take part in the discussions designed to repair the damage done by the negro servants of a Southern bishop's wife back in 1839.

Feeling was particularly strong Methodists on the slavery issue in those days, and the general conference of the church unfrocked the bishop whose spouse owned the slaves.

Southern Methodists sympathized, and formed a separate body at about the same time Presbyterian and Baptist churches were suffering similar rifts for the slave cause.

During this same period, Methodists in the border states, Kentucky, Maryland and Tennessee formed a third group in protest against government of the church by bishops. They called themselves Methodist Protestants, and chose "superintendents" rather than bishops to lead them.

This third group now includes only about 200,000 communicants, but with the North and South branches would form a denomination of 9,500,000 by far the largest Protestant unit in the country, Dean James said.

The latest series of conferences towards reunion began in Chicago last August, and continued in Louisville, Ky., in February, where plans for union were drafted.

The store management will serve cake, lemonade, and other refreshments absolutely free to thir guests. A special invitation is extended to every housewife to attend and see the demonstrations.

SPECIAL SESSION FOR SALES TAX

MESSAGE DELIVERED BY GOVERNOR GRAVES TO THE LEGISLATURE

Gov Graves appeared before the Legislature Tuesday and read a written message in which he announced his intention of calling a special session in January for the passage of a sales tax to underwrite homestead exemptions. He also commended to the favorable attention of the Legislature reapportionmnt, the federal child labor amendment, poll tax remission and certain other enactments contemplated in his campaign platform, but his expected pronouncement on prohibition was conspicuous by its absence.

The chief executive's address followed closely the predictions of informed observers in all particulars except its complete silence on modification of the prohibition law. Members of the modification caucus came away from the executve offices last week with the impression that the governor would make himself clear on this point and had expected to take their course from his remarks yesterday. His failure to speak on the matter left confusion in their ranks and it was considered by some as likely that a brace of beer bills would presently be introduced for a more or less questionable fate.

As to the sales tax, Gov. Graves recalled that while he had expressed his opposition to such a levy he had also pledged himself to give the state an efficient government. Indicating a belief that homestead exemption would be such a boon as to justify a sales tax, he advanced this plan to the Legislature:

First, submit a constitutional amendment at this session to permit homestead exemptions up to $2,000. Then return in January and pass a sales tax bill to become operative only in the event the people ratify the homestead amendment.

Another particular in which the governor's message departed from predictions was the omission of any reference to speeding up the present session. Some members had expected the governor would ask the lawmakers to meet three days a week. Though Gov. Graves had nothing to say on this head, the adjourning resolution adopted yesterday was for reconvening Thursday and this was taken to mean that three days and not two days a week would be the rule from now until sine die adjournment.

Wren Memorial Will Be Dedicated Aug. 25

Announcement is made of the dedication of the Edward R. Wren Memorial building in Talladega, on Sunday, August 25th. Invitation is extended to all ex-service men of Alabama to attend the exercises.

In a letter to Adjutant R. P. Holcombe, E. A. McBride, chairman of the dedication committee, says:

"Enclosed you will find an invitation to the dedication of Edward R. Wren Memorial on August 25th. We can not send an invitation to each ex-service man in the state, therefore we wish to extend this invitation to you and through you to each member of your post. The program is also open to the public. Will thank you to give it as much publicity as possible."

An interesting program is announced for the affair. Governor Bibb Graves will deliver an address at 11:30 a.m. General C. P. Summerall, of Charleston, S. C., will make the memorial address in the afternoon. The dedication of the memorial building will be made by Dr. Marion F. Inge of Mobile, Commander of the Alabama Department, American Legion.

GRAVES APPEALED TO IN LABOR ARGUMENT

Huntesville.—Governor Bibb Graves has been asked by the Madison County grand jury to name a committee to conciliate differences between operators and workers of two large textile plants here that have been shut down for several weeks as the result of labor trouble.

The grand jury failed to return any indictments from picketing, adding that it would only add to the many troubles already existing in the mill area.

New Regulations For Shooting Doves In Force

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 13.—The new regulations of the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey provide for the shooting of mourning doves in Alabama and other southern states from October 1 to January 15.

This provision, says the biological survey, eliminates September shooting in the south and thus prevents the killing of many immature birds.

Shooting has been restricted to the hours between 7 a.m. and 4 p.m., the daily bag limit has been placed at 20 and the posession limit made to conform to the daily bag limit.

The prohibition of baiting included in the new regulations provides that mourning doves "are not permitted to be taken with or by aid of corn, wheat, oats, or other grain or other products thereof, salt or any kind of feed whomsoever, or whatsoever purpose, placed, deposited, distributed, scattered, or otherwise put out in any environment whatsoever, whereby such doves are lured, attracted, or enticed to the hunter."

The three-shell limit placed on auto-loading and repeating shotguns last February will take effect for the first time this fall, the new regulation providing that hunters may use a shotgun only, not larger than No. 10 gauge.

This regulation states that the birds "shall not be taken or by means of any automatic-loading or hand operated repeating shotgun capable of holding more than three shells the magazine of which has been cut off, or plugged with a one-piece metal or wooden filler incapable of removal through the loading end thereof, so as to reduce the capacity of said gun to not more than three shells at one loading."

ITALY IN MARKET FOR UNITED STATES COTTON

New York, Aug. 7.—The Sun said today that Italy is negotiating with private bankers in New York for the purchase of between $15,000,000 and $30,000,000 of American cotton.

While leading bankers declined to comment on the reports, it was learned that such a deal was entirely possible, and there was a wide interest in the negotiations in the financial community.

It was pointed out that the purchase here of between 250,000 and 500,000 bales of cotton could be handled through private banks since Italy has expressed evidence of willingness to pledge or sell a portion of her Central Bank gold reserves to pay for foreign goods.

There was some question whether Italy would seek to purchase the cotton from private or government holders, but bankers added that regardless of the source of the sale the private banks could handle the financial end of the transaction.

CONTROL OF CREDIT A BASIC QUESTION

Economist Describes Conflict Between Opposing Social Viewpoints on Government Bank.

Agitation for government banking is a phase of the conflict between our present "personal competitive enterprise system" in America and the "compulsory state collective security system" of several European States, Virgil Jordan, President National Industrial Conference Board, says in an article in a recent issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

"They involve irreconcilable principles of human conduct and philosophy of life and the conflict between them is the key to the economic, social and political struggles of today," Mr. Jordan says.

The enterprise system of which "the development of the United States has been the unparalleled example, depends for its motive power of progress upon the inexhaustible reservoir of energy in individual desire for personal advancement in prosperity, but it guarantees nothing to the individual save freedom of opportunity," the article says in part.

The collectivist security system, he says, "places all emphasis upon the maintenance of a minimum standard of living for the mass without regard to the creative power of the individual. quite simply the security system involves the modern form of the philosophy of the slave society." He continues:

A Sign of the Times

"The many-sided movement toward governmental banking, deposit insurance and currency management is the most direct and decisive expression of the universal instinctive search for security which is the sign of the times. In America our so-called social security legislation is an important indication of the drift away from the enterprise system toward a collectivist security system with concentration of authority in a central Federal government.

"The nationalization of credit is crucial and indispensable for complete state control of the complex industrial and business structure of this country. The drive toward government banking and monetary control is most determined because the relation of the state to credit goes to the root of the enterprise system. A collective security system is inconceivable without nationalization of credit. An enterprise system is inconceivable with it."

Under a collective security system based on government banking the controls "lie solely in the hands of a few persons and depend upon their judgment, will or caprice," Mr. Jordan says, adding that it is they who must determine "upon the basis of some predetermined plan or upon pure political expediency of the moment, what lines of industry and even what individual enterprises shall have access to the credit reservoir." The state, he says, has the power of life and death over all enterprise that utilizes credit.

"Every government is an organ of party power and must respond to the will of the party that put it in power," the Jordan article says. "Under unchecked government operation it is an inescapable tendency of every currency to depreciate and for credit to expand. However much it may be in the interest of the nation, deflation is too dangerous politically for any government to undertake it deliberately.

"In the end government banking and currency management resolve themselves simply into the use of credit as a political instrument of power, and this instrument tends to be used in the long run for expropriation of the savings of the community."

THE FARM BUDGET

By DAN H. OTIS,
Agricultural Director, American Bankers Association

Inventories aid in the formation of a farm budget. Some banks, as well as the Farm Credit Administration, recommend outlining in advance the method of using production loans. Under this plan provision is made for monthly expenditures and funds are granted to the borrower in accordance with the budget plan. The budget helps to show how loans can be repaid.

D. H. OTIS

With the accumulated data from previous inventories and budgets, budget making becomes easier and more accurate and valuable. As one branch of the farming plant requires more expenditure, such as for new machinery, fencing, livestock, etc., it may be necessary to limit other branches in order to meet these pressing requirements.

The budget helps to formulate a financial program. It is of special importance in arranging to meet special or large expenditures. If the income and expenditures are carefully budgeted it prevents the spending of money needed for interest and taxes before the time of their payment arrives. It helps to provide a reserve.

The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association feels that this type of work is so important that special emphasis has been placed upon the field of farm inventories, budgets and credit statements as one of its national projects for farm aid.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE RESTORED BY BANKS

American Bankers Association Describes Its Activities to Create Better Understanding Regarding Banks

NEW YORK.—Eight different lines of activity through which the American Bankers Association is constantly aiming to promote better public understanding and opinion in regard to banking and the attitude of bankers toward legislation are described in detail in a statement made public here by R. S. Hecht, president of the association.

The aim, he says, is "to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks," through fostering informative bank advertising in the newspapers and in other ways. The statement was issued in reply to suggestions received urging a nationwide public educational program in regard to "the business of banking and its place in the life of our country."

Mr. Hecht declares that "we have tried very hard to convince the public that the banking fraternity has truly profited by the lessons of the past, is determined to approach all questions of banking policy from the broad viewpoint of public welfare and is prepared to carry its full share of the burden in connection with all efforts to restore sound prosperity in this country."

The Means Employed

In describing the various measures of the association "to exert a beneficial influence on public opinion regarding the functions, methods and operations of banks," Mr. Hecht enumerated the following activities:

1. The Public Education Commission, which prepares plain language talks about banking for use of bankers and others before schools, civic clubs and over the radio.
2. The Constructive Customer Relations program, installed in many banks to help qualify bank employees to promote a better informed and more sympathetic attitude among their customers regarding banking.
3. The Publicity Department, supplying city and country daily and weekly newspapers with articles regarding banking and allied subjects and furnishing the general press with news and information regarding the activities of the association.
4. The Advertising Department, supplying members of the association with a series of informative newspaper advertisements setting forth in brief, popular language the methods and policies under which banks operate, their effective practices for protecting depositors' funds, the services they render and the various ways in which they cooperate with business in their own communities in fostering sound recovery and progress.
5. The Executive Officers and the Committee on Banking Studies, who are active, particularly at Washington, in consulting with Administration and Congressional leaders in formulating proposals for banking reform based on broad lines of public welfare.
6. The Agricultural Commission, promoting among bankers in the farm districts the practice of aiding their farm customers in installing on their farms better financial and operating methods.
7. The American Institute of Banking, having primarily to do with the technical education of the younger banker, but now directing these efforts toward also playing a part in improving public relations for banking as a whole, particularly through stressing the public responsibilities and the ethical aspects of practical banking.
8. The publication of "Banking," the official organ of the association, circulating among bankers, bank directors, business executives, economists, law firms, government departments, libraries, colleges, public schools and other publications, presenting articles regarding banking and banking viewpoints.

The Objective Sought

In commenting on the foregoing program, Mr. Hecht says that it is not "the primary objective to attract attention particularly to the American Bankers Association as such, but rather to focus attention on and give impetus to those ideas which it believes are beneficial in promoting understanding and solidarity among banking, business and the public." He adds:

"Our program for the development of satisfactory public relations for banking does not consist merely of newspaper publicity. It is calculated to produce a continuous and cumulative effect by varied efforts which are aimed to work day in and day out to strengthen the real basis for good opinion in regard to the banks.

"To have favorable things said about the banking business in the newspapers and over the radio is, the association recognizes, very helpful toward creating a sound public opinion regarding banking. But the association believes that the most important thing ultimately is to foster throughout the banking profession the doing sincerely of those things that reflect favorably the sound, helpful practices of the business of banking, and that then the true news of its constructive activities will constitute the best answers to misrepresentations aimed at banks and bankers."

Predicts Farm Loan Expansion

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J. — With marked improvement in agriculture already apparent, and further improvement confidently expected, a greatly expanded volume of farm credit will be required, especially short-term credit, according to a statement here recently by W. I. Myers, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, D. C. He was speaking before the Graduate School of Banking, conducted jointly by the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association and Rutgers University.

"Some people have expressed a fear that the Cooperative Production Credit Associations are threatening the business of country banks, but these institutions have neither the desire nor the resources to monopolize a field which is still in the infancy of development," Governor Myers said. "Farmers who get their credit on time or by charge accounts have a basis for cash loans and should be buying their credit from a bank, production credit association or other institutions that sell credit on a business basis."

TVA WILL BE CONGRESS CAMPAIGN ISSUE

According to plans of political strategy mapped out and indicated in public announcement, Alabama will see the TVA issue fought out to a finish in at least one of our Congressional Districts next year.

W. Culver White, Sheffield attorney, announced last week that he will become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Eighth Alabama District in the primary of May 19, 1936. He said he would make his formal announcement at the proper time.

Asserting that the vast majority of the people in the Tennessee Valley are heart and soul with the President and for the Tennessee Valley Authority, Mr. White said:

> "These people are determined that the efforts of the President to develop the valley through the TVA shall not be checkmated through the power trust. I believe the people of the District want a young man to fight aggressively for TVA. The incumbent, A. H. Carmichael, when he voted against the death warrant for unnecessary utility holding companies, did not vote the sentiment of the Disrict."

Thus, we see brewing in the Eighth District, a political fight that will shake Alabama from one end to the other next year. People on the one hand, are not in favor of interfering with private industrial development, because our own public utilities pay a huge portion of taxes for the support of our schools and other state uses.

On the other hand, however, there is a group that contends the power trust should be "torn limb from limb," and the whole electric business turned over to the TVA program. Especially do the people in the immediate Tennessee Valley feel kindly toward TVA, because its program calls for untold industrial development at their very doors.

This will be an interesting issue in Alabama next year. Doubtless the country as a whole will watch very closely to see what the people of Alabama do with it.

INCOME TAX EXEMPTIONS REDUCED

The United States Senate last week, in swift and somewhat startling action, voted to boost income taxes on even the smallest taxpayers, beginning at a new low level of $800 a year.

Ballots were cast in committee action which would rip out the major features of President Roosevelt's "wealth tax" plan, and raised some doubts of the whole bill's future.

The Senate would cut the federal income tax exemption for a single person from $1,000 to $800, and for a married person from $2,500 to $2,000. This change was calculated to bring new income groups into the federal tax fold, though experts were unable to estimate at once how many.

Regardless of how one may feel about higher taxes (and of course everybody is 'agin' it) we may as well get ourselves ready for a national program to raise more federal revenue than we have ever seen before.

This is an obvious and altogether necessary obligation of the government, simply because the federal budget and deficit is bigger than we have ever had before. The government can pay its expenses only by collecting tax money with which to pay. Only those who make money and acquire wealth can pay taxes.

THE CHIEF SCOUT SPEAKS

President Roosevelt has reluctantly cancelled the National Boy Scout Jamboree which was scheduled to be held in Washington, D.C., August 21 to 30.

The possibility that the infantile paralysis epidemic in the vicinity of Washington might spread to the city was the cause of the president's decision.

Being a victim of the disease himself made the president even more sensitive to the danger of gathering 25,000 boys together in one giant camp. While the giant gathering may have taken place without any of the boys contracting the disease, it is best that no chances were taken.

The thousands of Boy Scouts who had planned to make the trip will not let the disappointment affect their traditional good nature.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Friends of Judge Leon McCord from all parts of Alabama are urging that he be appointed by the President to the bench of the United States Court of Appeals at New Orleans to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Presiding Judge Bryan, of Jacksonville, Florida.

GOODE IS FOR TWELVE-CENT COTTON

From farm leaders and farm organizations throughout Alabama have gone in the last few days numerous telegrams to the president and the Secretary of Agriculture, urging continuance of the 12-cent loan on this year's cotton crop.

R. J. Goode, Commissioner of Agriculture of Alabama, sent the following telegram Saturday to President Roosevelt, Secretary Wallace and Senator Bankhead:

> "We are hopeful that the 12-cent loan on this year's cotton may be continued, and that early announcement to this effect may be made to the public."

The Alabama Cotton Association was reported to have joined Commissioner Goode and other agencies in asking that the government loan be continued on the 1935 crop. Various county agents and individual farmers have likewise sent telegrams in behalf of the loan policy.

For the past two years the government has made loans to cotton producers. In 1933 the loan was 10 cents a pound. Last year it was raised to 12 cents a pound.

Cotton farmers generally express the feeling that they have fared much better by the operation of the government's cotton adjustment program than they would have done without it.

THE ONE SOLUTION

According to an article in The Index, federal expenditures during the past four fiscal years have totaled 25 billion dollars—a sum which represents more than 80 per cent of the wartime expenditures of 1918 and 19, and which is about equal to the total of all federal expenditures from 1789 to 1914.

The inevitable result of that spending has been increasing federal deficits, followed by an astounding expansion of the federal debt. The deficits in 1931, was a little less than one billion dollars, and rose steadily until 1935, when that year's deficit (fiscal year ended June 30) reached three billion five hundred million dollars. And the gross federal debt, since 1930, has increased 12 billion dollars—more than 75 per cent.

As The Index says, a basic question raised by this program "is under the extent to which present spending can be continued without threatening the financial stability of the government." There is no relief in sight—the 1936 deficit will be as great or greater than any of its predecessors. More spending on a vast scale is contemplated. And for every dollar the Treasury is taking in, in spite of abnormally high taxes, two are going out.

Some friends of emergency spending say that the whole problem can be simply and easily solved by inflation—in other words, by turning the printing presses loose to issue currency without backing. The whole history of government finance points to the tragedy of that. Inflation cannot be controlled—once it takes the wheel, it runs away with the driver and collapse of the nation's credit follows.

The only sound solution is to change our policy before it is too late—to trim our financial sail to meet the wind. Only by balancing outgo with income can the government maintain its solvency and integrity.

What has become of our "friend," the cotton boll weevil? It appears remarkable that we have not heard one single mention of the pest during the present cotton growing season.

John J. Allen, "Uncle John," of Bekchite, Oklahoma, last week celebrated his 111th birthday anniversary. He says he is convinced the second hundred years of life is hardest est. Alabama offers a close competitor to "Uncle John." Daniel Webster Henderson, of Covington County, celebrated his 106th birthday Sunday, August 11, and produced documentary proof of the correctness of his age.

A bill by Senator Earle Thomas, making an appropriation of $5,000, which will be matched by a like amount of federal funds, to finance the official observance of the one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of Prattville, county seat of Autauga County, was approved and signed by Governor Bibb Graves last week. Prattville was founded in 1835, by Daniel Pratt, of Temple, New Hampshire, and his wife, Esther Tickner Pratt, of Columbia, Connecticut.

Alabama is stepping forward rapidly in President Roosevelt's all-work and no-relief program, with jobs released and in sight for more than half of the State's May relief load, and orders having been issued for the closing of 34 county relief offices, according to a report released Saturday by Thad Holt, Alabama Director of the Works Progress Administration.

Much comment has been produced over the election of a New Deal opponent to a seat in Congress from Rhode Island last week. The New York World Telegram explains it this way: "What happened in Rhode Island was caused by a state of mind that is growing in this country; a combination of confusion and impatience; confusion about multitude and complex social and economic reforms; impatience for the solid fruit of recovery."

A new law that will prohibit discrimination in public places and conveyances against negroes or any other persons "because of race, creed or color," will become effective in Pennsylvania on September 1st. Hotel and restaurant men are said to be considering an attack on the constitutionality of the measure. Maybe the folks in Pennsylvania can put up with such a law, but it would never work in the South.

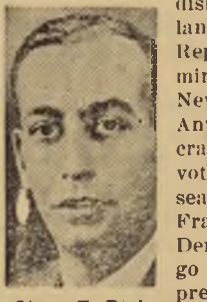
Victory in Rhode Island Election Elates the Republicans—Guffey Coal Bill Undergoes Changes—Black's Probers Enrage Hurley.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

REPUBLICAN leaders throughout the country were immensely heartened—probably too much so—by the result of the by-election in the First district of Rhode Island. Charles F. Risk, Republican and determined opponent of the New Deal, defeated Antonio Prince, Democrat, by nearly 13,000 votes, capturing the seat in congress which Francis B. Condon, Democrat, resigned to go on the State Supreme court. The reversal was so decisive that the Republicans hailed it as a clear indication that President Roosevelt would be defeated for re-election next year.



Chas. F. Risk

Representative B. H. Snell of New York, minority leader, made a speech about it in the house in which he said:

"This is the first time the people of any part of the country have had an opportunity to pass on the reckless and extravagant expenditures of the administration. They have passed upon it in a very decisive manner. The election shows the people are beginning to think. The handwriting is on the wall. From now on we will witness similar rejections by the citizenry of the New Deal program."

Other Republican congressmen spoke in similar vein, but John J. O'Connor, New York Tammany Democrat, countered with the assertion that there was a split in the Democratic party in the Rhode Island district; while Tom Blanton of Texas shouted shame on Rhode Island because it had asked more federal aid than almost any other state. Anti-New Deal Democratic senators, like Gerry, Byrd and Tydings, agreed the election was significant, but from the White House there was no comment.

Former Senator Fess of Ohio with surprising frankness expressed the belief that the G. O. P. would have to wait until 1940 to elect a President. Voicing the opinion of many, the veteran campaigner said: "I don't see how the strongest Republican without all that money next year can beat the weakest Democrat with nearly $5,000,000,000 at his disposal."

REPUBLICANS of the ten Midwestern states that participated in the Grass Roots conference in Springfield, Ill., have made the Grass Roots' movement a permanent auxiliary of the party. Harrison E. Spengler of Iowa is its chairman, Mrs. Leslie Wheeler of Illinois the vice chairman, and Jo Ferguson of Oklahoma, the secretary. Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky, not represented at the Springfield meeting, have been invited to join in the movement.

SENATOR HUGO BLACK of Alabama may bring out a lot of facts in his inquiry into lobbying, but his way of conducting the investigation is not winning him any credit. The house has all along felt that he was trying to bully it into accepting the utilities bill "death sentence" clause and has been correspondingly resentful. Various witnesses before the senate committee have felt, seemingly with reason, that they were being treated unfairly.

P. J. Hurley

One of these witnesses who complained bitterly was Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war in the Hoover administration. He testified that he had received $100,000 from the Associated Gas and Electric system in the last three years, but insisted he was paid for legal advice only and had done no lobbying. Hurley was not permitted to read a prepared statement, and Black's interjections and questions so angered the witness that he rose to his feet and shouted: "Everyone knows all you gentlemen are good prosecutors! Of course, you don't know what it is to be fair or just. You try to put words into a witness' mouth. Your questions are all on the type of the 'Why don't you stop beating your wife?' query."

Joseph P. Tumulty, who was secretary to President Wilson, also was put on the stand and was not treated so roughly. He, too, admitted receiving considerable sums from utility concerns, and like Hurley he denied that he had done any lobbying. Tumulty testified that he paid former Senator George H. Moses (Rep.), N. H., $5,000 and would pay another $2,500 to John Walsh, a brother of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh (Dem.), Mont. Moses and Walsh, Tumulty said, are attorneys and aided in work done for the utility clients.

THERE were strong indications that the house ways and means committee would produce an entirely new measure to replace the Guffey bituminous coal bill. Chairman Doughton revealed that the committee had adopted a number of amendments designed to bring the measure within constitutional limits and to meet objections that it would discriminate against some coal districts. The committee still stood 14 to 11 against the bill, however. The President was said to have informed the Democratic members that he was agreeable to any changes they might wish to make provided the main objectives of the measure were maintained.

According to current report, the changes agreed upon in the committee included:

Elimination of the section forbidding the Interstate Commerce commission to issue certificates of convenience and necessity for operation of railroads to bitiminous mines without prior approval by the bituminous coal commission.

Addition of a provision for hearings to determine whether the method of fixing prices was working to the detriment of any coal producing district.

Reduction from nine to five in the number of commission members, and the addition of a stipulation that none shall have any outside connections.

Reduction from 25 to 15 per cent in the amount of the tax assessed against mine operators.

Reduction from 99 to 90 per cent in the amount of credit allowed the producers who abide by the code.

VIOLENTLY attacked from all sides and nowhere defended with enthusiasm, the President's new share-the-wealth tax bill nevertheless was put through the house because of the great administration majority and also because the congressmen are tired out and eager to go home. Representative Treadway, Republican, of Massachusetts, made a last effort against the measure with a resolution to send it back to committee, but this was easily defeated.

Sen. Barbour

As passed by the house, the bill is not quite what the President asked for. Briefly summarized, it increases taxes on individual incomes over $50,000, substitutes a graduated corporation-income tax for the present flat levy, puts new taxes on inheritances and gifts in addition to those already borne by estates and gifts, imposes new taxes of 5 to 20 per cent on "excess" profits of corporations.

It is designed to raise revenue estimated at between $250,000,000 and $270,000,000. Its warmest friends couldn't explain how this would do much in the way of bringing about what the President calls "wider distribution of wealth," or in the way of balancing the budget.

The measure was handed on to the senate with dubious prospects. It was expected the senate finance committee would study it for about a week, and in the meanwhile the conservative Republicans and not a few Democrats were preparing to fight it. Senator W. W. Barbour of New Jersey, Republican, fired an opening gun with a statement in which he said: "Votes, and votes alone, are the objective of this half-baked measure."

"What this bill actually attempts is to climb upon that hard-ridden steed, "Share-the-Wealth," and ride him away while the demagogues who have pressed him sorely in the past are looking in the other direction.

"The bill should be laid away until the next session of congress when the budget for the ensuing year will be presented. Then, in the light of carefully appropriated federal moneys, we can determine how much revenue will be needed to operate.

"Taxes can be levied deliberately as a true revenue measure. Any other program is not good business and is not good government."

One change made by the house against the President's wishes involved corporations' gifts to charities. Mr. Roosevelt was firmly against letting corporations deduct from their taxable income any gifts to charity. Just as firmly the house voted to let them deduct up to 5 per cent of their incomes.

WITH some reluctance the senate began consideration of the Walsh bill giving the President power to require minimum wage and maximum hour standards of all firms bidding for government contracts. That measure has been added to the administration's "must" list. The Republicans were preparing to fight the bill as another government plan for regulation of private industry. They point out that it hits about every industry in the country, since it not only applies to corporations selling to the government but extends also to state and local projects wholly or partly financed by federal funds.

NOT to be dismayed by the death of NRA, Senator J. C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming thinks the objectives of that contraption, high labor standards and fair competition, can be realized, and for that purpose he has drawn up a measure for the regulation of all national commerce by licensing business.

The bill creates a licensing system for businesses engaged in commerce among the states and provides a national incorporation law.

The federal trade commission, the government's business policeman in the days before NRA and the agency to which the New Deal turned after NRA codes were outlawed, would be the keystone of the new plan. O'Mahoney's bill would increase its membership from five to nine, with three commissioners representing employees, three employers, and three the general public.

NOTWITHSTANDING warnings by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht and other sane Germans, some of the Nazi leaders insist on pushing to further extremes the war on Jews and Catholics. For instance, Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, in a speech at Essen announced drastic action against all "enemies" of the Nazi state—Jews, Catholics, the foreign press and the Stahlheim war veterans. He predicted these important developments:

Paul Goebbels

1. Suppression of the Catholic press and intensification of the Nazi campaign against all Catholic opponents of the third reich.
2. Nationwide dissolution of the Stahlheim.
3. An official ban in near future on marriages between Jews and Aryans.

ENGLAND and France were still trying to find the way to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia, but Premier Mussolini of Italy was so skeptical that he ordered 75,000 more men to the colors. By the first of October he will have about a million men in uniform. Haile Selassie, the Ethiopian emperor, was reported to have sanctioned the concentration of 60,000 of his troops on Italy's east African frontiers. The chiefs, it is said, are finding it increasingly difficult to restrain their warriors from overt acts that would surely precipitate warfare.

ANANDA, the eleven-year-old king of Siam, nearly lost his throne the other day. A widespread plot was formed under the leadership of noncommissioned officers of the regular army to overthrow the government. But loyalists uncovered it and effectually smashed it. The plotters intended to seize and kill their superior officers and oust the regency council that rules the country.

SUDDEN death put an end to the career of Nathan P. Bryan of Jacksonville, Fla., presiding judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Fifth Judicial circuit. Judge Bryan, who was sixty-three years old, was formerly United States senator from Florida.

Frank H. Hitchcock, publisher of the Daily Citizen of Tucson, Ariz., succumbed to pneumonia after several months of ill health. Prominent in Republican party politics all his mature life, Mr. Hitchcock managed Taft's Presidential campaign in 1908 both before and after the convention and was postmaster general in the Taft cabinet. For years he was actively interested in the progress of aviation.

JOE LOUIS, negro pugilist of Detroit who hopes some day to be the heavyweight champion of the world, advanced another step toward that goal by defeating "King" Levinsky in the first round of a scheduled ten round bout in Chicago. Levinsky was knocked down four times in little more than two minutes, and the referee then gave the fight to Joe on a technical knockout. Louis and Max Baer, former champion, have signed for a battle in September.

SAMUEL INSULL'S annual pension of $21,000 has been restored by vote of the directors of the Chicago utility companies which he formerly headed, and he also receives about $33,250 to cover payments accruing since the beginning of last year when payments were suspended by the companies. Insull previously announced he had made no effort to regain his pensions. Agitation to restore the payments was begun after Insull had been freed in the federal and state courts of all criminal charges growing out of his management of his former properties.

WAGE cuts decreed by the French government led to strikes and violent demonstrations. Especially riotous were naval shipyards workers at Brest, steamship employees at various ports and bus and gas plant workers in Paris. The sailing of several large liners was delayed. Finally the government issued new decrees lowering the cost of living, and the strikers were somewhat mollified. The Communists were blamed for the violence.

NEARLY $8,000,000—$7,784,000, to be exact—has been allotted from the works-relief funds by President Roosevelt for a census of American business. The census bureau asked and received this after it had been allotted $293,000 for a survey of retail trade. The business work is to begin at once, and the canvass will start on January 2.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Gypsy Trip

Dear Margaret:

I just got back from the gypsy trip and really, I've never had a better time in all my life. Two nights out, seven meals cooked by my own hands and more than that, we pitched our own tents. No one could hardly hold us in bed Friday morning later than 3:30 and they didn't want to anyway, because we wanted an early start.

It's lovely to watch the sun rise. At six o'clock we left camp singing our camp song, "Here's to Camp Coleman," and we sang all the way except when we had recess and played cow poker. My side won. They had a cemetery and had started over just before we stopped.

After we got to Valley Head the scenery was magnificent. We reached Juliette Lowe and pitched our tents just in time, for a shower came up. That didn't dampen our spirits a bit though. After the shower we went down for a swim, after which dinner tasted mighty good.

Juliette Lowe invited us to their archery tournament, and after rest hour we went. Could they shoot? That night we went over to folk dance. They were mighty nice to us all the time we were there.

Really, Margaret, I did so many interesting things and cooked so many new dishes it would be hard to tell them all. But it was all just lovely!

Note.—The above letter is taken from "The Pine Cone," the official newspaper of Camp Gertrude Coleman, and was written by Emma Nell Parish, of Auburn, Ala. Emma Nell was one of thirteen girl scouts who, with four counselors, went from Camp Coleman to Juliette Lowe at Cloudland, Ga., on a three-day gypsy trip, August 2-4. Jeanne Appleton of Montevallo, Pioneer Troop, was a member of this group, and Frances Lee, lieutenant in Louisa Mae Alcott Troop, Montevallo, was one of the four counselors.

They were greeted at Juliette Lowe by Miss Edith Saylor of Alabama College physical educational department, who is counselor and archery instructor, Dorothy Waites and Mary Agnes Curtis, Alabama College students, who are also counselors, and two regional workers.

Misses Elizabeth Jenkins and Alice Phillipson, both of whom we have had visit our local scout groups, were also there.

The girls who made the gypsy trip were advanced scouts and experienced campers. All thirteen girls won the pioneer badge from their two weeks in pioneering at Coleman.

The six weeks camp period at Coleman came to a close on August eighth. Other Montevallo scouts who attended during this season were Eleanor Reynolds, Anne and Sylvia Appleton, each for a two weeks period. Eleanor and Anne passed their junior life saving at Camp under Ruth Lehman, Alabama College graduate of 1935, who was swimming instructor.

Sylvia earned her swimmer's merit badge but was barred from the junior life saving tests due to her age.

SUMTER COUNTY MAN IS SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Livingston, Ala., Aug. 10. — Lock Sheffield, 65, of near Cuba, Ala., was critically shot tonight while enroute to his home about three miles from Cuba, in Sumter County.

Sheriff E. C. Godfrey said the man's assailant apparently lay in wait for him along the highway, and shot as Sheffield drove along in his buggy.

Sheriff Godfrey said he had no clues as to the itentity of the assailant but that he had asked Columbus, Ga., officials to investigate the whereabouts of two residents of that city.

Sheffield has been unable to talk since being found, Sheriff Godfrey said.

State Fair Begins In Birmingham Sept. 23

The Alabama state fair to be held at Birmingham from September 23 to September 28, will have many more agricultural exhibits this year than last according to Dr. M. F. Jackson, director in charge of agricultural exhibits.

Dr. Jackson and the state fair management are well pleased with the interest being shown by counties throughout the state. Some of the counties that have already arranged for exhibits include Walker, Bibb, Calhoun, Limestone, Cullman, Jefferson, Blount, Chilton, Butler, Choctaw and Morgan Counties. More counties are being added each week as the opening date of the fair approaches.

It is Dr. Jackson's ambition and aim to see every county in the state represented with exhibits at the state fair.

There will also be exhibits by the United States Department of Agriculture at the state fair.

WORKMEN TO RAZE THE $300,000 BOY SCOUT CAMP

Washington, Aug. 9. — Workmen stood by today to raze the $300,000 unusued Boy Scout jamboree camp, its tenancy forbidden by an outbreak of infantile paralysis in nearby areas.

The jamboree—to have cost $600,000 for the camp, transportation and maintenance — was called off yesterday by President Roosevelt because of prevalence of the disease. Scout officials said the loss was covered by insurance and that the 23,000 scouts who already had posted $25 for their share of the expense would get refunds.

Mr. Roosevelt's action meanwhile drew commendation from Representative Rankin (D), Miss., who demanded on the house floor several days ago that the jamboree be called off to prevent world-wide spread of the horrible disease. Rankin said "the American people owe a lasting debt of gratitude to President Roosevelt for calling off the international meeting of scouts."

Carrier Pigeon Visitor At Jordan Dam Plant

Wetumpka, Ala.—A few days ago the attention of the attendants and visitors at Alabama Power Company's Jordan Dam was attracted by an object fluttering on the lawn near the power plant. The object proved to be an exhausted pigeon. Maxwell field and other points were called to learn the bird's homing port, but no one was able to identify the bird from the band on its leg which bore the number 81. The pigeon was given water and food, and after resting for the day, it took off, heading east. Some of the people at the dam wondered if the pigeon had "accepted" the Power Company's invitation to visit the pioneer large-power developments in the state during "Open House Month."

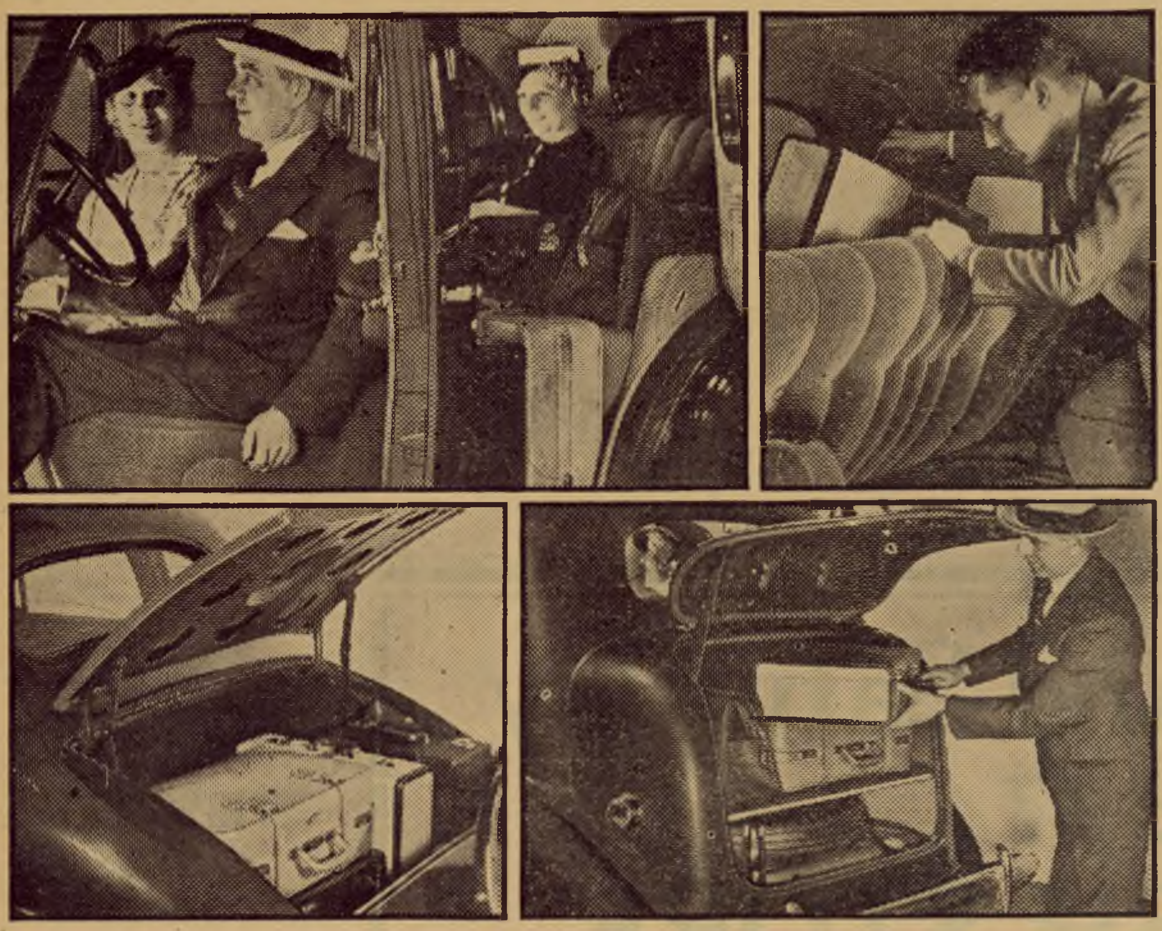
Properly Stowed Bags Add to Comfort



Comfort, pleasure, and safety on a tour depend largely on efficient loading of the luggage, and modern body designs have done much to ease the problem, as these views of Chevrolet models reveal. In the upper left view, the suitcases have been fitted in snugly, the adjustable front seat having been moved forward to allow extra leeway, and the driver is now pushing back the seat to clamp the bags in place for the day. Upper right, the tourist is utilizing the baggage space back of the rear seat. The two lower pictures show the loading of a coupe compartment and a sedan trunk.

(By Willie Thomason)

In order to raise the necessary funds for a new young people's department, the Siluria B. Y. P. U. is sponsoring a personality contest at the Thompson High School Auditorium Friday, August 23 at 7:30 p.m.

It is expected that about forty contestants sponsored by firms doing business in Siluria will compete for the title of "Miss Personality-1935", and a beautiful loving bearing this inscription.

Each firm sponsoring a contestant pays into the fund the sum of one dollar, and is then allowed to choose one girl to appear in the contest and compete for the title and loving cup.

The following firms have already chosen their contestents: Rock Villa, Ruby Denham; Alabasta Cash Store, Gertrude Armstrong: Dixie Service Station, Doris Brandon; J. E. Walker, Billie Hill; W. R. Walker, Irene Walker; Willie Webb Cafe, Bernice Payne; Olin Robinson, Flora Mae Huddleston; Orange Crush, Clara Mae Argo; Try-Me, Agnes Nix; Service Barber Shop, Jerry Kelly, Service Cleaners, Mildred Heath; Siluria Cash Store, Margie Reach; Buck Creek Weave Room, Annie Pearl Guy; M. Store, Vera Simms; Brackin's Jewelery Co., Zola Moore; Wagner Clothing Co., Hazel Maudling; Sokol Bros., Nell Walton; Kilgore Furniture Co., Lexie Lowery; Life Insurance Co., Va., Margaret Tillery; Mrs. Parrish Beauty Shop, Clara Mae Guy.

Other firms expecting to enter a girl are: Ward's Bread, National Bread Co., Merita Bread Co., Siluria Theatre, Betsy Ross Bread Co., Life and Casualty Insurance Co., Siluria Athletic Club, Buck Creek Spining Department, L. & N. R. R., Coco Cola Bottling Co., Dr. Pepper Bottling Co., American Laundry and others.

The results of the who's who contest that has been in full swing for the past few weeks will also be announced on this night. There will also be other forms of entertainment including the WSGN Kiddie Club.

The judges will be unknown to the public until the night of the contest. They will be from out of town and non-partisan.

There is expected to be a large crowd attending to see who "Miss Personality 1935" will be. This title was won last year by Miss Lois Maulding.

Willie Thomason will be master of ceremonies and the cup will be presented by Rev John B. Johnson pastor Siluria Baptist Church.

NEGRO CONGRESSMAN IS A SPEAKER AT ATHENS

Athens, Ala.—Chicago's negro representative in congress came here last week to eulogize President Roosevelt, the TVA and to urge the races in the South to a better understanding.

Negroes and whites alike turned out enmasse to hear Representative Mitchell explain his version of Roosevelt and the "New Deal." He denounced Hoover and the Reublican party in no uncertain terms.

STREET IMPROVEMENT MADE

With the use of relief labor the City of Montevallo has done a considerable bit of street improvement recently. One block of new street has been opened up, graded and graveled. Improvement has been made on Ireland Street by a job of grading and graveling about two blocks.

The "meanest thief" is reported to have entered the Mossburg cemetery toolhouse in Bluffton, Ind., and taken every article of value, including lawn mowers, spades, shovels and rakes.

BONDING RACKET SCORCHED BY GOVERNOR BIBB GRAVES

Montgomery. — Governor Bibb Graves struck a vigorous blow at the high-handed tactics of surety companies in making drastic regulations for the bonding of tax collectors and assessors this week with the introduction of a legislative bill to permit the state to bond its own officials through the state insurance department.

The measure, written at the governor's request, was introduced by Representative A. C. Lee, of Monroe.

"These regulations of private bonding companies have made it impossible for many collectors and assessors to make bond," the Governor said, scoring the tactics of the companies. "If they won't bond our collectors, the state will."

The state already writes most of its own fire insurance on state-owned buildings, and the bonding bill would take thousands of dollars worth of business annually away from private concerns.

SIX MILE NEWS

The revival closed at the Baptist Church Friday night. The attendance was very gratifying at each service. Rev. Guy Marlowe, the pastor did all the preaching. Several were added to the church. The baptising is set for the first Sunday in September at the creek.

25,000 BALES PREDICTED IN HOUSTON THIS YEAR

Dothan, Ala.—County Agent C. M. Ling predicted today that Houston's cotton crop will run between 15 and 20 below the bumper yield of 1934 although more acreage is in the staple this season.

The 1934 crop was slightly over 30,000 bales; production this year, he forecast, will be hardly better than 25,000. The yield this season, he said will be poorer despite an additional 10 per cent acreage planted. For once poor yield was not blamed on the boll weevil. Cotton is opening rapidly and every gin in the county is busy.

VOLUME 3, NUMBER 22 MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA. THURSDAY, AUGUST 22, 1935 SUBSCRIPTION $1.50 PER YEAR

SUMMER SESSION CLOSES FRIDAY

CAMPUS HAS BEEN SCENE OF IMPORTANT CONFERENCES IN RECENT WEEKS

The summer session at Alabama College comes to a close August 24. There was a forty per cent increase in summer school enrollment, and registration for the next regular session, beginning September 7, is twenty per cent ahead of the number recorded one year ago. Indications now are that the regular attendance in September will be considerably in excess of 850.

The Alabama College campus has been the scene of activity throughout the summer with a series of major conferences being held in addition to the Adult Education Program, which has been extended until August 24, ending with the summer term.

The Adult Assembly of the North Alabama Methodist Conference will be held on the campus August 20-23.

It is estimated that more than 2,500 have attended the summer meetings which include the Epworth League Assembly, the Progressive Education program, the conference of English teachers and high school principals, the college camp for girls, the school of instruction for vocational home economics teachers, the writers conclave, the student career conference.

Proposed Bus Line To Serve This Locality

Montevallo citizens are especially interested in and hopeful of the favorable outcome of an application that has been made to the Public Service Commission for the establishment of a regular passenger bus line from Sylacauga to Tuscaloosa through this city.

The application has been made by Alabama Coaches, Inc., which concern is constituted by Hansel Brown, president, W. L. Brown, and Wyman Brown, all citizens of Montevallo. Regular schedules of first class bus service is proposed to be maintained from Sylacauga, through Childresburg, Columbiana, Calera, Montevallo, Centreville and into Tuscaloosa. Connection would be made at all points with other regular bus lines.

It is apparent that the establishment of such a passenger service over the proposed route would be a great advantage to the traveling public, as railroad schedules across this part of Alabama east and west are not adequate for the needs.

The promoters of this operation are experienced in the transportation business, having operated the Alabama College bus line from Montevallo to Calera for the past thirteen years.

Montevallo people would be very glad indeed if the Public Service Commission would authorize the operation of Alabama Coaches as requested in the application.

Little Miss Elizabeth Clara Wells, of Chattanooga, Tennessee, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. S. C. Newton for a period of about three weeks. Elizabeth Clara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Will Wells.

Big Days Last Week At Montevallo Cash Store

Last Friday and Saturday proved to be two of the biggest days in the history of the Montevallo Cash Store. The response to the invitation sent out by this popular food store to their customers and friends produced a tremendous inflow of customers at the store both days. The factory demonstrations given by distributors of a number of standard food products proved to be of very great interest to many of the visitors.

Mr. W. C. Spivey, manager of the store says: "We wish to express our appreciation to all our friends and customers for their fine response in visiting our store on this special occasion. We feel that we made many new friends by this effort, and that we gave to all, both old and new customers something that they appreciate."

This week the Montevallo Cash Store is engaged in the installation of larger and better refrigerating equipment which will make them far greater capable of handling market products for the satisfaction of their customers.

HOME APPLIANCE COMPANY MOVED TO NEW LOCATION

The Home Applicance Company has moved their business into the Wilson Building formerly occupied by the College Shop. It is next door to McGaughy Grocery Store.

The new location will permit this enterprising concern to provide a more attractive display of the various electrical appliances which constitute their line.

Mr. Craig states that they will have their new place completely fitted out in a few days, at which time he expects to hold a special demonstration event on radios and some other things.

AUTO TAGS WILL EXPIRE OCT. 25

DEADLINE ADVANCED FROM NOVEMBER 14th TO OCTOBER 25th

Montgomery.—Alabama's new auto tag law which becomes effective the first of October will by three weeks shorten the time limit autoists have in which to purchase tags before becoming delinquent. The deadline has been advanced from November 14 to October 25.

While little or no change has been made in the price of truck tags, passenger cars have been substantially reduced to a range of from $5 to $18, whereas, under the old law, prices were from $11.75 to $30.50. Due to a radical change in classifications very few cars will be eligible for an A tag.

Schedule of weights and prices follow: Cars weighing 2,000 pounds or less $5, 2,000 to 2,500 pounds, $9, 2,500 to 3,250 pounds, $13, in excess of 3,250 pounds, $18. The old schedule was: Cars weighing 2,500 pounds or less $11.75, 2,500 to 3,000 pounds, $17.25, 3,000 to 3,500 pounds, $19.75, 3,500 to 4,000 pounds, $26.75, and in excess of 4,000 pounds, $30.50.

A 50 cents issuing fee to be collected by the probate office will be added to these rates.

After October 1 tags will be sold on a monthly declining basis instead of the present quarterly plan, with a minimum price of $2. Owners must have the model, motor number and serial number when applying for a tag. The tags now are being printed at Kilby prison, it is understood, and will be ready for distribution to the 67 probate offices this month.

INFORMATION OF INTEREST TO FARMERS GINNING COTTON

Attention of farmers who have cotton to gin is directed to the information contained in the advertisement of the Brown Gin Company, of Montevallo, in this issue of The Times.

Mr. Brown presents in a concise and accurate manner the requirements exacted of farmers in presenting their exemption certificates at the gin with each bale of cotton.

It will save a lot of time and confusion if farmers will comply with the regulations of the internal revenue department as outlined by Mr. Brown.

Alabama Behind With Fish Culture Program

Montgomery, Ala.—A one-page report just made public by the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries of which Frank T. Bell is commissioner, shows how far Alabama is lagging behind the majority of the other states in supplying revenue for its fish cultural program and just how important the other states consider the collection of this revenue.

Of the entire 48 states only Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia and South Carolina do not have a state fishing license. The only contribution the fishermen make in these four states is the fee they pay for non-resident, alien or part-time license. This fee in 1933-34 brought Alabama the sum total of $1,300 from 410 non-resident anglers.

This, of course, is negligible when balanced against the cost of even the limited fish cultural program the state now attempts to carry out and, as a natural result, the hunter must bear the major portion of the cost of this program. This seems grossly unfair when compared with what the anglers of the other states are contributing to perpetuate the sport of fishing.

WILL ROGERS AND WILEY POST

Every newspaper in the land will devote more or less editorial space to a tribute to Will Rogers and Wiley Post. As our contribution we ask the privilege of using the words of Mr. Hopson Owen Murfee, of Prattville, as he wrote in The Montgomery Advertiser Monday:

The wisest and best of men has answered his hearty Adsum among the Hosts of Heaven. Will Rogers is dead. But he lives forever in the minds and hearts of men and women and little children whose lives have been made happier, wiser, and better by his presence.

Universal sorrow swept over the world when the sad news was flashed of his flight from earth to heaven. In our capital city as throughout the land he loved, graced by his presence and enriched by his love there was not other thought or speech throughout the day of this world disaster. For Will Rogers was in truth a world figure of honest fame, admired and beloved wherever human hearts are moved by truth and beauty adorned with wit and wisdom. No king or emperor would be more universally mourned in his passing than our Will Rogers who is universally beloved.

It has been said, that a perfect union of wit and wisdom is one of the rarest things in the world. This rare and happy union was Will Rogers, lovable and loving and beloved above the measure of men. His life was altogether lovely in the home of his heart, in the land of his love, and in the world of his devotion. We shall not see his like again.

His heroic companion on his last journey is also one of the earth's noblemen, who lived so that the world might be made better by his life.

"They were beautiful in their lives.

"And in their death they were not divided."

We have heard of one man who did not know Will Rogers. A farmer down in Chilton County is well-todo and has money in the bank. He walked into the bank on the morning the news of the Rogers-Post tragedy was flashed to the world.

The president of the bank said, "Mr. Farmer, it is terrible news about the death of Will Rogers, isn't it?" The farmer replied: "Who is Will Rogers? I don't know him. What about it?"

The mayor of one of our small cities went home to dinner that day. As the negro cook was placing his meal before him, he said:

"Lena, do you know Will Rogers?" She at once replied: "Yassah, he's de man what talks over radio, writes in the papers, does funny things in the picture show and makes people laugh. Yassah, I knows him and I likes him, too."

"Well," said the mayor, "Will Rogers is dead. He was killed yesterday in an airplane accident in Alaska." Lena continued, "I don't know where at Alaska, but I shore is sorry bout Will Rogers being killed, I shore is, yassah."

RETAIL BUSINESS IS GOOD

Retail trade held its own in the Sixth Federal Reserve District the past week, said an Associated Press review Sunday.

"There has been no change from the last week," one large department store executive said. "Business is still good."

Bank clearings continued an upward surge, the clearings at Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank being $40,300,000 as compared to $37,100,000 last week.

Birmingham steel production remained stationary at last week's figure of 35.4 per cent of normal. An upward trend is expected next month.

DOES SHELBY COUNTY WANT THE BIRMINGHAM HIGHWAY?

In a front page editorial last week The Shelby County Reporter makes the following very pointed and interesting comment concerning that part of the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway through Shelby County:

"The Reporter is informed that the State Highway Department has made plans for widening and resurfacing the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway. It is intended to do the work with federal funds. But federal funds cannot be used on such a road unless there is a right-of-way 100 feet wide. The present right-of-way is only 50 feet.

"Disappointed at their failure to secure the additional 50-foot right of way through Shelby County, the State Highway Department, so The Reporter is informed, is considering the development of another road to connect Birmingham and Montgomery, which would leave Shelby County entirely out. There is such a road, The Reporter is informed, for which a right-of-way has already been secured."

These observations made by The Reporter, should draw the very serious concern of officials and citizens of Shelby County. Another highway could be built from Birmingham to Montgomery. Doubtless it can be done about as cheap as the present one can be repaired and made wider.

Further, it should be borne in mind that the prospect of such another highway would be very happily received by the counties through which it might run. They will pull for it, no doubt, and will be glad to put up the things necessary to get it.

It appears to us, therefore, that it is worthwhile that Shelby and the other counties through which the present highway passes, should not fail to provide the necessary right-of-way to have the present highway improved under plans of the Highway Department.

WHAT IS THE OTHER PROPOSED HIGHWAY?

Actuated by our interest in the statement of The Shelby County Reporter last week that a highway route from Birmingham to Montgomery, to take the place of the present highway is being contemplated, the editor of The Montevallo Times started a hunt to determine what is the new route under consideration.

We happened to know a man who is something of a scout for the State Highway Department, and set out to get his ideas on the subject.

He evidenced an unexpected measure of familiarity with the proposal, and talked rather freely about the situation which faces Shelby County in securing a 100-foot right-of-way for the widening of the present highway.

Finally, we succeeded in getting him around to the main question: What and where is the other proposed highway?

He did not hesitate with the answer: It is proposed, he said, to route the new highway out of Birmingham, through Bessemer into Montevallo, over the new bridge soon to be built here, then the Montevallo cutoff through Chilton County and into the present highway at old Mt. Moriah.

Well, we are sure of one thing, that Montevallo would not object to being on the main highway between Birmingham and Montgomery. In fact, if it were left to our choice, that is exactly where we would be. Of course, Montevallo can not be moved to the highway. But if the Highway Department wants to move the highway to Montevallo, we think it would suit our folks mighty well.

Then, too, it would not be leaving Shelby County entirely off the highway, as was expressed by the rumor mentioned in The Reporter. It would merely be putting the principal town of Shelby County on the state's most prominent road.

However, we shall not let the mention of this possibility deter us from insisting that the highway from Montevallo to Calera be paved at once. If we can get paving into Calera, we can be more patient while the powers of the Highway Department decide what to do with the other matters under consideration.

There is nothing wrong with the government, maybe; but we would like to shake the hand of a man who needed a job and got one with either the state or national government without the aid of political pull.—Opp Weekly News.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

WILL ROGERS, famous actor and humorist, and Wiley Post, one of the best known fliers in the world, crashed to their death in a plane while flying from Fairbanks to Point Barrow, Alaska. The two men, close friends, had been enjoying an aerial vacation trip in the North, and Post intended later to fly to Asia. News of the fatal accident was sent to Seattle by Sergt. Stanley R. Morgan, signal corps operator at Point Barrow. He said he had recovered the bodies from the wreckage.

H. C. Hopson

RIVALS in the matter of publicity, the house and senate committees on the activities of lobbyists got into a tangle that certainly didn't enhance their dignity. Howard C. Hopson, the long sought head of the Associated Gas and Electric Utilities system, permitted the emissary of the house committee to find him, and Senator Hugo Black flew into a rage and had his committee threaten Hopson with contempt proceedings unless he appeared before it. Chairman O'Connor of the house body was angered by this and declared: "Hopson is in my custody. I've got him. Nobody else has got him. Nobody else is going to get him."

The elusive, chunky utilities magnate told the house committee about his various companies and related the saga of his travels while he was being sought. But he politely refused to answer questions concerning the sources and amount of his income. He testified that he "believed" the Associated Gas system had spent "eight or nine hundred thousand dollars" in opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn utility control bill.

"That's just a small fraction of the $300,000,000 equity in our companies which would be destroyed if the bill becomes law and remains law," he declared.

To one question by Cox of Georgia Hopson replied: "I resent that inquiry. No gentleman would have asked it." Whereupon Cox threatened to kick him out of the room unless he withdrew the answer, and Hopson mildly withdrew it.

O'Connor introduced in the house a resolution that severely slammed the senate, but it dropped when word came that Senator Black would wait to take Hopson after O'Connor's bunch was through with him. However, it gave opportunity for a ridiculous quarrel between the New Yorker and Rankin of Texas.

Late in the day Hopson calmly walked into Black's committee room and asked: "Is some one here looking for me?" Black and his committee then questioned the utilities man for an hour or two and got mighty little out of him except smooth sarcasm that made the chairman quite furious. At that time both Hopson and his attorney had been served with contempt citation.

GOV. MARTIN L. DAVEY of Ohio has "pulled a fast one" on the Republicans in behalf of the Democratic party. The G. O. P. leaders were demanding a state-wide by-election in Ohio to fill the vacancy created by the death of Representative-at-Large Charles V. Truax, believing the result would demonstrate, even more clearly than did the Rhode Island election, the waning strength of the administration. But Governor Davey went to Washington and consulted with President Roosevelt and then announced that he would not call and could not be compelled to call a special congressional election until next year. His declared reason was the cost, not fear of party defeat. Court action to force the calling of the election has been started but Davey says there is no restriction of his discretion in fixing the time of the election.

SURROUNDED by a group of notables and in the glare of photographers' flashlights, President Roosevelt put his signature on the social security act, of which he said: "If the senate and house of representatives in this long and arduous session had done nothing more than pass this bill the session would be regarded as historic for all time."

Among those who were present were Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York and Representative John Lewis of Maryland, who jointly drafted the bill; Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who had a hand in its making, and Senators Pat Harrison, William King and Edward P. Costigan.

In a talk intended for reproduction on the sound screens of the country the President said:

"This social security measure gives at least some protection to 30,000,000 of our citizens who will reap direct benefits through unemployment compensation, through old age pensions and through increased services for the protection of children and the prevention of ill health.

"We can never insure 100 per cent of the population against 100 per cent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life but we have tried to frame a law which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and to his family against the loss of a job and against poverty-ridden old age.

"This law, too, represents a corner stone in a structure which is being built but is by no means complete—a structure intended to lessen the force of possible future depressions, to act as a protection to future administrations of the government against the necessity of going deeply into debt to furnish relief to the needy—a law to flatten out the peaks and valleys of deflation and of inflation—in other words a law that will take care of human needs and at the same time provide for the United States an economic structure of vastly greater soundness."

Baron Aloisi

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN of England, Premier Pierre Laval of France and Baron Pompei Aloisi of Italy met in Paris, as arranged, to see if they couldn't devise a way to avert the Italo-Ethiopian war, due to begin in September. Eden had a plan all prepared and after outlining it to Laval he laid it before Baron Aloisi. The latter, of course, had no power to assent but was compelled to submit the proposals to Premier Mussolini. That Il Duce would accept it without change was considered unlikely, but it formed a basis for discussion.

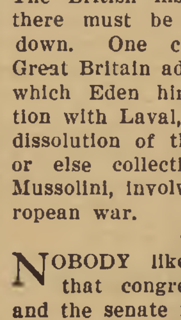
According to the best information, the Eden plan embraced these chief points:

1. Important economic concessions for Italy in Ethiopia.

2. A proposal that Italy be given the right to colonize and exploit rich, sparsely inhabited portions of the Ethiopian uplands probably under a League of Nations mandate as is provided for former German colonies in article XXII of the League of Nations covenant.

3. The offer of an outlet direct to the sea for Ethiopia, as a measure of compensation for its concessions.

It was understood in Paris that Mussolini still demanded what would amount to a mandate over Ethiopia so that he would have political as well as economic control over the country. This Great Britain does not like, and France is rather on the fence. The British insist that in any case there must be an immediate showdown. One correspondent said if Great Britain adhered to the policy at which Eden hinted in his conversation with Laval, it would mean either dissolution of the League of Nations or else collective sanctions against Mussolini, involving the risk of a European war.



Senator Borah

NOBODY liked the new tax bill that congress was working on, and the senate finance committee had hard work making up its mind as to the form it would recommend. First it altered almost every provision of the bill passed by the house and changed it from a "soak the rich" measure to one which would soak practically every one. This was done by lowering personal income tax exemptions and starting the surtax increases at $3,000 instead of $50,000. The latter feature was proposed by Senator La Follette and was adopted to keep him in line. Also, the inheritance taxes which President Roosevelt had asked for were eliminated.

Protests against increasing the taxes on little incomes came immediately, from senators, representatives and the country at large. Senators Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska were among the "independents" who expressed their disapproval. Mr. Borah especially was vocal in opposition.

"Families with these small incomes are now paying more than their proportionate share of taxes and at the same time are facing higher prices for food, clothes, fuel and rents," he said.

So the committee suddenly reversed itself abruptly, rejected the La Follette plan by a vote of 8 to 7.

The bill which the committee reported was passed by the senate by a vote of 57 to 22. It contains new provisions to compensate for those eliminated from the house bill and the estimated revenue is only $1,000,000 less. This is divided in the senate bill as follows:

Graduated corporation income tax	$ 60,000,000
Corporation excess profits and capital stock taxes	65,000,000
Intercorporate dividend taxes	39,000,000
Increased estate taxes with related gift taxes........	100,000,000
Increased surtaxes on incomes in excess of $1,000,000	5,000,000
Total	$269,000,000

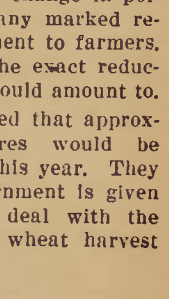
FIFTY commissioners representing the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church have been in session in Evanston, Ill., and have agreed upon a form of union that is to be submitted to the general conferences of the three churches and, if ratified by them, to all the annual conferences. The new organization, it was agreed, would be called the United Methodist church and would consist of six jurisdictional or regional conferences.

FARMERS who believe that their individual rights are being encroached upon by the administration's agricultural policies are offered a chance to get together by the organization and incorporation in Chicago of the Farmers' Independent Council of America. Dan D. Casement, a farmer of Manhattan, Kan., is president of the body. Stanley F. Morse, South Caroline farmer and consulting agriculturist, is executive vice president and Chris J. Abbott, Nebraska stockman and farmer, and Clyde O. Patterson, Illinois Jersey breeder, were incorporators. Dr. Charles W. Burkett, agricultural authority of New York and formerly director of the Kansas agricultural experiment station, and L. G. Tolles, farmer and past master of the Connecticut State Grange, are other vice presidents of the council, and Dr. E. V. Wilcox, representative of the Country Gentleman, District of Columbia, is secretary-treasurer; Fred L. Crawford, Michigan congressman and farm owner; E. E. Dorsett, farmer and past master Pennsylvania State Grange, and Kurt Greenwald, farm manager and agricultural engineer, New York, are directors.

"To me there is but one issue, whether we are going to have a constitutional government or have a dictatorial regime," said Charles E. Collins, Colorado cattleman and president of the American National Live Stock association, regional vice president of the new organization.



Sec'y Wallace

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace has changed his mind about the reduction of wheat acreage for 1936. Instead of asking the farmers for a cut of 15 per cent, as was announced recently, the figure is now placed at 5 per cent.

Wallace told reporters that the change was decided upon after the government's August 1 survey of crop conditions indicated that total wheat production this year would amount to only 608,000,000 bushels as compared with domestic requirements of 635,000,000 bushels.

The step was taken, he asserted, to assure ample supplies for domestic consumers. He said that it was expected to place the country in a "strengthened position" in the export market. He added the change in policy will not result in any marked reduction in benefit payment to farmers. He did not say what the exact reductions in the payments would amount to.

AAA officials estimated that approximately 52,000,000 acres would be placed under contract this year. They asserted that the government is given "adequate powers" to deal with the situation if a bumper wheat harvest should result in 1936.

WHEN the President's social security bill was finally enacted into law, the senate adopting the conference report already agreed to by the house, probably many thousands of men and women all over the country began figuring on the pensions they would receive under its terms. It is unlikely that one in a thousand has any clear idea of how the new program's pension system will work, so we reprint here a neat summary prepared by the Associated Press showing its operation as applied to "Bill Jones":

"Suppose young Bill is twenty when the law goes into effect and makes an average monthly salary of $100 until he is sixty-five. He will get a monthly pension, until his death, of $53.75.

"In detail, here is what will happen to him:

"In the calendar years 1937, 1938, and 1939 he will pay a salary tax of 1 per cent, or a total of $36 for the three years. In 1940, 1941, 1942 he will pay 1½ per cent, or $54. In 1943, 1944, and 1945 the tax will be 2 per cent, or $72. In 1946, 1947, and 1948 the tax will be 2½ per cent, or $90. From 1949 to 1981, inclusive, the tax will be 3 per cent, or a total of $1,188.

"Thus, in 45 years, Bill Jones will have paid in $1,440. All the time his employer will have been matching his tax payments, so the total paid to the federal treasury will be $2,880.

"At sixty-five Bill Jones can expect to live perhaps 10 years more. If he does, he will get back $6,450.

"When Bill Jones dies this is what will happen:

"His average annual salary will be multiplied by the number of years he paid taxes. In other words, if he dies after he has paid taxes for 45 years, $1,200 will be multiplied by 45—giving a total of $54,000. Arbitrarily, the bill stipulates that Bill Jones' estate shall be entitled to 3½ per cent of that, or $1,890—less any amount he received in pensions before he died.

"If Jones dies before he gets back $1,890 in pensions, what he actually received is deducted from $1,890 and the remainder paid to his heirs. If he lives until he gets back all of the $1,890 and more, his heirs get nothing.

"If Jones should die before he reaches sixty-five, his heirs would be entitled to a payment of 3½ per cent of the total wages on which taxes had been paid."

COUNTY-WIDE SCREW WORM CONTROL MEETINGS HELD

County-wide meetings were held last week on the Screw Worm Control campaign in Alabama. Meetings were held in Pickens, Tuscaloosa, Chilton, Shelby, Talladega, Tallapoosa and Lee Counties. All the counties were well represented at these meetings and those present were vitally interested.

During the week of August 19 to 23, meetings will be held in Chambers, Randolph, Clay, Cleburne, Calhoun, Cherokee, Etowah and Dekalb counties.

By holding these meetings it is intended to familiarize the citizens and livestock owners adjacent to the northern border line of the present screw worm infested territory and along the Georgia-Alabama line, due to the fact that this pest has appearred in all the border counties in Georgia as far north as the Tennessee line. While the infestation has been light in Alabama thus far this season, indications point toward a heavier infestation and spread of this pest. It is also intended to hold these county-wide meetings in the most of the counties in North Alabama as soon as possible..

Those conducting these meetings and delivering the talks in cooperation with the various County Agricultural Agents are Mr. T. F. McGehee, State Supervisor, Dr. W. E. White, Assistant State Supervisor, and Mr. L. L. Ferris, District Supervisor, of Alabama. It is probable that Dr. W. E. Dove, Director of Screw Worm Control, in the Southeast, will be present at some of the meetings this week.

DR. J. I. RIDDLE RETURNED

Dr. J. I. Riddle, of the Alabama College faculty, has returned to the campus following a month's vacation trip. During that time he was a speaker at four conferences: The Southern Baptist Sunday School Convention at Massanetta Springs, Virginia and the Florida State Baptist Sunday School Convention at Stetson University, Florida.

Sent by Napoleon to his stepson, 364 letters were sold recently in London for $11,550.

Drouth Broken By Rains Over State

Auburn, Ala.—The drouth which hovered over Alabama since the middle of July has been broken. Rains have fallen recently in every division of the state, according to official weather station reports, indicating that only small dry areas now occur. In one 24-hour period rains were reported at 16 of the 17 official stations in the state; and the forecast at the end of the week was for cloudy weather and showers throughout Alabama.

But the drouth was not broken until severe damage was done to cotton, corn, and other crops in season. Heaviest losses occurred north of Birmingham, where the condition of growing crops subjected them to injury by unfavorable weather.

County Agent, John W. Pate, in a telegraphic report, estimated that the DeKalb County corn crop was reduced 1-3; cotton, 1-5, while pastures were completely parched before a general rain fell Thursday night and Friday.

Both cotton and corn lost down in Chilton County, as reported by County Agent J. W. Fant. Early corn especially suffered.

Corn in Jefferson County, according to County Agent J. L. Liles, took a severe penalty, while cotton apparently deteriorated considerably. Truck crops, too, not only failed to gain but lost ground rapidly during the first half of August.

H. R. Bailey reported that corn and hay crops in the northern and western half of Limestone County were almost completely lost by the sweltering rays of the sizzling sun in July and August. Cotton withstood these conditions better than corn and hay crops but it, too, was damaged. Immature bolls opened. "Many farmers throughout the county," said Mr. Bailey, estimate the drouth this year is more severe than the drouth in 1930. They base this statement on the fact that crops were planted extremely late in the drouth area. Garden and truck crops over the entire county are completely burned up."

The latest reports do not indicate the extent to which Lauderdale and Limestone Counties have received rains the last two days. Other counties in the Tennessee Valley have been assessed a heavy penalty by the unfavorable Summer weather.

Substantial deterioration in Calhoun County cotton was reported by County Agent S. R. Doughty. The outlook there two weeks ago was unusually good, but not so promising at present," added Mr. Doughty.

The majority of the county agents believe that recent rains have come too late to retrive losses except with late planted crops, which represent only a minor portion of the total.

In the South half of the state cotton was nearer maturity before dry days combined with torrid sunshine began exacting a toll. Consequently cotton in that division of the state promises a normal yield. C. M. Ling, county agent, has estimated the size of the 1935 cotton crop in Houston County to be equal to or larger than that of 1934.

Cotton picking is in progress in the south two-thirds of the state. During the first half of August bolls opened at an abnormally rapid rate; and, as in former years, cotton picking is following closely the opening of bolls.

Gins are humming and sales are being made. Most cotton below Montgomery is all ready open. With cooler weather farmers will work from early morning until late afternoon picking, ginning, and marketing cotton. While rains have covered most of the state it is expected that there still are a good many dry spots, which is usual for summer weather in Alabama.

Pessimistic outlook for farming in Tuscaloosa County this year is pictured by A. W. Jones, county agent. Weather for the last four weeks has been very detrimental to growing crops, said the county agent. Lack of rain and high temperature made a combination which was too severe for crops to withstand and develop normally. Cotton, corn and other crops were injured accordingly.

"Corn," said Mr. Jones, "has probably been the greatest sufferer. We have a number of farmers who will not make enough corn for feed and food to last until January 1. Hay has also been cut short. Cotton is opening prematurely, the bolls being small and poorly developed. Recent rains scattered over the country brought partial relief but not enough to recover losses all ready incurred."

Girl Scout News

Announcement has come to the local girl scout council of the twenty-first annual convention of girl scouts, which convenes in San Francisco, California, Hotel Fairmont, October 2, 3 and 4, 1935.

The national president's call to convention follows:

Dear Girl Scouts:

The months slip by so fast it seems impossible to realize that I must remind you of another convention, and what a convention this will be!

For the first time we are going to the West Coast to meet with all our friends who live among the big trees and on the shores of the Pacific Ocean.

I never feel I have to urge anyone to go to our conventions. I simply have to tell you that it is almost time for the twenty-first annual meeting of the national council.

Our hostesses are the members of the San Francisco Council, and the whole Big Tree Region is ready to give us a warm welcome. So strap your packs to your backs for the trek across our glorious country, to add one more picture to your already full gallery of memories and one more adventure to the many we have had together.

Your national board of directors and I will be in San Francisco to greet you. The program will be interesting and much is being planned for your pleasure. — Very sincerely yours, Birdsall Otis Eden, President.

The adult membership groups will meet September thirtieth and October first for preconvention training. These groups are divided as follows: 1. Council members in five sections, based on council classification and length of membership. 2. Troop committee members. 3. Local directors. 4. Leaders of Brownie Packs. 5. Leaders of girl scout troops in seven sections, divided according to special interests and activities.

The convention proper begins on Wednesday morning, October 2, and for three days there will be a round of interesting speakers, fourteen round tables under direction of Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreath, chairman of the national personnel committee, pageants, interspersed with varied social functions.

A post convention feature will be the visits with councils in and around San Francisco. This trip would give visitors opportunity to see the International exposition in San Deigo, as well as enjoy other interesting trips that the west affords.

NOTICE TO COTTON FARMERS

The Internal Revenue Department says: When a farmer gins a bale of cotton, the bale must be settled for at that time, either by exemption certificate, the tax paid, in cash, or a lien card attached to the bale.

In order to comply with this provision, and to avoid confusion and delay, it is absolutely necessary that all farmers, when they bring a bale of cotton to the gin, also bring their exemption certificates, properly signed.

If the farmer does not have his certificate at the gin, it will be necessary to place lien card on the bale. Then in order to secure certificate and bale tag, it would be required that the farmer send his book of certificates to the Internal Revenue Collector at Birmingham, and bale tag and certificate would be issued direct from that office to him.

We wish to say further that our gin has been repaired and is now ready for ginning. We take great care to see that the lint is not cut in order to make the longest staple possible.

VOLUME 3, NUMBER 23 MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA. THURSDAY, AUGUST 29. 1935 SUBSCRIPTION $1.50 PER YEAR

WORK STARTED ON BRIDGE JOB

LABOR EXPENDITURE EXPECTED TO COST ABOUT $34,000

Work started Monday on the $85,000 grade crossing elimination project at Montevallo. Although only 25 are now working, the total is expected to reach 200 as the job progresses.

The State Highway Department awarded contracts to C. J. Kershaw Contracting Company and Wade & Company, both Birmingham firms, for this construction. Labor for this undertaking is expected to cost about $34,000, the remainder of the allotment to go for material. Most of these materials will be purchased in the Birmingham and Bessemer districts, 200 tons of structure steel having been contracted for with Nashville Bridge Company, Bessemer; 95 tons reinforcing steel, Truscon Steel Company, and 2,000 barrells of cement, National Cement Company, with offices in Birmingham and a plant at Ragland, Alabama.

Mr. Jack Burleson, engineer of the State Highway Department, has already made preliminary surveys and set the stakes for locating the bridge. Mr. Burleson will be here during the progress of the work as supervising engineer for the State.

Recently he was in charge of paving a portion of the Selma Highway out of Clanton. Prior to that he was engaged in supervising the short section of paving out of Calera toward Montevallo.

COTTON LOANS VIA AAA PLAN

TEXT OF PLANS AS ANNOUNCED FROM WASHINGTON MONDAY

Washington, Aug. 26.—Here is the text of the AAA's announcement on Monday on cotton loans:

"The objective of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has been to get an average return of at least 12 cents for the producers of seven-eighths inch middlng cotton.

"The plan announced last week would have obtained this result but further study shows that certain modfications of this plan will make it simpler to understand and more equitable to individual growers and will make clear to each producer when he markets his cotton the exact amount he will receive for it.

"Under the previous plan it would have been possible for growers of seven-eighths inch low middling cotton to receive, because of government aid, more than 12 cents per pound for their crop, and also for some to receive less than 12 cents per pound. The new plan proposes a loan of 10 cents per pound for seven-eighths inch low middling cotton or better and the total received cannot exceed 12 cents per pound. It will make more certain the amount each grower will receive for his cotton.

"Instead of making the adjustment payment on the basis of the four-months average of the 10-point spot markets, this adjustment agreement will now be based on the daily average of the 10-point spot markets. In other words the adjustment payment will be made on the basis of the 10-point spot market average on the actual day the cotton is sold by the producer.

"These adjustment payments will be made through the cotton year up to August 1, 1936. As before stated they will be made to those producers who have cooperated in the adjustment program and who agreed to participate in the 1936 crop program.

"This program of loans and adjustment on the 1935 crop will go into effect as soon as it is physically possible to set up the new machinery. The loan forms will be available for the 10-cents loan during the week of September 2. This will be restricted to actual production not in excess of the Bankhead allotments.

"The adjustment payments will apply to all sales of 1935 cotton, including those already made."

To our subscribers in Montevallo and surrounding community we wish to say that we hope you will respond to the opportunity that will be afforded you to subscribe for your local newspaper, and at the same time contribute liberally to the splendid program that is being put forward by the Parent-Teachers in behalf of our schools.

Corner locations must be 120 x 170 feet; interior locations 145 x 170 feet. It is stated in the official notice that sites having a different street frontage than above will be considered, provided the area is approximately the same.

Bids on property offered for sale to the government under this notice will be opened publicly in the office of the Postmaster at Montevallo at 9 o'clock a.m., on next Tuesday, September 3. Upon application Postmaster Wilson will supply prospective bidders with blanks and circulars giving all particuars.

TO RESURFACE SHELBY'S ROAD

ANNOUNCEMENT OF PLANS MADE FROM STATE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

Unofficial advice was received Tuesday from Washington at WPA headquarters, of approval of the reconstruction and repaving of the approximately 22 3-4 miles of the Bee Line Highway (U. S. No. 31) that traverses Shelby County, which has become so rough motor traffic of every description passing over it has to slow down to a low rate of speed.

The surfacing placed on this road was laid during the administration of the late former Gov. W. W. Brandon, and was one of the first high type bituminous paving projects to be carried out in Alabama. According to engineers it has become rough through settlement since it was laid, and the change in volume, of the natural soil composing its base.

Plans for repaving which it is estimated will, with relief labor, call for the expenditure of from $175,000 to $200,000, contemplate resurfacing of the present paving with bituminous material, and the widening of the shoulders on either side of the roadway, also widening of the roadway itself from its present width of 18 feet, to 20 feet, wherever adequate rights of way are obtained by the county.

The project, it is stated, is one that lends itself readily to the utilizing of relief labor, as limestone to be used in the resurfacing is available along the roadside, and quarrying and crushing the stone will give employment to a large number of men. As soon as necessary rights of way are secured by the county, crews will begin clearing and widening operations preparatory to repaving, it was announced.

All work on the project will be under the direction supervision of the State Highway Department, acting in cooperation with the WPA. Cost of the reconstruction and repaving will be borne jointly by the WPA and the Highway Department, the latter's contribution being funds that would be made available for maintenance of the section of road to be improved.

The fire was supposed to have caught from the kitchen range, for the first signs of fire were seen by the neighbors in the kitchen. Among the many who rushed to the scene with their assistance, hoping to save the structure were the Boy Scouts, with their scoutmaster, Hoye Splawn. They were unable to save the house but gave their untiring service in helping others to save several cords of stove wood and about ten tons of coal. They organized bucket brigades, drawing water from nearby wells to pour on the blaze. The Montevallo fire truck arrived during the fire and gave their assistance. All the furniture except that in the kitchen was saved. We extend our sympathy to the family in the loss of their home.

The Internal Revenue Department says: When a farmer gins a bale of cotton, the bale must be settled for at that time, either by exemption certificate, the tax paid, in cash, or a lien card attached to the bale.

In order to comply with this provision, and to avoid confusion and delay, it is absolutely necessary that all farmers, when they bring a bale of cotton to the gin, also bring their exemption certificates, properly signed.

If the farmer does not have his certificate at the gin, it will be necessary to place lien card on the bale. Then in order to secure certificate and bale tag, it would be required that the farmer send his book of certificates to the Internal Revenue Collector at Birmingham, and bale tag and certificate would be issued direct from that office to him.

We wish to say further that our gin has been repaired and is now ready for ginning. We take great care to see that the lint is not cut in order to make the longest staple possible.

To Will Rogers

By S. L. Gibson, Verbena, Ala.

After reading one of Will Rogers' wise and witty items about four weeks ago, the following idea of appreciation of him came to me and I wrote and sent the verses to him at Beverly Hills.

It seems strange that this notion occurred to me so short a time before his sad death. I received a letter of appreciation from Mr. Rogers' secretary August 10, saying he had filed my verses for Mr. Rogers until his return from the Northern trip with Post.

It is a terrible blow to the world that Will Rogers will return from his trip with happy voice stilled—with kindly eyes closed to us forever and with versatile mind inactive.

Had I the means I'd find a hill
Whose summit reached the blue,
And build thereon of solid rock
A monument to you,
Whose wisdom true and humor rare
Have blest a struggling race,
Whose wholesome wit so full of grit
Is lined in your kindly face
They've builded shafts to generals
Whose chief aims were to kill
Men who knew not why they fought
Nor bore no man ill will;
I wish that this great nation
Would means enough employ
To build a memory high and strong
To you who brings us joy;
But even tho' they never raise
A stone to honor you,
You've made a mark in our hearts
Which ever will be new;
Now may the great director
Of all life's mystery plays
Stand guard by you and keep you
Thro' all earth's fleeting days,
And may you fertile mind and heart
Continue dealing cheer,
And may your choice of happiness
Be yours while you are here;
And when you've thrown your last rope
And flown your finish mile,
May the Big Chief say "Come Higher, Will,"
You made My people smile.

Many Educational Exhibits at Fair

Birmingham, Ala. — Colleges and schools throughout the State of Alabama are busy these days working on exhibits which they will present to the public in the educational department at the Alabama State Fair to be held at Birmingham for six days and six nights from September 23 to 28.

Dr. Walter B. Jones, state geologist, assisted by Mr. David L. DeJarnette, curator of the Alabama Museum of Natural History, will be in charge of the University of Alabama exhibits, which promise to be some of the outstanding exhibits of the educational department.

One of the Alabama University exhibits will be a display of Flourescent minerals which possess a peculiar quality to be found only in a very few minerals in the entire world. Under ultra-violet rays used for detecting these minerals, ordinary looking rocks emit beautiful colors—some a glowing purple, others a golden yellow and so on. Many of the dyes used in dyeing textiles possess flouresce and should you be wearing an article that has been dyed with a flourescent it will change its hues under these rays.

From a scientific standpoint the discovery of detecting flourescent through ultra-violet rays is of great value for it enables the scientist to detect these flourescent minerals in rocks without having to send them to a chemist.

It is said that the exhibit is as weird as it is strangely beautiful. The University of Alabama will also display the various kinds of minerals to be found in the state of Alabama, including coal, iron ores, gold-bearing rocks, tin ores, mica sheets, marble etc. Still another display by the University will be an exhibit of live snakes.

There will also be other colleges and schools of the state which will be represented by unusual displays.

New Game and Fish Department Requires License for Dog Trainers

Montgomery, Ala.—The new Swift Act, setting up a state conservation board and changing the name of the department of game and fisheries to the Department of Conservation of Game, Fish and Seafoods, requires all persons engaged in the business of training dogs in Alabama to procure a $5.00 dog trainer's license.

The new law provides that:

"All persons engaging in the business of training dogs for hunting or field trial purposes for remuneration or profits, shall first procure a dog trainer's license from the Commissioner of Conservation and pay for same in the sum of five ($5.00) dollars, such license to be procured and such fees to be deposited in like manner as provided for other licenses set forth in this act.

"Any person in this state who trains dogs for hunting or field trial purposes for remuneration or profit without first procuring from the Commisisoner of Conservation a dog trainer's license shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifteen ($15.00) dollars not more than twenty-five ($25.00) dollars for each offense."

The sequin was a Venetian gold coin, first minted about 1280. It was worth about nine shillings.

PRESIDENT CHALLENGES OLD ORDER AND CHALLENGES YOUTH OF NATION

In his radio address to the people of the United States last Saturday night, President Roosevelt rapped sharply at "tories" and "the reactionaries of 1935," and urged American youth of all parties to "Unite and challenge" the methods of the old order.

Seated at a desk in the White House, two microphones before him, the president spoke primarily to the Convention of the Young Democrats in Milwaukee, but also to the nation at large.

"Rules are not necessarily sacred—principles are," he said. "The methods of the great order are not, as some would have you believe, above the challenge of youth."

The Chief Executive asserted at the outset that, despite reports to the contrary, his address would not be devoted to answering his political critics, but would, he said, employ the same words as if he were addressing a convention of the youth of the Republican party. Manifestly, the president made a noble effort to pitch the tone of his address to the tune of the future of our nation, regardless of politics.. How well he succeeded in this effort will be a question for the dissection and analyzation of many critics, friend and foe.

Hitting again and again at those he said were "united in standing still on the same old spot," he spoke in general terms of a need to improve social conditions, health and security, financial and economic machinery and government. He did not refer directly to any of the work of the adjoining congress.

"Facts are relentless," he said. "We must adjust our ideas to the facts today."

Including his final "challenge to "the youth of America of all parties," he said:

"Let us carry on the good that the past gave us. The best of that good is the spirit of America. And the spirit of America is the spirit of enquiry, of readjustment, of improvement, above all a spirit in which youth can find the fulfillment of its ideals.

"It is for the new generation to participate in the decisions and to give strength and spirit and continuity to our government and to our national life."

"The rules that govern the relationship between an employer and an employe in the blacksmith's shop in the days of Washington," he said, "cannot, of necessity govern the relationship between the 50,000 employes of a great corporation and the infinitely complex and diffused ownership of the corporation."

His "horse and buggy" reference was made at a press conference at which he criticized the Supreme Court's overthrow of the NRA and hinted at the possibility of a new constitutional amendment.

Continuing from the "blacksmith" analogy, he spoke then of the need of labor being allowed to choose its representatives to "bargain collectively in their behalf." And next of the modern need for protecting investors in huge corporations who might otherwise "be exploited" without their knowledge.

COTTON, HOT BISCUITS AND COLLARD GREENS

There would seem to be no reason to doubt that the senators from the cotton states believed they had positive assurances from the administration that our cotton would be pegged at 12 cents a pound.

But instead it is pegged at 9 cents with a pledge to reimburse part of the growers for part of their crop if the price in 10 spots markets should be less than 12 cents. Instead of offering to lend 12 cents outright, as last year, the government offers to give growers—that is, some growers—the difference between 9 and 12 cents.

There is little or no difference in principle in the two policies. If cotton sells on the market for less than the loan price, the government, that is, all of the American people, must contribute the difference outright. When government guarantees a fixed price the guarantee is valid.

Clark Howell, editor of The Atlanta Constitution, says it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to understand what the government means to do about all cotton that does not sell for 9 cents.

More than one critic has said that the plan is "confusing," and so it is. Certainly only those will benefit who have contracts with the government to observe their allotment contracts under the Bankhead act. Most growers have contracts, but not all of them have.

The Department of Agriculture and the Credit Corporation profess to believe that under the Wallace plan the cotton growers should realize $700,000,000 for their cotton and seed this year, which, to be sure, is substantially more than they received last year—naturally of course, since the crop this year is likely to be a million bales more than last.

Cotton senators and cotton growers generally are embittered at the administration because of the failure of the latter to peg cotton at 12 cents, and the force of this bitterness was expressed in the Senate yesterday afternoon when it passed a bill authorizing a 12-cent loan. At the time this editorial was written the House had not had opportunity to pass upon the hurry-up bill, but the action of the senate alone is in fact a sharp rebuke to the administration.

It is only fair to say that there is a great deal of intelligent and patriotic opinion, even in the cotton belt, to support the judgement of the administration.

There is, in fact, a growing demand for a gradual lessening of governmental control and subsidy so that cotton prices may seek their natural level in world markets. Many thoughtful people believe that in the end we shall have to adopt the policy of subsidizing the half of our cotton crop that is sold in high price America and leaving the other half free to compete with our natural economic enemies abroad who are growing increasing amounts of cotton, this half to be sold for such prices as it can command.

They do not believe that even with the Federal treasury back of the cotton South the latter can continue to control world prices and so save the southern cotton grower from poverty.

Manifestly Uncle Sam is not himself a cotton consumer. He is a good first-aid man to have around, but he cannot, in the nature of things, go on forever subsidizing an uneconomic industry.

This is bad medicine to swallow, but all of us know it is the truth.

But the depression has not yet spent itself by any means, and emergency measures are still in order. We do not know of any more effective means of soften the rigors of the depression in the cotton south than by paying 12 cents a pound for middling cotton, even though some of the money will have to be donated by taxpayers instead of consumers.

We are still building levees with greenbacks against the flood of misery that oozes from the world depression, an affliction which is likely at any moment to become more acute because nobody—but the British—has yet found a way to shave the War God against his will.

A dollar a week increase in income makes a big difference in the South, Mr. Roosevelt. It means in thousands of instances flour biscuits for breakfast on Sunday morning, in some instances flour biscuits every morning of the week.

Well placed men, such as presidents and their bureaucrats, to say nothing of $10,000-a-year senators and congressmen, do not know what a luxury a flour biscuit in the cotton South is to thousands of believing Americans.

Naturally they have no way of knowing what it means to eat corn bread, syrup, sow-belly and collards every day of the year in the growing season—to be sure, there are no collards except in the growing season, and even in the growing season they are not the food of kings.

Well-placed men, especially in high official position, do not realize how little sense and enterprise the lower order of cotton farmer in the south has. He lacks the imagination to see the need of and the spirit to enforce the principle of a balanced agricultural economy.

He could grow two vegetable gardens a year, but he won't do it, and everybody knows he won't do it, except under pressure.

Out of these two gardens he could can enough vegetables and fruits to give him the vitamins and the flavors he needs in all seasons.

He could keep a cow with more udder than horns, but he lacks the character necessary to make him do it.

He could keep chickens to provide choice dishes for his table, including eggs, but he rarely keeps enough of them, and those he keeps are of inferior quality.

This is a hog country—here in Alabama, with our numerous streams—we can grow hogs more cheaply than almost any other state, but the shiftless man on the farm—sometimes he is colored, sometimes he is white—rarely thinks of growing enough hogs to provide him with the meat he eats.

This shiftless type of man whom we know so well hates cows, hogs, chickens, and vegetables, and apparently loves only houseflies, mosquitoes and hookworm larvea.

But in fact he loves cotton and believes in his Bible, although it has failed him more often than his Bible has failed him.

Nevertheless this type of farmer will spend all he gets the moment he gets it.

What we need in this country is greater spending power. We need a spending power widely diffused. The best way to get quick results with "cheap" Federal money is to pour it into the pockets of those who must spend immediately or starve.

The way to create an enormous buying power in the cotton south immediately is to put money into the pockets of the men and women who grow our cotton—big money; that is, if we are genuinely interested in "relief," as well as "recovery."

We are for a 12-cent loan, on general principles, but we are for it under condition that we may keep a long tongue buried in a high cheek.

At all events we are against human misery in the cotton fields of the South.—Montgomery Advertiser.

SIXTH DISTRICT CONTEST

Quite the most arresting political item of the day is that to the effect that Rear Admiral Richmond Pearson Hobson will become a candidate for congress from the Sixth Alabama district in case Representative W. B. Oliver's health prevents him from serving longer in the house. Admiral Hobson was a major political figure in Alabama a quarter century go when he served in congress from 1907 to 1915 and then made a memorable but unsuccessful race for the senate against Oscar W. Underwood.

The Sixth district promises to become a lively place politically in case Mr. Oliver decides not to run again. Hubert Baughn in the Birmingham Post publishes a list of the potential candidates including Hobson. He mentions Thomas E. Knight, Pete Jarman, J. J. Mayfield, Jr., and Ed Livingston.

Contests for congress in several other districts promise to be spirited next year, and through 1936 will be what is known as an off year in Alabama politics, it promises to be anything but an off year so far as public interest is concerned, with congressmen, a senator and delegates to be chosen.—Alabama Journal.

FLYING WILL NOT STOP

Hollywood is more dramatic than wise. Now is it thinking seriously of forbidding any of its actors to ride in airplanes except when making pictures. But each actor may own two or three automobiles, although 30,000 Americans die annually in automobile accidents, while many thousand more are maimed. We can neither prevent the use of modern transportation machinery nor prevent fatal accidents.—Montgomery Advertiser.

President's Program Driven Through Congress Before Adjournment—Mussolini Refuses to Abandon His Projected Conquest of Ethiopia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

LEGISLATIVE action in both house and senate was fast and furious during the closing days of the session. White House pressure was freely used; filibusters were started and stopped; senators and representatives, hot and bothered, were inclined to be quarrelsome. But congress had its orders and it wanted to go home, so the administration program in general was pushed through.

Senator Guffey

One of the most controversial measures on that program, the Guffey coal bill, had been driven through the house by orders from above and threats of a strike, and when it was taken up by the senate every effort to kill it, by eliminating the tax feature, was defeated. During the debate Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, Democrat, created a sensation by denouncing the bill in these words:

"Outside of political circles, it is questionable whether there are five reputable lawyers in the United States who would declare this measure constitutional. However, that is not the worst feature of the bill. The worst feature is the defect and infirmity in the legislative program that we are developing. This nation cannot remain free and happy, if we are to legislate for groups, and beyond all of that, if groups are to legislate for themselves the end of things is not very far distant.

"That is the situation we have confronting us. And to this kind of program the Democratic party is willing to commit itself!"

Senator George was assailing the proposal to set up district boards in the coal industry, which would make their own laws as to trade practices and regulate wages and hours, allocate tonnages and fix prices, with regard only for their own interests.

"This is the type of absolutism from which we revolted to establish this Republic," he declared.

The house gave up the fight against the "death sentence" in the utilities bill and instructed conferees to accept a "compromise" that was pretty much one-sided. This means that all holding companies beyond the second degree are to be sentenced to death by the SEC promptly after January 1, 1938. Even a holding company in the second degree would not escape unless its operations were confined to a single integrated system within a state or within contiguous states.

Both senate and house adopted a resolution making mandatory the embargo on munitions shipments to both belligerents in case of war. This was what the administration did not want, claiming it would tie the hands of the executive so that he could exert no influence toward averting war.

Senate and house accepted the conferees' report on the bill increasing the powers of TVA and legalizing that body's past actions and it was sent to the White House. The senate passed without a record vote the railway bankruptcy amendments recommended by Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman, which are designed to prohibit minorities from blocking reorganization plans.

MUSSOLINI is determined to conquer Ethiopia, and all Europe is trembling. Il duce evidently feels that his personal prestige is at stake, and to him that means the continuation of the Fascist regime. Anthony Eden and Pierre Laval offered Italy what would amount to a mandate over Haile Selassie's realm, but that was not enough, so the tri-power conference in Paris was declared adjourned. The friendship between France and Italy must be ruptured. Great Britain will insist on action by the League of Nations council when it meets September 4. There is no reason to believe that the council will do more than it did in the case of Japan's seizure of Manchuria, but it seemingly will be forced to denounce Italy's action, and that would be enough to induce Mussolini to withdraw his country from the league. If and when Italy defies the league, that pretentious body, previously defied successfully by Japan and Germany, will amount to little.

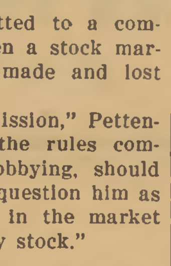
Premier Mussolini

After Baron Pompei Aloisi had submitted the Anglo-French proposition to Mussolini and had received the duce's reply, he told Eden and Laval that his master would be satisfied with nothing less than "annexation of Ethiopia in whole or in part." Laval was furious and directly accused Mussolini of breaking a personal promise made to him when he visited Rome. Eden abruptly brought the conference to a close.

Hurrying back to London, Captain Eden took part in conferences held by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and the members of his cabinet, together with various former ministers, opposition leaders and public men not in office. The situation was admittedly tense and the advice of such men as Lloyd George, Lord Cecil and Winston Churchill was sought by the government. Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, also called in representatives of all the self-governing dominions. It was understood the British government would be prepared fully to honor its obligations under the League of Nations covenant, these including the denouncing of a nation that attacks another member of the league. Of course the air in London was full of rumors of war, but officials gave assurance that Great Britain would move with the greatest caution.

Paris heard unconfirmed reports that Mussolini was trying to negotiate a secret military alliance with Hitler. If such a pact is signed it will greatly increase the chances of another general European war.

SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL, Democratic representative from Indiana, aroused the house to wild cheering by a downright attack on Tom Corcoran, the White House lobbyist who has been charged with trying to intimidate congressmen. Pettengill challenged the house lobby committee to summon Corcoran again and question him about his reported dealing in utility issues on the New York Stock exchange market at the same time he labored for legislation against utilities at Washington.



T. G. Corcoran

The Indiana representative thus brought out into the open the rumors, whispered about the Capitol, that administration lobbyists were profiting secretly by stock market deals in securities affected by legislation for which they were exerting tremendous efforts.

Corcoran once admitted to a committee that he had been a stock market plunger and had made and lost a small fortune.

"In view of this admission," Pettengill told the house, "the rules committee, investigating lobbying, should summon Corcoran and question him as to whether he is now in the market with reference to utility stock."

GRADUALLY the President is bringing all the alphabetical units of the New Deal directly under his control by bringing them under the budget and accounting act. Thirteen of them already have been treated thus by executive order, and more will follow soon. They are required to submit to the budget bureau estimates covering expenditures and to go on a month to month spending basis. At first the heads of these various administrations resented this and blamed Secretary Morgenthau, but when they learned that the President was strong for the plan they quietly gave in.

MORE than 30,000 troops of all branches of the armed service got well started in the great war maneuvers in northern New York which were organized and directed by Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan. The regular army men of the first area and the National Guardsmen of New England, New York and New Jersey participated, and in muddy fields, tangled pine forests, backwoods roads, they had a series of "engagements," troops opposing troops under conditions closely simulating real warfare. An interesting feature was the use of a big fleet of taxicabs from New York city. Pine camp, just south of the Thousand Islands region, was the center of operations. Ranking high officers of the army and military attaches of foreign nations observed the maneuvers.

Maj. Gen. Nolan

During the opening days the Twenty-seventh New York division commanded by Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell was pitted in the eastern portion of the 100 square mile maneuver area against the Forty-third New England division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Morris B. Payne. In the western portion of the changing terrain the Forty-fourth New Jersey and New York division, commanded by Maj. Gen. John J. Toffey, opposed the Twenty-sixth Massachusetts division.

JAPAN has been offended by our navy on various occasions, especially by the staging of fleet maneuvers at Hawaii and the Alaskan coast. Now the sensitive islanders should be pleased, for Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt has announced that the fleet maneuvers of 1936 will be held at the Panama canal and on the western coast of Central America. Mr. Roosevelt and the navy high command asserted, not very convincingly, that the shift was not made in response to unofficial Japanese criticism.

IN ONE of those sudden governmental upsets frequent in Latin America, President Jose M. Velasco Ibarra of Ecuador was thrown out of office and Antonio Pons, former premier, was put in his place. It all came about because Ibarra tried to make himself a dictator and imprisoned the leaders of the opposition. The senate objected and Ibarra closed congress. Then the army got into action. Ibarra was arrested by Col. Nicanor Solis, inspector general; the political prisoners were released, and Pons was installed as president.

WILL ROGERS and Wiley Post, crushed to death in Alaska when their plane fell not far from Point Barrow, were brought back to the states for burial by Joe Crosson, their intimate friend, in an airplane. And all their countrymen stood figuratively with bared and bowed heads as the broken bodies were laid to rest. None was too great and none too lowly to pay tribute in words and action to those two fine Americans, one a beloved comedian, humorist and philosopher; the other a leader among the world's aviators. They died as they had lived, adventuring gallantly, and the world is the poorer for their passing.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S cotton textile committee submitted to him certain recommendations to better the industry, and he passed them on to congress for future action. Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper heads the committee and the other members are Secretary of Labor Perkins, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Secretary of State Hull. The report proposed that a friendly agreement be sought with Japan to limit the export of textiles to this country. The committee found that, although the Japanese imports have been small, the American market has been disturbed, with a resultant depression in the industry here.

Secretary Roper

A continuance of the labor standards provided under the NRA code was suggested. To this end it was recommended that the government supplement such voluntary efforts as are being made by administrative and legislative measures which may be feasible to aid workers.

The committee recommended against discontinuance of the cotton processing tax "during the existing economic emergency as reflected by existing price disparities." It held that the tax increases the purchasing power of farmers and thus benefits workers in the cotton textile industry.

The government's cotton loan policy was found to be primarily important to the textile industry through its possible stabilizing effect.

Various technical recommendations were made by the report, but the proposition of representatives of the industry that the government virtually subsidize cotton textile exports by an allowance of 7 cents per pound was disapproved.

MINORITY members of the senate and house committees that are investigating the doing of lobbyists started out the week with the determination to find out why Marvin H. MacIntyre, secretary to the President; Lawrence W. Robert, Jr., assistant secretary of the treasury, and Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth, publisher and friend of the Roosevelt family, were all found in the apartment at the Shoreham hotel of Bernard B. Robinson of Chicago, chief lobbyist of the Associated Gas and Electric company. Mr. Robinson himself also was there, and it was said when the door was opened at the knock of the sergeant at arms of the senate a "scene of revelry" was disclosed. For a day or two the news of this affair was not sent out from Washington by the news associations, reportedly because of the efforts of Mr. Carter to have it suppressed entirely. This, too, some of the investigators want explained.

B. B. Robinson

Republican members of the house committee also said they would insist on the interrogation of Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West and Emil Hurja, executive director of the Democratic national committee. West is reputedly the President's lobbyist and Hurja acts in a similar capacity for Postmaster General Farley, and both of them were involved with Tom Corcoran in the utilities "death sentence" lobbying that started the whole inquiry.

WHEN Charles S. Risk, the Rhode Island lawyer who defeated the New Deal candidate for congress recently, entered the house on the arm of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, and was escorted to the speaker's rostrum to take the oath, he was vociferously greeted by the Republicans as a hero whose victory they thought presaged great things for the party next year. Mr. Risk took his seat on his thirty-eighth birthday.

FLOYD B. OLSON, governor of Minnesota, on his way to Washington, stopped in Chicago long enough to tell reporters that he intended to be a candidate for the United States senate in 1936. This was interpreted as meaning that he would contest the re-election of Thomas D. Schall, the blind Republican. Governor Olson is a Farmer-Laborite.

WHO WILL MAKE UP THE LOSS?

There is one phase of government ownership of industry that has received less notice than it deserves. If states, cities or the federal government take such enterprises as the railroads and the public utilities, who is going to make up the vast taxes that these concerns now pay to all units of government?

'An advertisement of the Alabama Power Company focuses attention on this. According to the ad, the power company pays to the county and city governments in Jefferson County alone (which includes the City of Birmingham), the handsome sum of $604.000 a year in taxes. Of this amount, about $175,000 goes directly to the public schools, and represents a substantial par. of their total revenue.

At present, it is being advocated that the Tennessee Valley Authority take over all the operations in the state of Alabama, supplanting the existing private power concerns. The TVA would pay no county taxes whatsoever, and no other taxes in which the counties and their residents would share. As a result, the taxpayers of Alabama would have to make up the tax loss, and accept heavy increases in all forms of taxes now paid by them—or cut school, road or other governmental budgets.

And what would the taxpayers receive in return? They would receive—possibly—good and inexpensive electric service, which precisely what they are receiving now from the heavily taxed private utility. But, where the private utility is stringently regulated by the state, in the light of local needs and conditions, the TVA would be subjected to no local control—and would be responsive only to the whims of Washington-appointed office-holders.

Loss of tax revenue inevitably follows government acquisition of industries—whether they be acquired by the TVA, by states, by cities or by any other public body. In the long run, only the politicians benefit—while the struggling taxpayer foots the bill.

THE RURAL PRESS

There are some 15,000 newspapers and periodicals published in this country. The greatest proportion of them are small town weeklies, dailies and semi-weeklies, and magazines whose principal appeal is to the rural dweller.

The importance, the influence, and the worth of these publications can hardly be exaggerated. They are, as the San Francisco Argonaut has written, "the chief influence in the thought habits of our rural population of fifty-four million." And the character of their comment, both in news and editorial departments, well repays those who peruse them.

As a result, the recent contest held by the magazine "Country Home" to pick the best country newspaper correspondent in the United States, was of much more importance and interest than contests usually are. The winner, a woman, lives in a Missouri town which has a population of twenty-seven, and is fifteen miles from the nearest railroad. For forty-four years she has been local correspondent for a rural paper in her county..

Urban editors, on reading excerpts from her correspondence, have been amazed by its quality. It does not deal with crimes and misdemeanors. Instead it tells of the crops, of the trials, tribulations and achievements of farm people who rarely make the metropolitan headlines, but who, hppily, are more numerous and more vital to the nation than our gangsters, our political and business renegades, and our ex-show-girl divorcees.

Most interesting of all, this woman's correspondence, fine as it is, is not greatly different from that of other rural correspondents. Winners of lesser prizes in the contest show the same qualities—the same command of clear and vivid English. The country newspaper, little known as it is to the city dweller, is one of the finest, most permanent, and most deservedly successful influences in our American life. Last, but not least, it is the outstanding guardian of the nation in upholding our Constitution and American ideals.

LABOR DAY FATALITIES HIGH

The Associated Press Tuesday morning reported a total of 194 Labor Day fatalities, which was termed "the customary blight on the nation's record for motoring safety."

California headed the list of states in number of deaths, reporting 26. Alabama reported three deaths.

Compared with the number of people who traveled our highways during the Labor Day week-end vacation, 194 is a small figure. But we cannot refrain from insisting that proper caution for the safety of self and others would have reduced this death toll to its minimum, if not wholly prevented.

FAREWELL TO DR. CARMICHAEL GREETINGS TO DR. HARMAN

During the past week Montevallo, Alabama College, and, in fact, all of Alabama, have, with great reluctance, expressed farewell to Dr. O. C. Carmichael, who, for the past ten years, has been president of Alabama College. He, with his family have gone to Nashville, where he becomes Dean of the Graduate School of Vanderbilt University.

The good work done by Dr. Carmichael at Alabama College stands and will endure as a witness of his outstanding ability as an educator and administrator. The sweetness of his disposition and the sterling qualities of his character, likewse, will live in the hearts of the thousands of friends who have known him throughout the years of his activity. Himself, an Alabama man, who has served his native state in a most noble manner, by his own choice, moves to a larger field of usefulness. He carries with him the most sincere appreciation of his fellow-Alabamians, and their good wishes for his continued success.

Coming into the chair of Dr. Carmichael as president of Alabama College is Dr. A. F. Harman, another of the towering peaks of Alabama's noble array of educators. He comes here already distinguished by service to the state in many important capacities. Most recently he served a full term as state superintendent of education. He knows the eductional system of Alabama in all its minute details. He knows exactly where Alabama College should stand and function as a part of that system. His ability, genius and vision, will enable him to serve Alabama College and Alabama properly in all the mutual relationships of this, one of our most important educational institutions, with the people of Alabama.

Montevallo extends a hearty welcome to Dr. Harman. This community takes a pride in Alabama College. Our people are ever active and alert to maintain such a community spirit as will be a worthy background for the College. We assure Dr. Harman of the full and friendly interest of Montevallo in support of his administration and the continued progress of Alabama College.

COLLEGE BIDS FOR DORMITORY FUND

In the long list of bids filed with the Public Works Administration at the last hour Monday, Alabama College at Montevallo was listed as requesting allotment of $167,000 for erection of a dormitory.

The closing day for submission of bids for public projects brought a flood of applications from counties, cities and towns in all parts of Alabama.

OUR BRIDGE PROJECT IS FIRST

It is stated that the grade crossing elimination project and bridge over Shoal Creek, at Montevallo, is the first job of that classification actually to get under construction in the United States.

Further, it is pointed out that the promptness with which Alabama has cooperated with federal building programs, is the reason why this state is the first to get its works programs approved and started.

AMERICA'S TRIBUTE TO LABOR

Monday of this week was Labor Day, the occasion upon which, every year, the people of America pause to do honor and express appreciation to the working classes of people. Montevallo joined in this tribute by a holiday observed by the business houses of the city.

Those who carn their living by the work of their hands are a vast and noble army, gaining their living by honest toil, and at the same time building steadily and permanently for the progress of our country.

We are glad to have a part and a place in this vast army of workers. Those who make this newspaper possible are laborers, just as you who till our soil, run our industrial plants and factories, or build our cities and highways.

Let us face the future in the hope that friendly and sympathetic relationships may ever be maintained between labor and capital. Industry cannot survive and prosper without the laborer. Workers can not live, rear families in comfort, educate their children, without the proper recognition of their rights by capital and industry.

The future economic and social stability of our country are dependent upon an equitable solution of the mutual interests of labor and capital. "The laborer is worthy of his hire."

UNIFORM DRIVING LAWS NEEDED

One of the greatest barrers to fair and efficient enforcement of traffic laws is the lack of uniformity in the traffic codes of different states and towns.

As one traffic authority recently pointed out, when he drives from one state to another, he doesn't have to stop and change his nickels, dimes and dollars into other and different kinds of money; but, if he wishes to operate his car in accord with the law, he must at once revise his driving habits. He leaves a state where the maximum speed allowed is 40—and then must rmember that now he must hold his car down to 30. He has been accustomed to traffic lights and signs placed on corners —now they are overhead in the middle of streets where he is liable to miss seeing them entirely.

Suppose that motor car manufacturers pursued the same practices as many cities and states. Suppose a man who had been driving the Smith car wanted to trade it in for the new Jones model, and discovered that it had a different kind of transmission, required a different kind of fuel, and presented major points of difference in other respects. Such a policy would be no more absurd than is the existing policy of our governmental units in adopting traffic codes that are utterly at variance with those of a town or state 10 miles away.

The Uniform Vehicles Code and Model Municipal Ordinance, prepared by traffic experts, could and should be adopted by every town and city. This would not only give the motorists a break—it would immensely expedite the efficiency of our police and traffic patrol departments, and make an important contribution to the cause of highway safety.

Congress Quits as Long's Filibuster Kills Deficiency Appropriation—Russia Rejects America's Protest Against Communist Subversive Activities.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union

CONGRESS ended its session at midnight Monday—after the clock hands had been moved back three times—the house hilarious with refreshment, song and rustic antics, the senate furious because Huey Long of Louisiana had conducted a lone filibuster for seven hours and talked to death the third deficiency appropriation bill. This measure carried $93,000,000 tax to pay pensions to the aged, retirement pay to railroad workers and money for crippled children.

Senator Long

The Kingfish defeated all efforts to silence him and was adamant to pleas that he was cutting off funds for humanitarian purposes. He was insisting that the house be forced to vote on the cotton and wheat loan amendments to the bill which the senate had inserted but which the lower chamber had rejected. A compromise had been reached between the administration and the bloc of cotton state senators by which the cotton raisers were to get government loans of 10 cents a pound, and the wheat farmers were left out. Long would not stand for the elimination of the amendments thus arranged.

The Democratic leaders were afraid that if submitted to the house government loans not only on wheat and cotton but on other commodities would be voted at a cost of upward of $2,000,000,000.

They determined to let the appropriation bill fail rather than submit to Long's terms, although Robinson stated that information from the controller general's office indicated there would be no available funds for the social security program unless the deficiency measure were passed.

The compromise cotton plan was accepted reluctantly by the AAA, and many of the southern senators were dissatisfied with it. The senators from the wheat states were disgruntled because the wheat loan policy was completely abandoned.

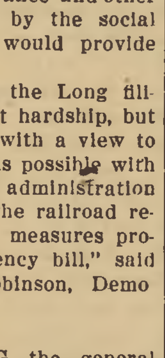
SOME of the congressional leaders lingered in Washington long enough to hold a conference with President Roosevelt and Comptroller General McCarl on ways of obtaining funds cut off by failure of the third deficiency bill. They came to the conclusion that the administrative agencies provided for in the social security act, as well as the other agencies scheduled to receive appropriations in the deficiency bill, could be set up with money either from the work relief or other unexpended funds.

However, Mr. McCarl advised, and the congressmen agreed, that grants in aid to states for old age assistance, the blind and dependent children, cannot be paid out of the work relief fund, because such activities would not create employment.

This restriction, it was concluded, would not apply to grants to states for the setting up of administrations for unemployment insurance and other activities contemplated by the social security bill, for this would provide jobs.

"It is apparent that the Long filibuster will work a great hardship, but a study is being made with a view to proceeding wherever it is possible with a preparation for the administration of the social security, the railroad retirement law and other measures provided for in the deficiency bill," said Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic leader.

NOTWITHSTANDING the general protest by newspapers against the financing of paper mill construction by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, on the ground that government control of print paper supply threatens the freedom of the press. Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC intimated that this practice may be extended and at the same time said this question was for congress to decide. He produced figures showing that 500,000 tons of paper pulp is imported annually.



Jesse Jones

"Every governmental loan to industry competes with private capital, and it is for congress to determine how long it wishes such loans made." Jones said, in a formal statement on RFC cash supplied to the Crossett Lumber company of Alabama to make paper.

Jones recalled that the house of representatives on January 29 rejected an amendment to the RFC extension bill which would have eliminated loans to paper mills. He inferred that this action gave the RFC a free hand to engage in financing of paper mills.

The application of the Crossett company is the only one received by the RFC thus far, Jones said, and added that the security behind the loan was worth $12,000,000, whereas the loan itself was for only $3,850,000. The company's previous earning record, including the last few years, assures its payment, he argued.

RECONSTRUCTION Finance corporation announced that, in order to encourage the construction of new homes and to assist the housing administration, it will buy and sell insured mortgages. Chairman Jones said a $10,000,000 revolving fund had been made available to the RFC mortgage company for this purpose. The mortgage company also was authorized to lend money to companies formed for the purpose of helping property owners pay taxes.

Jones also said that debt burdened school and reclamation districts have become eligible for loans. Advances to them will be on much the same principle as loans to aid drainage and levee districts in refinancing, he said. Both will be expected to compromise their debts with bondholders and then the corporation will refinance them on a lower level.

FRIENDLY diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia, established in November 1933, will not longer be maintained unless the Soviet government mends its ways and keeps its solemn pledges to prevent Communist organizations on its soil or under its control from plotting to overthrow the government of the United States. This was the warning handed to N. N. Krestinsky, assistant foreign affairs commissar of the U. S. S. R. by Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Moscow, whose note was written by direction of the Department of State in Washington.

Ambassador Bullitt

The language of the note was not quite so blunt as the above, but it did not mince words and its implications were not to be doubted. It said the United States "anticipates the most serious consequences if the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is unwilling, or unable, to take appropriate measures to prevent further acts in disregard of the solemn pledge given by it to the government of the United States."

Within two days the Soviet government replied, through Krestinsky, with a coldly worded note flatly "rejecting" the American protest. It was based on the old and more than dubious contention that the Moscow government is not and cannot be held responsible in any way for the doings of the Communist Internationale, and continued:

"Thus the statement about a violation by the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics of its obligations contained in the note of November 16, 1933, does not follow from the obligations assumed mutually by both parties, in view of which I cannot accept your protest and am compelled to reject it."

Krestinsky concluded by declaring the Soviet government is striving for "further development of friendly cooperation" between the Soviet union and the United States.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI, in an interview granted to the correspondent of the London Daily Mail, declared flatly:

"It should be realized without the possibility of misunderstanding that whoever applies sanctions (penalties for treaty violations) against Italy will be met by the armed hostility of our country."

The duce added that if the League of Nations voted sanctions against Italy, his country would at once leave the league.

This was enough for France, which has been sitting on the fence, trying to retain the friendship of both Italy and Great Britain. Premier Laval called the cabinet together and was empowered by it to oppose the application of sanctions by the League of Nations against Italy. He expounded to the ministers his plan to persuade the council of the league to look upon Italy's projected attack on Ethiopia as a "colonial expedition" rather than a war. This would permit the league to slide out of a situation that gravely threatens its prestige. It was understood that Laval told the cabinet England was less determined to act drastically, having realized the danger in Mussolini's stand that sanctions would mean war. He also said that the duce's agreement to present the case at Geneva indicated his desire to avoid a quarrel with the great powers or a break with the league.

So, at this writing, it appears poor Ethiopia is left to her own resources in opposing Mussolini's rapacity. His intentions were clearly stated in the interview quoted.

In reply to a direct question whether there is the slightest possibility of his changing his attitude, Mussolini replied in the negative, saying "none at all—unless Ethiopia gives in."

Opening up of the vast Ethiopian interior, he said would benefit "all civilized states." Colonization of Ethiopia by Italy would "completely fulfill all colonial aspirations of Italy."

JOHN N. WILLYS, long prominent in the automobile industry and ambassador to Poland for two years in the Hoover administration, died in New York at the age of sixty-one. He had been ill since last May when he suffered a heart attack. Mr. Willys, forced into business at eighteen by the death of his father, made his first fortune in selling bicycles. In 1908 he took over the Overland Automobile company, which was about to go into the hands of a receiver, and organized the Willys-Overland company at Indianapolis. Later he purchased the Pope-Toledo company at Toledo, Ohio, and moved the Willys-Overland plant there. He sold his automobile holdings to a syndicate in 1929, the deal involving several million dollars.

Thomas Alva Edison, Jr., eldest son of the famous inventor, died suddenly in Springfield, Mass. He was head of the research engineering department of the Edison plant at West Orange, N. J.

IN HIS radio address to the convention of Young Democrats clubs in Milwaukee President Roosevelt insisted that he was not speaking with any political motive but was saying "precisely—word for word—what I would say were I addressing a convention of the youth of the Republican party." He justified the New Deal as an intervention by government to protect and aid common men in the complex scheme of modern existence, and asserted its aim was not socialism, but regulated individualism.

Rep. Snell

Championing a philosophy of change, the President said that "rules are not necessarily sacred—principles are. The methods of the old order are not, as some would have you believe, above the challenge of youth.

"To the American youth of all parties I submit a message of confidence—unite and challenge."

Under the auspices of the Republican national committee, Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York spoke over the radio in direct reply to the President's appeal to youth—for both parties are making strenuous endeavors to capture the allegiance of the young men and women. Mr. Snell argued that a change in the Constitution abolishing rights of individual citizens would place "those who possess the power, the wealth and the cunning" in control of the government.

"Surely the youth of America," he said, "are not prepared to endorse any administration which is seeking to bring about such a condition."

JOHN G. WINANT, former governor of New Hampshire and a Republican, has been appointed chairman of the social security board, the body that will direct the part of the New Deal of which the President is proudest and which he declares is one of the outstanding social reforms in the history of the government. Mr. Winant's two associates on the board are to be Arthur J. Altmeyer of Wisconsin, who has been serving as an assistant secretary of labor, and Vincent Morgan Miles of Fort Smith, Ark., an attorney who has been associated with the Public Works administration. Each is to receive an annual salary of $10,000.

J. G. Winant

In sending his nominations to the senate the President stipulated that Winant will serve six years, Altmeyer will serve four years and Miles one year. All appointments date from last August 13 when the social security bill reached the White House.

As chairman of the new national labor relations board, operating under the Wagner act, the President named Joseph Madden, a Pittsburgh attorney. The other members appointed are John M. Carmody of New York and Edwin S. Smith of Massachusetts. J. D. Ross was nominated as a member of the securities and exchange commission, a job that it had been thought would be given to Benjamin Cohen.

APPLICATIONS for money from the four billion dollar works relief fund must be in by September 12, according to an executive order issued by the President. In addition, he directed all agencies—federal, state or municipal—to be prepared either to ask for bids or begin works operations by October 22.

The President has set November 1 as the date for putting his works program into high gear and taking all the unemployed off the relief rolls. The new orders, issued to the heads of all departments and emergency agencies, were regarded as moves to realize that goal.

JAMES A. MOFFETT has resigned as federal housing commissioner, carrying out his long expressed desire to return to private business. It was presumed in Washington that he would be succeeded by Stewart McDonald.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Moffett told the President that, despite necessary delays in getting the housing program under way, the housing administration was insuring construction and repair loans at the rate of $60,000,000 a month.

He also quoted bureau of labor statistics to show that residential building permits through the country in July had increased 214 per cent in value as compared with July, 1934. Nonresidential permits were up 18.4 per cent, he said, while alteration and repair permits had jumped 35.9 per cent.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Though E. L. F. was born here it wasn't until some out-of-town cousins came that he really got around and saw things—which is the case with a lot of New Yorkers. But let him tell about it: "Leaving the 'cross roads of the world'—which of course is Forty-second street and Broadway, we were soon in the garment district where what America wears is manufactured. It being a bit crowded there, what with tailors, buttonhole makers and bushel men taking up all the room on the sidewalks, we drove on south and reached Greenwich Village where we met the Intelligentsia—long-haired men and short-haired women—and took a look at the antiquated houses. Though some are quite ancient, being more than a century old, many are painted in all the colors that are in the rainbow which, of course, gives the effect of a grandmother daubing on a lot of rouge and trying to look like a flapper.

* * *

"Really Greenwich Village intrigued us not a little. Cubbyholes, no wider than 15 feet and no longer than 25 feet, bear signs that inform the investigator that 'the best meal in town' may be obtained there, while the liquor is unexcelled, that prices are extremely low and that 'foreign entertainers' are better than Broadway talent. Artists, writers, singers, single-taxers, no taxers and technocrats—all live along the crowded streets and infest the restaurants. The only trouble was we couldn't tell one from the other, so we went on over east, and stopping at Cooper square, took a look at the institution Peter Cooper built 'for the study of science and the advancement of knowledge.' There those with an ambition but no funds may acquire an education, at no cost, along lines they desire to follow.

* * *

"Of course, we traveled the Bowery, famed in song and story. But the Bowery lives in its past. Gone are the famous landmarks that once dotted the shabby thoroughfare and gone also are the personalities. There are no more such as Chuck Connors, Steve Brodie, who either did or didn't jump off the Brooklyn bridge; Big Mike Callahan, Christy Sullivan and others that loom large in legend just as there is no Bucket of Blood, Suicide Hall, Alligator and other saloons that figured in the unsavory history of other days. There are derelicts and smoke shops and big glasses of beer for a nickel just as there is free lunch and chairs that supply free beds, and panhandlers. Competition is so keen, however, that the really good panhandlers go uptown to Times square.

* * *

"We strolled on down to Chatham square and took a look at Chinatown. The shops attracted us, the strange vegetables, dried fish, twenty-five-year-old eggs, shark fins, etc., being second in interest only to curios, jade ornaments, cameos, thread-like chains, incense and perfume. We endeavored to figure out how some of those merchants keep track of the stocks which include a thousand or more articles, but couldn't do it. Maybe it is accomplished by means of wooden beads on wires, maybe not. Before we left Chinatown, we visited 'The Cathedral of the Underworld,' Tom Noonan's mission, which is so well known to radio listeners.

* * *

"After hurrying through East Broadway, where everything seems to be sold at a dollar down and a dollar a week, we reached the heart of the ghetto. In addition to thousands of push carts selling everything wearable, eatable, sleepable and walkable, we saw Russian emigres, Rumanian exiles and Hungarian outcasts, all engaged in trade in the land of the free and the home of the brave. Then we went over to the gas house district on First avenue where politics, pugilism and the pulpit are always at war for the mastery of the section. These three battle among themselves, but let an outsider enter and they present a united front—at least we were so told.

* * *

"Taking it all in all, we have quite a city. When the next batch of cousins come in from the sticks, I'm going to take another tour—and find out what's uptown."

HUEY P. LONG IS SHOT TO DEATH

LOUISIANA SENATOR VICTIM OF ASSASSIN'S BULLET IN STATE CAPITOL

Baton Rouge, La.—Senator Huey P. Long, 42, the farm youth who wanted to make "every man a king" and gained unprecedented power in Louisiana, died Tuesday, the victim of an assassin.

The self-styled "Kingfish," political "dictator" of Louisiana and possible presidential candidate next year, died at 4:06 a.m. (Birmingham time). His family and close political associates were at his bedside.

His death left his powerful machine, which controls practically every office in the state, without a directing head. There is no "dictator" to take his place.

While his leaders held conferences to decide what steps to take, the senator's death gave courage to his opponents, whose split into several factions had aided Long's ascent to power.

There was sadness here, the seat of the Long government. Friends and enemies alike expressed regret at his death, the sole topic of conversation in every Baton Rouge household. Many intimate with the senator showed marks of tears.

Fourteen members of the One Hundred Forty-First Field Artillery, Louisiana National Guard, from New Orleans under Capt. Edward P. Benezech, were ordered here as a guard of honor. Later a company of infantry here was given a like assignment.

The 14 artillerymen had been held in the New Orleans barracks as a precautionary measures after Lon was wounded.

The versatile Long, dictator of Louisiana, and a potential presidential candidate in 1936, succumbed after a valiant battle surrounded by his family and close political associates.

Long was shot by Dr. Carl C. Weiss, Jr., eye specialist of Batron Rouge, in the statehouse as Long was walking along a corridor after leaving the House of Representatives, which was in special session.

The exhibition is awaited with interest by students and faculty members as well as by the people of this and surrounding communities. Many of the exhibitors are new members and the display is said to be characterized by unusual vigor and freshness. The work of a group of Alabama artists will prove particularly attractive during the presentation in this state.

In connection with the company's rural electrification program, Mr. T. W. Martin, president of Alabama Power Company, today, made the following announcement:

This application is still pending. Meanwhile the company has begun construction of approximately 400 miles of these lines at an estimated cost of $555,000, located in 37 counties in the state, and they should be completed within a period of seven to nine months. The company is now serving rural customers in every county in the state except two, and the present construction is merely an extension of the program on which the company has been engaged in its effort over the past fifteen years to extend electric service to rural areas of the state."

Dr. Harman Presents Policies To Faculty

At the first faculty meeting of the session and of his administration at Alabama College, President A. F. Harman Saturday presented a number of general policies to receive emphasis in the work of the institution. "Democracy and the Open Door" sounded the key-note as he said: "Colleges should be centers of democracy in example as well as in teaching, and it will be my policy to maintain an Open Door between the college and the people who make it possible." He added that he wished the college, as a state tax-supported institution, to have its financial affairs particularly subject to the scrutiny of the public.

Dr. Harman stated that the dominant effort for the students of Alabama College shall be excellence of scholarship. In calling this the fundamental academic aim which must remain foremost in the minds of faculty and students, he interpreted this to mean "more than thoroughness of learning" but to include an "emphasis on culture" to give broader meaning to the scholarship standards that are maintained.

In concluding his remarks President Harman paid high tribute to the work of his predecessor, Dr. O. C. Carmichael, at Alabama College and in the general field of education.

MONTEVALLO - CALERA ROAD

The Times is glad to see and hear evidences now and then that the State Highway Department continues to think about paving the road from Montevallo to Calera.

It was stated unofficially this week by one close to the Governor and Highway Department that our road will most likely be included for paving in connection with the repair of the Birmingham Highway through Shelby County.

Such a plan was outlined some time ago before the Birmingham Highway project was assured. Now that plans are completed for that job, we are hopeful that those at the head of the highway business at Montgomery will keep in mind how important it is to pave the Montevallo-Calera Highway.

Work on construction of the viaduct and bridge across the railroad and Shoals Creek at Montevallo is well under way. Material is being placed on the ground, and excavations are being made for the foundations.

Welding

... the best way to make a perfect union of two pieces of metal is by welding them together.

... and the best way to get a more pleasing flavor and a better taste in a cigarette is by welding together the different types of tobacco ...

That is just what we do in making CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes—the three types of mild ripe home-grown tobaccos, that is tobaccos grown in this country, are welded together. Then they are welded with aromatic Turkish.

It is this welding of the right amounts of the right kind of tobaccos that makes CHESTERFIELD a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

BANKERS SUPPORT ACTIVE AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION

The Agricultural Commission of the American Bankers Association is promoting widely among bankers the practice of aiding their farm customers in installing on their farms better financial, accounting and operating methods It also cooperates in the endeavors of the state bankers' associations along similar lines.

The commission has published a book on "Making Farm Investments Safe," presenting a compendium of helpful material published over a period of years as a reference guide in the daily routine of banking and farming relationships. It has also published "Factors Affecting Farm Credit," discussing in an illustrative way how farm credit can be obtained on a sound basis

Another publication is the monthly Bulletin of the commission which circulates to about 10,000 persons, among them the county agents throughout the United States, who make frequent use of the material and suggestions prepared by the commission. Likewise, the commission has appointed 2,300 key bankers covering every county in the United States, who act as focal points in their districts in fostering better understanding between bankers and farmers.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE CONTINUES TO GAIN

Bankers Report Nation-Wide Improvement in Attitude Toward Banks—Educational Campaigns Play a Part

NEW YORK.—Ninety-six per cent of over 300 reporting clearinghouses throughout the United States find concrete evidence of favorable turns in public opinion regarding banks, it is shown in the results of a survey made by "Banking," the monthly publication of the American Bankers Association. City and country districts in every state are represented, it is pointed out.

"The outstanding conclusion is that there has been a genuine nation-wide improvement the last few months in the attitude of the public toward its banking institutions," the publication says. Statistical evidence on which the bankers base their conclusions which warrant this statement is as follows:

The Evidence

"How do bankers know there has been an improvement in the public attitude? They have certain statistical evidence. They have seen their deposits increase substantially in nearly all the cases reported, and tremendously in some cases. Many letters tell of increases of 100 to 300 per cent from the low point of the panic.

"For another thing, they know that fewer people are using safe deposit boxes as a repository for their savings, and that, in many instances at least, postal savings are declining.

"However, many express the view that they could throw out the statistical evidence and still realize that the public is in a better mood where the banks are concerned than before. The best evidence offered on this point, numerous bankers say, is to be found in the acceptance by the public of the newly instituted service charges and the reduced deposit interest rates."

A Summary of the Returns

"We find on breaking up the general classifications of replies to the poll that the 65 per cent of those answering with an unqualified 'yes' represent only a partial measure of the optimistic feeling. Adding the favorable replies included in other groups, (i. e. 'yes' with qualifications, 'no change,' and 'mixed') we find that the vote shows a definitely healthy situation in 84 per cent of the localities reporting; at least some signs of improvement in another 12 per cent; a continuance of unfavorable conditions in 2 per cent, and a change for the worse in another 2 per cent. It is not too much to say that this is substantially 96 per cent favorable."

Reasons for Changed Public Opinion

As to reasons for the changes in public opinion regarding banks reported by the clearinghouses "more than one organization has a word to say about the American Bankers Association advertising and educational material," the magazine says.

It mentions in addition the benefits of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the emergency, improvement in the general business situation, the weeding out of weak banks and the banking moratorium.

"The response to the survey can be put down as encouraging and informative," the magazine concludes. "It holds out the definite hope that with a continuance of a cooperative, educational attitude on the part of the bankers the rest of the journey back to normal may well be completed in the not too distant future."

BANKERS ACTIVE IN SOIL SAVING MOVE

Issue Book Describing Causes, Ravages and Means of Prevention of Erosion

MADISON, Wisc.—Under the title "Protecting Investment Values in Land," the American Bankers Association Agricultural Commission has published a booklet dealing with the conservation of soil resources as a pressing national problem.

"Careful estimates indicate that 750,000,000 tons of soil, suspended and dissolved, are carried off to the sea each year by running water," the commission's book declares. "An equal amount removed from its source is left en route. This means a total of 1,500,000,000 tons, equal to approximately one ton for each acre of land in this country. The Soil Conservation Service estimates that 35,000,000 acres have been ruined.

"There are 125,000,000 more acres that have lost the valuable topsoil, and it is estimated that still another 100 million acres are being converted into marginal or sub-marginal land, bringing disaster to those trying to eke out a living from erosion enfeebled soil, and threatening ruin to the next generation, since these destructive forces are going on at an increasing rate."

In a chapter devoted to control and preventive measures for soil losses it describes terracing, strip cropping, wind erosion control, gully control and the control of losses from leaching.

Other chapters are devoted to soil resources, the toll exacted by soil erosion, methods for keeping soils productive, state and national uses for non-agricultural land, forestry in a soil conservation program and wild life in a land use program. The booklet describes in detail the marshalling of many forces which is being brought about under the leadership of the Soil Erosion Service to meet this national problem.

Mr. R. E. Whaley, of the Whaley Furniture Co., is away on a trip to Concinnatti this week, as the guest of Perfection Mattress Co. He won the award of this fine vacation trip for his excellent record of sales of Crosley radios and refrigerators.

Mr. J. W. Reid of Enon was a visitor at The Times Office Wednesday.

At a special convocation program at Alabama College Friday morning in Palmer Hall, the local ministers welcomed the students to the campus and community. President A. F. Harman presided at the assembly.

Following an organ selection by H. D. LeBaron, of the School of Music, and the opening hymn, Rev. A. J. Cox, pastor of the Presbyterian church, gave the scripture reading. Rev. F. B. Watt Tatum Charged Hit-and-Run Driver Birmingham law officers came here Tuesday night and arrested Watt Tatum, of Wilton, carrying him to Birmingham on a charge of hit-and-run driving. It is said that Tatum admitted the charge.

When the Birmingham officers arrived here they thought that they were after our city policeman, Gardner, as they had traced the tag on the car Tatum was driving, and found that it was issued to Mr. Gardner, at Columbiana.

Mr. Gardner had no trouble, however, in producing evidence that the car, which had been sold by him, had not had the tag transferred.

It is said that Tatum, one day last week, ran over a boy in Birmingham, who was placed in a hospital in a serious condition. Spectators chased him into Shelby County, taking note of his tag number. By following up the investigation the Birmingham officers were able to locate the car, and Policeman Gardner was able to name the man who owns the car.

SHELBY COUNTY ROADS ON THREE-WAY PAVING PROGRAM

Among the thirty three-way paving jobs filed at the last minute with Thad Holt in Montgomery were listed three sections of road in Shelby County, as follows:

Wilsonville to Childersburg Bridge, 8.5 miles, $61,743.

Calera through Montevallo to Bibb County line, 10.3 miles, $92,241.

Columbiana to Wilsonville, 10 miles, $88,178.

This announcement again brings gladness to the hearts of Montevallo citizens, as it furnishes another hope that we soon shall see a good road to Calera instead of the succession of bumps and pot holes afforded by the present graveled highway.

Mrs. Hattie Tinney of Columbiana has returned to her home after an extended visit with her daughters, Mrs. W. C. Spivey and Mrs. H. A. Miller, of Boothton.

Mrs. James Albright, Mrs. W. C. Spivey and daughter, Frances, and son, Joe, were the Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Comer in Birmingham. Later they were joined at the Alabama to see Will Rogers in "Steamboat Round the Bend."

REGULAR ENROLLMENT MORE THAN 850, ALABAMA COLLEGE

With the largest total enrollment in the past six years in prospect for the entire session at Alabama College, the second week of the semester began Monday. According to announcement from the registrar's office, there is an unusually even distribution of students among the four classes and a wide representation of the counties of the state.

It seems probable that the regular resident enrollment, exclusive of training school students, will exceed 850 during the year. The first full week of classes began Monday, the recitation having commenced last Thursday.

The large freshman class, having completed Orientation Week Saturday, is rapidly settling down to the regular schedule of its first college work.

Kershaw Low Bidder For Paving Project

The State Highway Commission opened bids Tuesday at noon on a paving project approximately half a mile long, which will complete the construction of a paved spur road connecting Montevallo with State Road No. 45, better known as the Calera-Centreville Highway. On this same spur road connection, work is now going forward on a grade elimination job, which provides an overpass across the tracks of the Southern Railway and a bridge over Shoal Creek. The C. G. Kershaw Construction Company has the contract on the bridge job, and has already begun the actual work of construction.

C. G. Kershaw was low bidder on the work at $18,807.29.

MONTEVALLO CIVIC CLUB MEETS WEDNESDAY NOON

When speaking of the most interesting places she visited, Radio City was outstanding, since it is one of the show places of this country. She attended the 48th annual convention of the Photographer's Association of America and has brought home some of the latest creations in photography. She spent some time in Minneapolis, Minn., visiting Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery. Returning home she made a short stop in Chicago and Red Boiling Springs, Tenn.

AAA Payments Boost Shelby County Farms

Farmers of Shelby County who are cooperating in the agricultural programs received a total of $71,786.75 in rental and benefit payments during the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1935, reports A. A. Lauderdale, county agent.

The total AAA payments to farmers of the state during the past fiscal year ran to $9,780,926.15, divided as follows: Cotton farmers, $9,322,776.44; corn-hog producers, $454,221.11; tobacco growers, $3,928.60.

Seminary Day

Next Sunday is "Seminary Day" in our church. We observe this day one Sunday in September annually. The purpose of this special day is to keep in touch with our great Seminary at Louisville, Kentucky, and to join in the endowment of the chair of Old Testament in honor of Dr. John R. Sampey.

Do you know Dr. John R. Sampey? Do you know that he is President of the Louisville Seminary, and also president of the Southern Baptist convention? Do you know that he is a native of Ramer, Alabama, and an alumnus of Howard College? Would you like to hear his voice in a message to you about the Seminary? Come to church Sunday morning.

Friday of next week, September 27, will be Dr. Sampey's seventy-second birthday. We want our contribution to get in by that day. Therefore, please bring whatever offering you want to make to our great Seminary next Sunday—either at the morning or evening service. The offering is entirely voluntary and there will be no pressure except from the inside—that is, from your own heart. How much do you want to preach?

DR. HARMAN'S PLEDGE FOR FUTURE OF ALABAMA COLLEGE

Editor of the Montevallo Times:

Permit me to express my appreciation of your gracious and courteous editorial in The Times of Thursday, September fifth, entitled "Farewell to Dr. Carmichael; Greetings to Dr. Harman."

First, I wish to join you in a hearty and sincere expression of appreciation of the service to education in Alabama by Dr. Carmichael. His record as a man, as an educator and as president of Alabama College is now so clean and clear that all who run may read. He was in the forefront of a company of fine men and women who sacrificed nobly and who kept the faith as admonished by the governor of the state in hectic days that are now happily behind us.

For myself let me say that I will exercise all diligence to maintain and to promote the high standards that have prevailed at Alabama College during the administration of my distinguished predecessor. It will be my policy and effort to press forward bearing always in mind that the college is, after all, but the servant of the people of the state.

It is also my hope and purpose to become a citizen of Montevallo and of Shelby County, and to render whatever assistance I can in promoting the interests of our town and county.

Be assured always of my hearty appreciation of your courtesy and helpfulness. Cordially yours—A. F. Harman, President.

11-CENT COTTON, 40-CENT MEAT

Uncle Dave Macon, the Dixie Dewdrop, sings a song on the grand uproar at WSM, in which are these words: "Eleven-cent cotton and forty-cent meat; how in the h—l can a poor man eat?"

Present-day conditions bring to mind the expression of Uncle Dave's song with a very forcible and (im)-practical application. From Palmetto, Georgia, comes a story which says negro tenant farmers accustomed to salt pork and turnip greens are substituting chicken and dumplings because they are cheaper.

That is perhaps true in other places than Georgia. Ordinary side meat, white, crusted with salt, and boasting the thinnest kind of a streak-o-lean, sells these days around thirty cents a pound. Hams are 33 cents up if you buy them whole, or 60 cents, if you prefer only center cuts. Chickens, on the other hand, are selling at a price range slightly more than 20 cents a pound.

"Yas suh," one negro farmer in Georgia explained his position, "side meat's too high for country niggers now. We sells it and eats chicken. o-lean these days to go with a dime's It takes a quarter's worth of streak worth of turnip greens."

He hastened to add, however, that those who have undergone the deprivation of side meat are doing very well, thank you, with fried chicken and plenty of biscuits and gravy as a substitute.

Information of Interest to School Patrons Here

The following information concerning the opening of school and the erection of a new high school here, which is of much interest to local school patrons, was given out by Principal Fred Allen, this week:

The second week of our school finds 394 youngsters seeking knowledge. The most pleasant thing that has come our way in some time, was the visit of Mr. McCauly, the engineer for our county board, who on Monday afternoon located and took tentative grades for the new High School unit which will be ready by September of 1936. This addition will give us room to accommodate through the Senior High grades. For the past several years our people have dreamed of this. We hope to have as good school center as the country affords, and if cooperation is any sign, our hopes will not be in vain, as we have a school-minded community.

Local Girl Scouts Begin New Activities

The local Girl Scout troops are beginning regular scheduled meetings again. Each Tuesday and Thursday, girls, captains and lieutenants are seen shifting about to assemblies for various phases of scout work.

Dorothy Waites, Mary Agnes Curties and Frances Lee, Alabama College students, and seasoned girl scouts, all, are again assisting with the local girl scout program. These three girls saw camp experience at Juliette Lowe the past season.

Mary Underwood has returned for lieutenant duty, and a number of other students from the college group have volunteered for this leadership work, and will assist our commissioner, Mrs. A. W. Vaughan, who so ably directs the work in this and outlying communities.

Miss Ray Mitchell, formerly director of the Juliette Lowe Region, and camp director for the Southeastern district, comes to Dixie Region, of which we are a part, as new director.

Co-Educational Camp

An interesting echo of summer-camping is the account of the first girl scout co-education camp, which took place at Jefferson Notch Camp, Jefferson, New Hampshire, where for two years the New England camp committee, headed by Mrs. Chas. Newell of Springfield, Mass, has conducted a mountain climbng camp for older girl scouts, under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. William Bragner and two assistant trail masters.

Ten girl scouts between 16 and 18 years of age and ten boys of about the same age responded to the suggestion of the regional camp adviser that they register for this type of camp, August 15 to 29.

The boys were all college students from Dartmouth, Harvard and elsewhere, the Girls were all scouts. One boy of 19 said "camping together was more fun for both."

Climbs to various peaks, swims in "Lake of the Clouds," hot lunches in huts, prepared the campers for a two-day trip over the rim of Presidential Range.

The feeling of the campers at parting may be gathered from the fact that they plan a reunion in December, 'arrangements for which were left to one of the boys of the group, whom they appointed secretary.

GET LICENSE TO DRIVE BY NOV. 15

PROVISION OF THE NEW LAW PASSED BY ALABAMA'S LEGISLATURE

Every person who expects to drive an automobile in Alabama must obtain a driver's certificate before November 15, 1935, and must pay a fee of ten cents to the probate judge of the county issuing the license in addition to the cost of the license which is 50 cents for every owner of an automobile. Owners of automobiles who have members of the family who desire to drive a car must pay 25 cents a head for a license with a fee of five cents a head to the probate judge issuing the certificate.

These provisions are contained in the new driver's license act which is designed to take care of from 150 to 200 men in a state highway patrol, depending on the amount of annual fines produced, and the opening date on which probate judges will receive applications for licenses is October 1, 1935. And licenses must be renewed every year thereafter to take care of the newly created force.

The probate judge is made the sole arbiter of who is to get a driver's license. It is provided, however, that a driver's license card shall not be issued to any person under 16 years of age, or whenever an operating privilege is suspended, or whenever operating privilege is revoked, or to an habitual drunkard or to the users of narcotics, to an insane person or an idiot or to any person suffering with a physical or mental disability "which in the opinion of the probate judge, will prevent such person from exercising a reasonable or ordinary control over a motor vehicle."

Mr. and Mrs. Jap Ingram and children Jerry, Colene and P. C., were the dinner guests of Mrs. T. W. Ingram and family Sunday.

Rev. Martin Robinson visited his sister, Mrs. Clara Lee Sunday.

Mr. C. T. Ingram made a business trip to Columbiana Monday p.m.

Under the voice of our beloved president, Mae Ingram, Christian Endeavor was called to order promptly at mid-afternoon Sunday. A few matters concerning the usual business procedure were taken up prior to the presentation of the program, over which Mae, as we all affectionately know her, presided. Following this we were delighted to see Mrs. Lawson Ingram take the leader's position as she always does such a splendid job of developing the subject to make it all the more inspiring and helpful. Questions asked in a distinctive manner by the leader were answered in brief but to-the-point talks by the following Endeavors: Maude, Clara, Mary Sue and Jack Lee, Mrs. Mattie Frost, Jessie Vernon, Walter Hayden, Lawson, Bert, Jap, Annie Laurie, Mae and Sue Ingram. These questions and exact answers were all concerning the important topic of "Missions." Mrs. T. W. Ingram interpreted "reverently," taught in the text after which sentence prayers were earnestly prayed by practically every worshipper present. The "Ingram Sisters" again sung one of the symbolic soprano and alto duets, "A Little Bit of Love." With heads bowed and voices blended softly to the old refrain, "I Love To Tell the Story," the Missionary program came to a conclusion. Immediately after this the process of electing officers was taken up. They are as follows: President, Miss Clara Lee; vice president, Mrs. Lawson Ingram; secretary, Mrs. Robert Frost. Mrs. Frost has faithfully and efficiently held this position for the past six months, so efficiently that we feel no one can possibly surpass her at this post. Upon completion of committee appointments an executive committee meeting was held. This closed the functions of another successful C. E. Meeting.

MEMBERS OF SENIOR CLASS ENTERTAINED THURSDAY

Mrs. Louise Coleman matron of Ramsay Hall at Alabama College, entertained members of the senior class Thursday evening in the dormitory parlors. Miss Helen Hewell, Mobile, gave a reading; and Miss Billie Hill, Saginaw, sang, accompanied by Miss Bertie Gammell, pianist; and Misses Clarice Walton and Aleece Cooper, violinists. A delightful course of refreshments was served.

BAPTIST CHURCH

9:45 a.m.—Sunday school.

11:00 a.m.—Morning worship, "Why Join the Church?"

6:45 p.m.—Baptist Training Unions.

7:30 p.m.—Evening worship, "A Sermon from Paul."

Join-the-Church-Day

One of the Special days observed each year by the Baptist Student Union is "Join-the-Church Sunday," which is observed the first convenient Sunday after the opening of college. This day is being observed throughout all the Southern states in every school where there is a B. S. U. organization.

It is a capital idea. The purpose is to get all the Baptist students to unite with the local Baptist church. The students themselves take the initiative and seek in their own way to enlist their fellow-Baptist students.

Why not make this a community-wide "Join the church" day? There are more than fifty people living in this community who are members of Baptist churches elsewhere. We want them all to unite with our church. We need them and they need the church. If you know any who ought to join our church, won't you see them and urge them to do it next Sunday?

SALES TAX FOE FORGES AHEAD IN KENTUCKY POLL

Lieut. Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler militant foe of the state sales tax law, rolled up a majority of 20,523 over Thomas S. Rhea for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination on returns from 3,063 of the state's 4,219 precincts.

A prominent Rhea supporter here, basing his estimate on the trend throughout the day, conceded the nomination of Chandler by a majority of from 20,000 to 25,000.

Rhea, supported by Gov. Ruby Laffon, champion of the tax, got off to an early lead when count of votes cast in Saturday's runoff primary began today but steadily lost ground on later returns.

FRESHMAN CLASS MEETING

The freshman class of Alabama College met in Palmer Hall Monday evening with the class advisers. Miss Isabel Henderson, president of the student government association, presented Miss Katherine Vickery, Miss Josephine Eddy and E. P. Hood, of the faculty, as the advisers to the group.

The Alabama College Convocation Program Tuesday was devoted to a group of musical selections. The singing was led by H. D. LeBaron, director of the school of music. Miss Honor Winer, soprano, was heard in several numbers, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Blair Chamberlain, also of the college music faculty.

WE NEED MORE HOUSES

Since becoming engaged in business in Montevallo a few months ago, I have heard several times the statement by residents, "Montevallo needs more houses for people to live in."

I agree with that expression, and I assure you no one can realize the truth of it more keenly than the fellow who would come here to live, if he could get a house to live in.

Montevallo does need more houses. If we had more houses, we would have more people coming here. We would have more business establishments coming here. We need more business houses as well as more residences. Within the past few months we have known of more than one business man who would have come here if he could have found a place.

THE NEW STRAND THEATRE

Inquiring of Eddie Watson Tuesday about when the new Strand Theatre building would be ready for opening, he said to me: "Say anything you want to about it, except the date when it will be ready."

So, there you are. We have told you something about the new Strand almost every week since construction started—all about how big and fine and roomy it will be; how much better the shows will be than they used to be (and they have always been plenty good).

And now, when we hoped to tell you when the new show would be ready, Eddie says tell anything and everything but that.

Well, we will be patient. Soon the work will be nearly enough done for Eddie to venture a guess at the opening date. When he does cut loose with it we will tell you. Meanwhile, you may get yourselves set and ready to walk into the finest small-town theatre in this section of Alabama.

REVOLUTIONIZED FARMING METHODS

Not so many years ago agricultural cooperatives were regarded with suspicion. Some believed that they could produce nothing worthwhile, they were needless "luxuries". Others thought they would merely waste time and money of their farmer members.

Today the cooperative has come into the "necessity" classification so far as the progressive farmer is concerned. The time he gives to it is as nothing compared to the benefit he receives. And the money he contributes in dues is returned to him many times over in more stable markets, and better prices for his produce.

The cooperatives have slowly, quietly and effectively caused a virtual agricultural revolution. They have gone a long way toward taking the guess-work out of farming—wherein each producer raised as much as he could, irrespective of markets or demand, and sold it for what he was offered. The old-time farmer was at the mercy of the middleman — the modern farmer with his organization doing the talking and bargaining for him, has applied proven business methods toward achieving a better place in the world.

Cooperatives have made a great record during the depression—and when better times return, they are going to show the country what real agricultural progress means.

AGED NEGRO WOMAN REFUSES TO TAKE DOLE WITHOUT WORK

Clanton.—"Aunt" Eugenia Calhoun, aged negro woman of Clanton, has one "policy"—and she expects to collect dividends on it.

Her "policy" is honesty and the reward she expects in the end is a pair of golden slippers and a star bedecked crown.

"Aunt" Eugeneia for good measure practices a little of the well-known, but seldom used "Golden Rule" as Chilton County relief officials will testify.

The aged negro has been on the relief rolls for some time and has been working in a sewing project. She has been a good worker, sewing all day long making quilts and drawing her weekly allowance of $2.31.

Recently the work was stopped, but the workers were still allowed that amount for two weeks extra.

"Aunt" Eugenia failed to get her two checks and they were sent to her.

Mrs. Hattie Alred, overseer of the project, had a caller at her back door a few days ago. It was "Aunt" Eugenia, who handed Mrs. Alred the two checks.

"I jest don't believe I'll take these checks, Mrs. Alred," she said. "I've got a little work now and I don't believe it's right to take this money. I've got a boy that I'm trying to raise right and I'll give this money back."

And she did.

FAITH AND SIGHT

That faith will in the future life merge into sight is the fondest longing of some Christians, and the positive conviction of others. We either wistfully hope, or confidently expect that what we now believe about God and life and immortality will one day be plainly revealed, and faith be no longer necessary. "We know in part," said St. Paul, "and we prophecy in part; but when that which is perfect is come, that which is in part shall be done away . . . for now we see in a mirror, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know fully even as also I was fully known." Faith, he predicts, will be supplanted by sight in the future life.

Not only do we take for granted that, if what we believe is true, faith really will be supplanted by sight, but we are convinced that it will be a highly desirable exchange. The theory is that faith makes life tolerable, but sight will make immortality blessed. Faith is pretty good, the best faculty possible under the peculiar limitations of this life, but it is not to be compared in value to the definite knowledge to come.

It is interesting, in the light of this almost universal Chrstian hope, to note that Jesus thought the supplanting of faith by sight neither possible nor desirable. To Him, faith and sight operated in entirely different spheres; it would be impossible for the one to dislodge the other. Ian Maclaren, in "The Mind of the Master," says: "When anyone ignored faith, and fell back on sight in quest for God, Jesus was in despair. You want to see, was His constant complaint, when in the nature of things you must believe. There is one sphere where sight is instrument of knowledge; use it there—it is not My sphere. There is another where faith is the instrument; use it there—that is My sphere. But do not exchange your instruments. You cannot see what is spiritual; you might as well expect to hear a picture. What you see you do not believe; it is a misnomer; you see it. What you believe you cannot see; it would be an absurdity; you believe it."

And even if it were possible to exchange these two faculties, such an exchange would be far from desirable, according to Jesus. He always reproached those who sought to substitute the one for the other: "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh for a sign," said He. Thomas, who saw and touched the Master after His resurrection, and whom the modern Christian envies for that reason, was actually, in Jesus' mind, less fortunate than the many who have only believed in the risen Christ without seeing Him. "Because thou has seen Me, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed"—more blessed, really than he who saw and touched! It is an exact reversal of our ordinary conception of blessedness.

The implication is that in the life to come those who believe will see and know little more than they do now, but that they will believe a great deal more than they do now. Faith will not be changed into sight, but into more faith.—Rev. A. J. Cox.

Dr. W. H. Trumbauer, professor of Dramatic Literature and Director of the Alabama College Theatre, has announced that the first production of the session will be "Is Life Worth Living?" by Lennox Robinson. It will be presented in Palmer Hall October 11. The author of this Irish comedy is director of the Abbey Theater at Dublin.

PREDICTS SALES TAX END

State sales taxes proved both politically unpopular and difficult to collect and therefore probably will not endure as a means of raising revenues, the Journal of Accountancy, official publication of the American Institute of Accountants, says editorially in its September issue.

The inability of a state to lay a tax on sales of goods to be delivered outside its bounds and the expense involved in collection were cited among objections to the sales tax. The editorial stated that the tax would be discarded "chiefly because of the same sentiment which prevented the reduction of exemptions from the Federal income tax to $800 as proposed at the last Congress—the reluctance of politicians to levy taxes on the poorer classes in any form which they will reiognize as taxation."

Chevrolet Trucks In Thrilling Tests Atop Pikes Peak

In the first formally observed and timed tests of motor trucks over the perilous hairpin turns and steep switchbacks of the Pikes Peak auto highway, near Colorado Springs, Chevrolet 1½-ton and half-ton trucks demonstrated their power, endurance and efficiency over the course of the annual Labor Day hill climb contest, a distance of 12 miles, 2200 feet, with a rise of 4959 feet from the start to the summit, 14,109 feet above sea level. The upper illustrations show the 1½-ton truck, driven by W. P. Bentrup, on its way to a record of 37 minutes, 52½ seconds, with its full 3000-pound load (it made the run afterward, without load, in 26 minutes, 12 seconds), and the officials at the finish (left to right): Harry Hartz, technical advisor; Robert M. Ross, Detroit Times; Dan Kennedy, Colorado Springs Gazette and Telegraph; and John L. Jenkins, Chicago Daily News. The lower photos show the Chevrolet half-ton truck, which Harry Hartz drove to the summit in 25 minutes, 3 seconds, and the finish of the run of the 1½-ton truck with full load.

FARMERS' INCOME ON CLIMB

Washington, Sept. 23.—Cash income from the sale of farm products in August this year was estimated by the Agricultural Department at $549,000,000, compared with $451,000,000 in July this year and $536,000,000 in August, 1934.

Rental and benefit payments under AAA programs were estimated tentaviely at $44,000,000, compared with $20,000,000 for July and $54,000,000 in August, 1934. In addition to the benefit payments in August, 1934, farmers received during that month $26,000,000 from emergency sale of livestock.

During the first eight months this year, the department said, farmers' income from the sale of farm products was $3,670,000,000 and rental and benefit payments were $350,000,000 making a total of cash income of $4,020,000,000. The total cash income during the first eight months last year was $3,754,000,000.

The increase was attributed principally to the sale of meat animals, and the department said income from sale of both cattle and hogs increased much more than the seasonal average.

Gentlemen:

The other evening when I came home from my work I walked out into the kitchen and found the maid ironing and putting the ironed clothes on top of the oven of our electric range. We always have biscuits for supper so I knew that our oven must be hot, and I scolded the maid for her carelessness. She merely laughed and said, "Put your hand on the oven, boss," and much to my surprise the outside of the oven was barely warm. Then she said, "Now open the oven door," and there was all the heat in the oven.

My wife had been telling me about how clean and cool an electric range is and I thought that some salesman had just gotten her over-enthusiastic. We agree with you when you say that electricity is cheap in Alabama.

You may use this statement in an advertisement if you like.

Yours very truly,

Dr. Harman Addressed Bessemer Lions Tuesday

Bessemer, Oct. 1.—The office of state secretary of education should be removed from politics and should have a longer tenure of office, Dr. A. F. Harman, president of Alabama College, said at the Bessemer Lions Club Tuesday in a talk on Education."

"We need the best possible leadership in education removed from politics, with an adequate salary for securing that type of leadership," he said.

"We need an adequate system of education for Alabama, one that will start with the most remote place in the country and extend through the higher institutions of learning," he said. "Even in such systems as you have in Bessemer, I venture to say there are underpaid teachers and crowded class rooms. What must it be in many of the rural sections? We should be willing to make the sacrifices that would provide higher education for the boys and girls of the state who will take advantage of it."

"IS LIFE WORTH LIVING" AT ALABAMA COLLEGE THEATRE

The Alabama College Theatre will present "Is Life Worth Living?" in Palmer Hall on October 11th. The author, Lennox Robinson, visited the campus here several years ago with the Abbey Company when "The Whitehaired Boy" was presented and when he addressed the college dramatic group.

This performance will open the College Theatre season. It will be directed by Dr. W. H. Trumbauer, professor of dramatic literature.

Other plays already scheduled for the college are "Such is Life," by Franz Wedekind; "The Portrait," by Dr. Trumbauer; and "Gold Chairs in the Wilderness," by Miss Dorothy Davis. The last of these productions was the prize winning play in the Alabama College playwriting contest of 1931. Other performances will be announced later in the season.

PROSPECTS BRIGHTER FOR COAL SETTLEMENT

With coal operators and union spokesmen remaining silent but with reports current that prospects for a settlement of wage differences in the Alabama fields are brighter than they were Monday, representatives of the operators and the union coal miners will resume wage negotiations at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the offices of the Alabama Mining Institute.

The meeting Wednesday morning will be a continuation of negotiations opened Monday when operators and union representatives held a two-hour conference to open the negotiations looking to new contracts and the return of 17,000 miners to their jobs.

Although negotiations were to have been continued Tuesday between representatives of the two groups, the joint meeting Tuesday was postponed until Wednesday morning, with the coal operators holding frequent conferences during the day.

Neither Darius Thomas, spokesman for the committee representing the coal operators, nor William Mitch, president of District 20, United Mine Workers of America, would comment Tuesday on progress of negotiations.

Miners here are insisting through their representatives, on new contracts carrying out the main features of the recent Washington wage conference, whereby miners on a day basis will receive increases of 50 cents a day and those on a tonnage basis an increase of nine cents a ton. Operators at the initial meeting insisted on the contrary that the Alabama coal industry cannot stand an increase.

Coal operations in Alabama have been suspended since September 15, when the existing contracts expired.—Birmingham Age-Herald.

BIRMINGHAM WANTS A PARK IN SHELBY

The Birmingham City Commission Tuesday adopted a resolution urging that a National Park of 10,000 acres in Shelby County be acquired and improved.

J. B. Elliott appeared before the commission to ask adoption of the resolution, which was offered by Commissioner Lewey Robinson. The proposed park is located 12 miles from Birmingham, it was set out.

The resolution declares the plans propose that the park be improved with lakes and recreation facilities. The resolutions request that all civic organizations urge the acquisition and development of the park, which is expected to bring many tourists to Birmingham.

Copies of the resolution were ordered sent to the congressional representatives of this district and to Elmer Todd, of the National Park Service.

GASOLINE TAXES GAIN OVER RECENT PERIOD

Alabama's 1934-35 fiscal year ended Monday with gasoline tax collections showing a $1,160,631 increase over 1933-34, and state bookkeepers were working overtime in closing out records and figuring balances for the beginning of the new tax year Tuesday.

Chairman Henry S. Long of the state tax commission said that tax collections figures for the commissions various bureaus would be available Tuesday and preliminary studies indicated a "wide gain" over the last fiscal year.

Gasoline tax collections to date were listed at $10,170,390. September collections alone showed a $123,000 increase.

September collections on fuel sold in August under the state's six cents per gallon tax totaled $957,528 as compared with $834,448 last year.

Comptroller Charles Lee sent out word early in the morning his department expected full reports from all departments during the day, but told newspaper men it would be three to four days before an accurate treasury balance for the year would be available.

Mr. John May and Mr. Kermit Wooley attended the fair Friday night.

TEACHING FARM COOPERATION

According to a law passed by the Wisconsin legislature, cooperative marketing must now be taught in all Wisconsin state schools. Wisconsin is the first state to take such a step. The superintendent of public instruction and the dean of the college of agriculture are to prepare outlines and other text materials for guidance of teachers of cooperative marketing courses.

This action, by one of our foremost agrcultural states, well illustrates the importance of agricultural cooperation in the life of the modern farmer. So vital has cooperative marketing become, that the farmer who does not join in the movement is almosst always in an impossible economic position. Lacking in knowledge and the machinery that will enable him to produce in accordance with demand, and to achieve the best price for what he sells, he must fight a losing battle with the middleman. When a cooperative sells for the farmer, and brings into play bargaining powers as great as those of the distributor, a fair price must result.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

Observance of Fire Prevention Week—from October 6 to 12—should be regarded both as a duty and a privilege by every citizen and property owner.

During the week, which has been an annual event for many years, the public will be offered an unparalled opportunity to learn of the hazards of fire and how they may be avoided and eliminated—as well as what course to pursue once a fire has started. Fire marshals and chiefs, insurance representatives, and public and private organizations will cooperate to the fullest extent to make the week the success it deserves to be.

The public will learn of the danger of old or out-of-condition heating plants—one of the most prolific sources of fire. It will be instructed in the menace of improperly stored inflamable liquids and rubbish—and of the danger of accumulations of ancient furniture, clothes and knickknacks in basements and attics. It will discover that when we "save" a few dollars by making minor electric repairs ourselves, a disastrous fire may be the result. And it will learn that every town and city should have above all, a first class modern building code that will do away with existing fire traps and make the construction of new substandard building impossible.

Thousands of lives that are lost each year through fire can be saved—as can hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property that goes up in smoke. Past Fire Prevention Weeks have done much to keep the fire loss, unnecessarily great as it is, from growing larger. Now everyone should contribute, as never before, time and interest that will make this week the most successful and productive of all.

LABOR TO PROTEST

Plans are being developed by organized labor in Shelby County to present a protest to WPA administrators of the state concerning the wage scale differential being applied to the workers on WPA projects in Shelby County.

A mass meeting in the interest of this movement was held at the Legion Hut in Montevallo last Saturday night. Other meetings have been held for the same purpose at Calera and different places in the county.

It is understood that a concerted effort to adjust the wages of WPA workers upon a satisfactory basis is being planned through members and officials of the Hodcarriers Union.

CLERKS UNION LOCAL MEETING

The regular meeting of the Clerks Union Local No. 785, of Montevallo, was held Tuesday night, October 1, with President Carr presiding.

The new contract was discussed and committees were elected to carry on the business of contract renewals.

CIVIC CLUB NOTES

For some time the Civic Club has been considering the matter of erecting a public bulletin board at some suitable and convenient place in the city. A committee in charge of the matter is headed by Rev. F. B. Pearson. The chairman reported at Wednesday's meeting that no definite action had been taken, while some suggested locations have been considered. It was stated that definite action will probably be deferred until the location of the new postoffice is decided.

Another committee has had under consideration the question of fencing a baseball park in Montevallo. E. E. Craig reported for the committee that an estimate had been made that material for such a fence around the high school athletic field would cost $225. Upon the report of Mr. Craig, further discussion followed.

Dr. Reid voiced the opinion that the hedge around the athletic field would be grown sufficiently in another year or so to serve as an enclosure for the field. The hedge was planted there by the last city administration for that purpose, he stated.

In response to a question by President Lucien Giddens as to how fast a hedge will grow, one member of the club offered the opinion that if you undertake the job of keeping a hedge pruned, you will think it grows as much as twenty feet a year.

Stanley Mahan expressed the opinion that baseball in Montevallo will not be a paying proposition, and approved the idea of letting the hedge serve the purpose of a fence. The club accepted the report and dismissed the committee.

Dr. Reid made the observation that we are now getting what we have long needed and desired—a respectable highway entrance into Montevallo, referring to the new bridge now being built. He further suggested that Montevallo should arrange for erection of two electrically lighted signs, one at each highway entrance. His suggestion received favorable comment, and will no doubt come in for definite action by the club and community when the new entrance is completed and open to traffic.

H. D. Gilbert wanted to know where the goober parcher has gone.

If you succeed in life, you must do it in spite of the efforts of others to pull you down. There is nothing in the idea that people are willing to help those who help themselves. People are willing to help a man who can't help himself, but as soon as a man is able to help himself, and does it, they join in making his life as uncomfortable as possible. — E. W. Howe.

New State Law Furthers Safety For Sportsmen

In addition to revising state regulations governing the fur-catching industry, the recently enacted McPhaul bill likewise throws greater safeguards around the sport of hunting.

One of its most important provisions prohibits the hunting of any bird or animal protected by the state with firearms or headlights between sunset and daylight the following day, the only exception being that headlights may be used in hunting raccoons and o'possums at night.

The bill requires that all game birds, animals and fish taken or killed in this state must be transported openly and authorizes the confiscation of game illegally transported. It imposes a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100 and a three-months jail sentence, discretionary with the court, or any person who wilfully opposes or resists a game warden in the discharge of his duty.

The act also prohibits hunting within a distance of 100 yards of any public road, public highway or railroad, with the exception of a logging railroad, and provides a fine ranging from $25 to $50 for violation of this section.

Hunting out of season is made a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not less than $20 nor more than $50, hunting wild turkeys with the aid of a dog is forbidden and a fine of $25 to $50 is imposed on any person who kills a wild turkey hen, doe deer or unantlered male deer.

The bill subjects to a fine any person, firm or common carrier who transports game without first ascertaining whether the party offering same for shipment is properly licensed and permits no person to collect protected animals, birds, or the eggs of such birds, for propagation or scientific purposes unless he has a scientific permit. It also gives protection to wild birds that are not game birds.

The only birds to which the law does not give protection are the English sparrow, Cooper's hawk, chicken hawk, sharp shinned hawk, blue darter, the great horned owl, crows, starlings and buzzards.

THE WORK OF CREDIT

Bank Shows How It Gives Needed Aid to All Classes of Prudent Borrowers

How a bank loan portfolio presents a graphic cross section picture of the business of its community is disclosed by the description which a midwestern bank recently gave of its loans to customers. It revealed also how closely interwoven with its neighbors' varied lives are the threads of the bank's financial helpfulness.

This description showed that the bank had made a loan of $100,000 to a local shoe manufacturer to purchase materials, discount bills and meet current requirements.

To a wholesale grocer $95,000 had been advanced for the purchase of inventory, the loan to be repaid over a period in accordance with specified terms set forth in the loan agreement.

Assistance in Personal Matters

Another loan had been made to a home owner to the amount of $200 for painting and repairing. This was made in cooperation with the Federal Housing Administration and was being repaid in twenty-four monthly installments of $8.33 each.

A dentist had been loaned $300 to purchase new equipment. He was paying off the debt out of his professional earnings as they came in.

To a large domestic refrigerator distributor $30,000 had been granted on warehouse receipts to finance dealer shipments.

A home owner had been granted a $3,000 mortage loan to be repaid in three years.

One thousand dollars had been advanced to an office worker on the cash surrender value of his insurance policy to aid him in meeting an emergency.

The National Total

If each of these various examples were multiplied many times the result would represent the total volume of credit cooperation which the bank was extending to its neighbors in its community, for aggregate loans to all its customers amounted to more than twelve million dollars.

If the typical examples here given were multiplied by many millions of times the result would represent the total economic cooperation which the banking system of the country as a whole is extending to aid the innumerable personal, professional, industrial and commercial activities which make up the whole business life of the nation. The nationwide total of such loans is in excess of 20 billion dollars.

BANKS PLAN ADVERTISING

Substantial funds have been set aside from reserves of the American Bankers Association to finance the development by its Advertising Department of a service of informative newspaper advertisements setting forth in brief, popular language the methods and policies under which banks operate, their effective practices for protecting their depositors' funds, the services they render and the various ways in which they cooperate with business in their own communities in fostering sound recovery and progress.

Some 350 banks are now using this material and it is available at a moderte price for all of the members in the association who care to use it in bringing about better public understanding in their own communities regarding banking and its services. It has materally stimulated the use of newspaper advertising among banks.

Many favorable comments have been expressed regarding the informative and constructive character of its messages. It is issued in two sizes: the larger size is 3 columns wide by 10 inches deep, but in some instances subscribing banks have expanded this to occupy full pages in their local papers in order to obtain a more emphatic effect. Four pieces of advertising copy are supplied each month in this service

EXHIBITION OF GUATEMALAN COSTUMES AT ALA. COLLEGE

An exhibition of Guatemalan Textiles and costumes, with their modern adaptions, will be brought to Alabama College through the National Alliance of Art and Industry October 6th. Its only presentation in the state has been arranged by the home economics department here.

The varieties of weaves of the native craftsmen and the fashion content of the contemporary designs make this one of the outsanding foreign collections of the year. The exhibition consists of approximately 250 peces of carefully selected Guatemalan Textiles, supplemented by a number of costumes typical of villagers of the highland communities.

Other features of the exhibition include photographs of Guatemalan landscapes, paintings of the natives in their costumes and hand woven adaptations.

In 1934 the Carnegie Institute of Washington sent Miss Ruth Reeves, widely known textile designer, to Guatemala to study the historic and contemporary designs and to make the collection of native arts in textiles and weavings. Regarded by many as the most effective imported display since the art center showed the Mexican craft material in 1927, the exhibit comes here from San Francisco. It is to be sent from Alabama College after October 26 to the Addison Gallery of Art, Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

M. V. Joseph Scholarship For Alabama College

President A. F. Harman, of Alabama College, has announced the addition of "The M. V. Joseph Scholarship" to the list available at the institution. It has been established as a memorial to Mr. Joseph, who as a resident of Birmingham was serving as a member of the Board of Trustees here at the time of his death some years ago. The fund of $2,500.00 was given the college by Mrs. Edgar Leventritt, his daughter, now of New York City.

The scholarship will be awarded for the first time for the 1936-37 session and is to be in the form of a loan, for which graduates of the Birmingham high schools are eligible to apply through Dr. C. B. Glenn, superintendent of city schools there. It will be tenable for the entire regular college careers of the appointees who maintain satisfactory records. The interest on the fund will be used to provide the scholarship help.

In announcing this bequest, Dr. Harman described it as a fine example to those interested and able to contribute to the scholarship fund at a time when there is need on the part of many worthy students who are unable to complete their education without assistance of this kind.

Siluria Beats Isabella

Thompson High of Siluria won its first game of the season Friday afternoon by defeating the husky Isabella eleven, 7 to 0. The scoring attack came late in the first quarter, and was led by the powerful line-plunging of Captain Payne and Co-Captain Lee, who carried the ball from midfield to the 3-yard mark via four successive first downs. Isabella's line failed to hold when Captain Payne, led by good interference, dashed over guard for the touchdown and later for the extra point.

Isabella, determined to win, showed an improved offense in the second half, but Thompson resorted to a stronger defense and held the game 7 to 0.

Thompson High's next game will be played with Columbiana on October 18th.

HOMEMAKERS CLASS IS NOW ORGANIZED AT PEA RIDGE

After a discussion of some present day buying problems the following officers were elected: Virgie Lovelady, president; Mrs. R. K. Booth, vice-president; Mrs. Swann, secretary. Refreshments consisting of punch and sandwiches were enjoyed.

Since the purpose of the club is to study phases of homemaking problems, the group discussed possibilities for the program for the course of twelve lessons. It was decided that a study of clothing to include selection, dying, making over, sewing and other topics of practical value would be followed. Other special request lessons on foods will be included. Miss Rebecca Pate of Montevallo will sponsor the club.

You Are Invited To Buy In Montevallo

There is a noticeable increase of activity among the merchants of Montevallo toward seeking to induce more people to come here to do their trading.

Evidently our business concerns have observed that much trade from nearby communities that ought to come to Montevallo has been going elsewhere. They have determined to keep that trade in Montevallo where it belongs.

This is a most worthy purpose on the part of Montevallo business concerns. We need more business here. Our city has not been getting its share of the business in this territory.

Our merchants are prepared to fully serve this territory. They have the goods. The prices are right, and they certainly appreciate every penny of business that is brought here.

Montevallo is a good place to trade. It is the best town in Shelby County. It is as good as any place you can go. The Times is glad to join with the merchants and business houses here in urging the people of this section to come to Montevallo to buy your merchandise.

From week to week you will notice advertisemnts by our merchants in the Times. Read them and you will, no doubt, be convinced that you can find no better opportunities elsewhere. Get the habit of coming to Montevallo.

She has come to Alabama College directly from the Sorbonne.

Miss Laclavere received the bachelor's degree at Cannes in mathematics before securing a law degree in Paris. She is now working on her thesis for the doctor's degree in law.

Both students are instructing classes and conducting conversations in French at tables in the dining hall.

IN MEMORY

In memory of my beloved sister, Mrs. Paula Busby Seagle, who passed to her eternal home on the 12th day of October, 1926, in memory also of her little son, Paul Craven, who went to join her on the 24th day of June, 1934.

There is a vacancy in our family circle which can never be filled and the loss was great, but our father knows best, and when this life is over, we have the glorious privilege of meeting our loved ones in that other world where there will be neither sorrow nor tears.—Mrs. Johnnie Busby Alexander, Calera, Ala.

More than 150 students at Alabama College participated in recent try-outs for the Glee Club, according to H. D. LeBaron, director. The representation in this group was almost evenly distributed among the classes and among the departments. The majority of the candidates were from the Music, Home Economics, Secretarial Science Education, Sociology and English departments.

The following number of candidates were from each class: Freshman, 58; sophomore, 47; junior 36 and senior 13. From the total number of applicants the club will be chosen and the membership announced at an early date.

Work Started For Widening Highway

PLANS CALL FOR EMPLOYMENT OF TWO HUNDRED WORKMEN

One hundred men went to work last Monday morning on the job of widening the road bed of the Birmngham-Montgomery Highway going through Shelby County. The workmen are divided into four squads working on four sections of the road.

It is stated that the roadbed will be widened about 32 to 34 feet, and the length of all culverts, pipe lines and drainage structures will be increased accordingly.

This is a state highway project which is being done with relief labor. An office has been established in Calera, from where the highway engineers and officials will direct the work. Mr. R. L. Williamson is the resident engineer in charge.

It is stated that the number of men on the job will be about doubled as soon as the Shelby County authorities work out the matter of securing the necessary right-of-way for this improved highway.

When the right-of-way question is settled, it is stated that highway department plans call for 192 workmen; a general superintendent; assistant superintendent; a field foreman; and four subforemen; also the use of four steam shovels, 20 trucks, two tractors and a road machine.

This is the layout for completing the new roadbed, after which the plans are to resurface the whole road with new material.

New Strand Theatre Ready In Two Weeks

Finishing touches are now being put on the new building of the Strand Theatre, and the proprietor, Mr. Eddie Watson ventures the guess that he will be ready for the opening within the next two weeks.

Observers who have made inspection of the arrangements to be embodied in the new Strand are unanimous in the opinion that the place will be a distinct credit to the city of Montevallo. It will be the largest and most beautiful theatre to be found in any city of this size in Alabama.

Mr. Watson deserves the appreciation of the theatre goers in this section of Alabama for providing such a splendid facility for future entertainment. He will be rewarded for his efforts by a larger patronage of his fine shows.

Hunting Season Open For Nearly All Game

Montgomery, Ala., Oct., 9. — September having opened the hunting season on doves in Alabama, October will bring more nimrods into the field as the hunting bans are lifted on squirrels and fur-bearing animals.

Last year the hunters in a majority of the counties of the state hunted squirrels during the months of October, November and December, while those in 26 south-central counties hunted in November, December and January. This year, however, the state conservation board has prescribed a uniform open season on squirrels for the entire state and it will open October 15 and close January 15.

This month also opened the season on bears, foxes, o'possums and raccoons hunted as game, this sport being permitted from October 1 through February 29. The taking of furbearers for their furs, pelts and hides will not be permitted before November 20.

Gathering momentum steadily, the fall hunting season will reach full bloom next month when the open season on quail, deer and ducks arrive.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS

Applications for Rhodes Scholarships must be made this year by November 2nd, according to Lucien Giddens, Secretary of the State Committee of Selection. Alabama candidates should submit their applications to the secretary of the committee at Alabama College, Montevallo.

The committee will meet in Birmingham early in December to name two representatives for the district competition, at which the final appointments will be made. Thirty-two Rhodes Scholars are named each year to represent this country at Oxford University, England.

The scholarship affords 400 pounds annually, covering expenses of study and travel for three years. A student is eligible to apply on recommendation of his college if he has attended an institution in this state or resides in this state.

In 1934 the largest number of applications in the history of the scholarship were received by the various committees of selection. Candidates must be between nineteen and twenty-five years of age. The Alabama committee is appointed by Dr. Frank Adelotte, American Secretary of the Rhodes Trust.

JACK HAYES HERE

Jack Hayes, second baseman of the Chicago White Sox baseball team, has returned home for the winter. He will devote his time to the interests of the Hayes Chevrolet Company, of which business he is the owner.

Dr. A. F. Harman, president of Alabama College, was the speaker at the regular weekly luncheon of the Birmingham Kiwanis Club of Birmingham Tuesday at the Tutwiler Hotel. The program has been arranged by Borden Burr, president of the club.

Centreville Defeats Montevallo, 12-6

Centreville High School barely eked out a victory over Montevallo High School last Friday afternoon on the Centreville field.

The Bibb County team, which was expected by many to romp on the smaller Montevallo eleven, ran up against some tough opposition. The lighter, inexperienced M. H. S. outplayed the Centreville eleven for three quarters only to lose out before the opponents' attack in the fourth quarter.

Early in the first quarter, Montevallo gained the lead when Green, a halfback, intercepted a pass on the Montevallo ten-yard line and ran ninety yards for the first touchdown of the game. This concluded the scoring until the fourth quarter.

In the fourth quarter, Centreville, after a sustained drive in which they were aided by penalties, placed the ball on the Montevallo two-yard line. Harbin, halfback, carried the ball over for a touchdown.

On the last play of the game, Centreville scored on a short pass to Mitchell.

There were no individual stars for Montevallo. Every man on the team played excellent football while he was in the game. Martin, Centreville halfback, thrilled the crowd with his brilliant offensive work.

Villadsen, Montevallo fullback, injured his leg near the end of the first half and was unable to return to the game.

School Spirit

What's the matter with the school spirit of the Montevallo High students this year? It is sadly lacking at our school.

At the opening game of the year, barely enough money to pay the visiting team was taken in at the gates. A large number of spectators stood outside the fence and watched the game. To those boys who practice every afternoon in order that they might put on a good exhibition of football for us on Friday afternoon, this is very discouraging. Surely we students can muster enough spirit to pay a dime for admission to the games.

Montevallo vs. West Blocton

This week Montevallo plays West Blocton on the local field. The faculty has agreed to cooperate with the students in making the game a gala affair. School will be dismissed at 1:30 and the band will be on hand to cheer things up with some good mosic. Incidentally, Mr. Kildea has worked very hard to give us a good band and is progressing in a very satisfactory manner.

So let's get together and boost our team. Speak a word of encouragement to the players. Show some spirit and enthusiasm and let's make this a "beat West Blocton week."

To the townspeople and college students, we extend our cordial invitation to come out and see a good football game.

This Year's Schedule

Coach Hicks has announced the football schedule for the current season. Two games have already been played. Isabella is the only new opponent on the schedule, which is as follows:

October 11, West Blocton here; October 18, Piper, at Piper; October 25, Siluria, at Siluria; Nov. 1, Isabella, here; November 8, Clanton, at Clanton; November 15, Vincent, at Vincent; November 22, open date; November 27, Columbiana at Columbiana.

Coach Hicks, with the aid of Mr. Collins, has had a tough time in whipping a light and inexperienced squad into shape for the season. Seven regulars were lost through graduation.

The team is light in comparison with previous M. H. S. teams but they are a spirited bunch which is one of the essential things in playing football. They will make it tough for some of the larger teams.

I will appreciate it if anyone who has additional sports news will send it to Ralph Henderson, Box 273, Aldrich, Ala.

Chappell, all of Birmingham; also Rev. Cox of Montevallo. The topic was "Our Goal and How to Gain It." Almost every member took a part in presenting the program. All the elders of the church were present, thus encouraging the Endeavors. It being consecration Sunday it was edifying to hear the responses by select Bible verses by visitors, as well as members when the roll was called. After the business meeting, conducted by our wide-awake president, Clara Lee, the meeting was closed by the mispah benediction.

After a short intermission Bro. Cox preached an interesting and instructive sermon, which I feel surely was highly appreciated by all present. Bro. Cox kindly agreed to preach for us each first Sunday afternoon after Christian Endeavor.

A BROWNIE PACK

"Girls of Brownie age, seven to ten years, are at a most interesting and significant stage of their development," so writes Mirma Wallace in the Girl Scout Leader, "Baby has been left behind; Brownie can make a limited number of decisons for themselves. Adolescence with its questions about dates and senior high is still far ahead. The importance of this age is sometimes not sensed en overlook the little girl who is by grown folks. They relax and oftso independent, lively, imaginative, self-sufficient, who is growing rapidly, eating enormous amounts and geting ill less frequently.

Wise planning for the little girl contributes not only to her present happiness, but to her usefulness as a citizen in the years to come.

With present organization of small home, small family, large school and almost non - existent neighborhood, the informal pack makes a distinct contribution to the child's life, since this age child delights in clubbing with those of her own age.

This group should best be operated under a pack committee, composed of three or more persons interested in child development, and who would identify themselves with Girl Scout groups. Parents are welcomed into this work, yet others are equally as suited to do a good job, either on a committee, or actually as leaders, since the committee is only an advisory group.

The Brown Owl, or leader, should be one, with capacity of recalling her own childhood, and observing carefully children at play at present. She is to be friend and adult counselor of the children, a co-leader is the tawny owl.

A pack should provide wholesome recreation under proper leadership to supplement the home, church, the school and assist in preparing the child for the next step in life by guiding her in social development, mental stimulation, emotional poise and stability.

Giving a positive expression to childhood urges and interests, does help prevent behavior difficulties, social maladjustments and neighborhood mischief.

$330,000 Check For School Funds

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY PAYS KILOWATT TAX TO STATE

Thomas W. Martin, president, Alabama Power Company, today delivered to H . S. Long, president, State Tax Commission, check of Alabama Power Company for $330,514.65, to cover the hydro-electric kilowatt hour taxes assessed for the special educational trust fund of the state, these taxes being approxiately $40,000 more than in 1934. Upon delivery of this check, President Martin stated that the company was very glad indeed to know that these taxes would be used for education, especially at this time when the schools are in need of all available funds for current expenses.

The entire amount of this check will be devoted to educational purposes. From previous years' distributions of the Educational Trust Fund, it appears that from this payment of the Power Company today, counties will receive for elementary and high schools, $200,000 and state institutions, $130,000. Among the larger beneficiaries appear: Alabama College at Montevallo, $16,000; Alabama Polytechnic Institute, $38,000; University of Albama, $30,000; the seven Teachers' colleges, $23,000; Jefferson County, $14,000; Mobillle County, $4,200; Walker County, $7,600; Cullman County, $7,200; Marshall County, $6,000; Lauderdale County, $5,000; Crenshaw County, $5,700.

Mr. Martin further stated that the company's total taxes for 1935 would approximate $2,250,000, the largest amount in its history and that the company continued to be the state's largest taxpayer.

A. F. of L. Sponsoring A Thirty-Hour Week

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 14.—The American Federation of Labor convention voted unanimously today to fight for a 30-hour work week throughout American business and industry.

"We're going out of here and fight for this as we have never fought before," shouted William Green, federation president, just before the convention approved the shorter work week committee's report that the federation should use both its economic strength and its influence in congress to reduce working hours.

"If there's anyone who opposes this, let him get out of the way because the American Federation of Labor will not tolerate a slacker."

This last remark followed a question from the floor by W. R. Trotter, delegate from International Typographical union, at to whether the advocates of the 30-hour week could depend on "at least neutrality from those members of the executive council who do not support this."

Government To Build Huge Recreation Park In Northern Shelby County

Purchase of 11,000 acres of depleted and non-productive land in Shelby County has been authorized by Washington in a telegram to the land utilization division of the Resettlement Administration.

The project will be known as the Oak Mountain Industrial recreational project and will involve an expenditure of $102,578.

It is located on the northwest border of Shelby County and adjoins Jefferson County and the City of Birmingham. It is bounded on the southwest by the Montgomery-Birmingham highway, on the northeast by the Florida Short Route, on the northwest by a county road connecting Pelham and Leeds and on the southeast by a dirt road running in a northeasterly direction from the Birmingham-Montgomery highway to the Florida Short Route.

Rugged and mountainous the area contains many pirturesque streams and lends itself naturally to the development of a forest park and wild life preserve.

Aside from its development as a game preserve its proximity to Birmingham will make the area valuable as a recreational center.

Families now residing on the unproductive farms within the region will be resettled, through the Rural Resettlement division.

Tentative plans for the development of the area were announced as follows:

"1. The range road. A road planned to connect the Birmingham-Montgomery highway on the west with the Florida Short Route on the east. This road will be about nine miles in length.

"2. The Valley road. This road will make the lake site available to visitors from either highway, the Birmingham-Montgomery highway and Florida Short Route Highway.

"3. The lake site and dam. The lake planned is to be about 150 acres in area and will require a dam about 100 feet long and of considerable height. This alone will require the use of many men.

"4. Camp and cottage sites and buildings. Plans include cottages for week end use or longer periods for persons on vacation. Also camp facilities for organized groups of underprivileged boys and girls.

"5. Public lake and building development. Buildings will consist of an administrative building, bath houses, public pavilion, boat houses, and the like.

"6. Roadside cleanup and fire breaks. This important work is of vast extent and will get an early start and give work to a large group.

"7. Forestry cleanup and reforestation. This work will provide good forests for beauty, game sanctuaries and will provide many man-days of work."

This project will employ approximately an average of 813 men a month and in the future will give permanent work to many families in the district.

LEGION WILL URGE UNIVERSAL DRAFT

American Legion leaders are preparing to place national defense and universal draft legislation alongside bonus payment and widows and orphans pensions as their primary objectives in the next Congress.

They believe public concern over the Italian-Ethiopian war will enhance chances of the proposals being enacted at the session beginning in January.

A summary of legislative recommendations adopted at the legion's recent national convention in St. Louis is being prepared for presentation to the national executive committee at a meeting November 1 and 2 in Indianapolis.

The committee will designate certain of the recommendations as primary objectives and the others as secondary.

Since the convention J. Ray Murphy, the new legion commander, has spoken strongly in favor of immediate adoption of the universal draft plan and an "adequate" program of national defense, mentioning them along with the bonus and pensions for widows and orphans of veterans.

Under the universal draft, in which the legion convention this year reaffirmed its faith, those employed at home in time of war would be under the government's jurisdiction equally as much as soldiers.

At the last session of congress the organization backed the McSwain bill, designed to "prevent profiteering in time of war and to equalize the burdens of war," but as passed by the house this measure specifically exempted industrial employes from wartime conscription. The universal draft also omitted from war profits legislation advocated by the senate munitions committee. The session ended without either the McSwain or the senate committee's plan being enacted into law.

J. T. Davis Proprietor Of Montevallo Bakery

Mr. J. T. Davis announces this week that he has purchased the bakery business of Mr. McGaughy, in Montevallo, and will conduct the same in the future as sole owner and manager.

The bakery was established here a year ago by Mr. Davis, who later sold it to Mr. McGaughy. During the time Mr. McGaughy owned the business, Mr. Davis was employed as baker.

Mr. Davis is a man of long experience in the bakery business. He says he will be prepared to serve the needs of the people of Montevallo fully and efficiently with fresh baked bread, pies and cakes every day. One of his specialties is birthday cakes and special orders of all kinds.

Another interesting feature of the bakery business of Mr. Davis is his fine sandwich service. He will be prepared to serve the finest kind of toasted sandwiches of all kinds for a dime. The Montevallo Bakery is the name under which the business will be operated in the future. Union regulations will be observed in the operation of the business.

WHO WILL BE "DOG CATCHER"

Here is an office any of us might get—"dog catcher."

Under the Walton act of the 1935 legislature, every dog in Alabama must be inoculated against rabies before March 13, 1936, but health officials have expressed the belief the reduction of the inoculation fee from $1 to 25 cents will make the law practically inoperative.

The act provides for inoculation of dogs in receipt of payment of a 25-cent fee, with the tag which is attached to the bottle of inoculation serum to be transferred to the dog's collar. All dogs not wearing a collar with the tag attached may be impounded after March 13, and if not called for by the owner, may be destroyed within two weeks.

Dr. J. N. Baker, state health officer who drafted and sponsored the original bill carrying the $1 fee, said he did not believe the 25-cent fee would bring in sufficient funds to finance the enforcement provisions of the law. He pointed out that the vaccine itself would cost around 19 cents leaving only 6 cents for the cost of administering and for enforcement.

The act provides for a rabies inspector for every county and as many deputies as are needed but all salaries and expenses must be financed by the innoculation fee.

Plans are reported under way to amend the law at the announced special session in January to permit each county to fix the fee according to its needs.

BIRMINGHAM POST CONTINUES RAPID GROWTH

The Birmingham Post continues in the establishment of a most enviable record among Southern newspapers. The Post is a Scripps-Howard newspaper, established fourteen years ago, yet it now enjoys the second largest circulation in the State of Alabama, is steadily growing, and is known as "The most thoroughly read daily newspaper in the field."

Many newspapers, much older than the Post, envy this youngster's record which can be said to be due to . . . the outstanding clarity of its presentation of the news . . . the quality and national prominence of its features, and last but far from least . . . the vigor, fearlessness and independence of its editorial policies.

Many of the thousands of Post readers are not always in unanimous agreement with the paper's editorial policy . . . but, all applaud the independent thought, and action that constitute the keystone of The Post's editorial policies.

There are no outside influences . . . The Post is financially independent. It has no axes to grind, no special interests to serve today or in the future. Its editorial independence is the foundation of The Post's remarkable success and rapid growth.

With the addition during the year of many strong features presented exclusively by the Post, and a greatly expanded Woman's Section, it is now a greater newspaper than ever before.

ROOTERS WANTED

Montevallo High School is bidding for more rooters and better rooters. The faculty and students are united and determined in the effort to make the school command a keener interest among the citizens of the community. We congratulate them for this splendid effort.

Just now particular stress is being laid upon the school's football schedule. The boys are playing hard to make the athletic part of the school program interesting, attractive and worth while. They deserve the appreciation of all.

If we encourage and support the boys in their games, we may be sure we can better interest them in their work. Root for Montevallo High School. Go to the games. Let them know you have the Montevallo spirit, and don't hesitate to shout it out.

SUPPORTING DR. HARMAN

Dr. A. F. Harman, the new president of Alabama College at Montevallo, already has made a decided "hit" with homefolks. This comes straight from Representative R. A. Reid, who sells automobiles in the college town.

Mr. Reid, like a large number of his fellow townsmen, pulled strong for Dean Napier when the bidding was open for the college presidency, but once the issue was settled he lined right up with the new administration to give it 100 per cent backing.

The rest of the citizens of Montevallo have taken the same attitude," said Representative Reid, "and the whole town has been deeply impressed by Dr. Harman. The college has one of its biggest enrollments in years and faces a good year under his leadership.

He gave Dr. Harman full credit for swinging Montevallo's appropriation this year. When the locals started tossing bouquets at him, he said: "Hold on, I helped, but Dr. Harman got it."—Alabama Journal.

PEA RIDGE GROUP MEETING

Last Thursday afternoon eighteen homemakers of Pea Ridge community had their second meeting at the Pea Ridge church. Virgie Lovelady, president, called the meeting to order. After roll call by the secretary, Mrs. Booth, the president appointed three group captains for the groups of which the club is composed. Jean Richardson of Alabama College, led group singing.

The discussion for the day was on making wise selections of cotton dress materials. After a study of the characteristics of cotton fibers, various tests were made on yarns from materials and on dress materials to determine their quality. Colors appropriate for different types of people were then discussed. Each member present tried on different colors and with the help of the group decided on those colors most appropriate for herself.

When the lesson was finished punch and cookies were served by several of the club members. The next meeting will be Thursday, October 17, at 2:30 p.m., at the church. All ladies of the community are invited to attend.

Edward Tomlinson, noted as an authority on South America, closed his series of lectures at Alabama College Tuesday. In his five addresses here he has used the following subjects: "Peoples and Civilizations of the Andes, Social and Political Aspects of South America, Amazing Brazil and Argentina, Democracy and Dictatorship in South America, Venezuela, and Columbia; and What America Means to Us."

Mr. Tomlinson spoke twice Tuesday, appearing at convocation that morning and at a meeting of English students that afternoon. Sunday afternoon he lectured at the Y. W. C. A. Vesper Service, and on Monday addressed a Spanish Class and the Contemporary Problems Class. He was presented on the artist and lecture series of the college.

Above is a picture of the $330,514.65 check of the Alabama Power Company delivered last week by its President, Thomas W. Martin, to H. S. Long, President, State Tax Commission. The entire amount of this check will be devoted to educational purposes. From previous years' distributions of the Educational Trust Fund, it appears that from this payment of the Power Company today, counties will receive for elementary and high schools, $200,000, and State institutions, $130,000. Among the larger beneficiaries appear: Alabama College at Montevallo, $16,000; Alabama Polytechnic Institute, $38,000; University of Alabama, $30,000; the seven Teachers' Colleges, $23,000; Jefferson County, $14,000; Mobile County, $4,200; Walker County, $7,600; Cullman County, $7,200; Marshall County, $6,000; Lauderdale County, $5,000; Crenshaw County, $5,700.

11,000,000 JOBLESS

This statement was made by the federation in its monthly business survey in which it forecast continued business improvement. It added, however:

"This Fall's business pickup indicates a reversion to the pre-depression type of business expansion when business men increased production because they saw a chance for good profits, without considering whether a firm foundation of workers' buying power had been built to sustain it."

The National Economy League made a public study by John C. Gebhart, research director, Sunday in which it was said that relief and public works costs "if not greatly curtailed, will soon undermine our national credit and make it difficult ever to return to the state and local governments the responsibility which is rightfully theirs, of caring for their own unemployed."

CLERKS, MERCHANTS QUIT

Negotiations between the Merchants Association of West Blocton and the local union of retail clerks, which have been held in an effort to draft a wage and hour contract for retail clerks, have been called off for the present, it is reported.

At the last meeting of committees from both organizations it was decided an adequate contract could not be drafted until an agreement has been reached between the local United Mine Workers and coal operators Both committees agreed the present store card agreements would continue in force until the new contract is finally drafted and ratified by both associations.

REV. JOHN A. MAY IS GOING TO LOUISIANA THIS WEEK

Rev. John A. May, evangelist, will leave Friday, the 18th, for the Louisiana Conference, where he will hold two revivals for the pastor, Rev. C. M. Morris, first at Wesley Church, and the second at Greensburg, La. Some months ago Mr. May held a union meeting at Mangam, La., with Mr. Morris leading, at the school auditorium, with about six to eight trucks running. The crowds ran up to 1,000 people some nights, with about 500 converts and reclamations estimated.

SMALLEST COTTON CROP

Athens, Ala.—Limestone County is said to face the smallest cotton crop since long before the depression. Cotton experts estimate the county total will not pass 27,500 bales, as compared with 42,000 bales about three years ago, when the county made its bumper crop. The low total is attributed to the drouth of the summer months. This fact, together with the fact that TVA clearance work is almost complete in this county, and that hundreds of workers are being laid off weekly has put a bad crimp in the local pay roll and in fall business with merchants.

ATHENS PEOPLE HURT

Athens, Ala.—Mrs. Louis B. Grasse and daughter, Miss Virginia Grasse, were seriously hurt in an automobile accident on the highway between Birmingham and Talladega Saturday night, when a hit and run driver is said to have sideswiped their car and forced them into the ditch and a post. The car also was badly wrecked. They were carried to the home of Richard Grasse, of Birmingham, a kinsman, and will not be able to be moved for several days. Miss Grasse is head of the home economics department at Joe Bradley High School, Huntsville.

SPORTS

Ralph Henderson, Editor

West Blocton Defeats Montevallo 3 to 0

For the second successive week, Montevallo lost a football game in the last quarter. For three quarters they held a fighting West Blocton team to a dead-lock. It appeared as if the game would end scoreless. However West Blocton placed the ball deep in Montevallo territory late in the fourth quarter and after they were held for three downs, Darris dropped back to the twenty-yard line and place-kicked the ball through the goal posts for a field goal. This was sufficient to give them a 3 to 0 victory over Montevallo.

The Montevallo line outplayed a heavier line throughout the game. Green kept up his nice work as punter. One punt, which he kicked from his own thirty-yard line, went on across the West Blocton goal line; a distance of seventy yards.

If there were any individual honors to be given out they would go to Green, whose punting was one of the main reasons that West Blocton failed to make a touchdown; to Hartley and Winslett who were smearing the West Blocton end runs and also doing some swell blocking for the Montevallo offense; and to Little, who is rapidly developing into a fine tackle.

For the West Blocton team, Smith and Moore were outstanding in the backfield and Dyer and Israel were stars in the line.

A large crowd turned out for the game and they showed their appreciation of good playing by their cheering which was led by the high school cheerleaders, Billie Ruth Fitts and James Black.

The Montevallo-Piper Game

The Montevallo-Piper game, which was originally scheduled to be played in Piper, has been changed to Montevallo. The reason for this is because of the strike. Piper will be unable to raise money to pay Montevallo for coming over there.

The Montevallo supporters will be glad to learn this because the M.H.S. team has improved remarkably, and they will get to see one of the year's outstanding games. Piper has defeated several of the state's leading prep teams and for this reason will enter the game a favorite to win over M.H.S. Bulldogs.

One of the most gratifying things about the Montevallo-West Blocton game was the response to the plea for more school spirit. The entire student body turned out and their cheers rang out.

Congratulations to Billie Ruth Fitts and James Black for the wonderful jobs that they turned in as cheer-leaders.

If the student body supports the team as well this Friday, I sincerely believe that we will beat Piper.

The members of the Freshman Executive Committee of Alabama College have been announced as follows: Misses Ola Martin, Greensboro, chairman; Kathleen Williams, Pratt City; Eula Moore, Clayton, and Evelyn Gaines, Attalla. They will serve until the second semester when the regular class officers will be named.

Mesdames P. D. D. Pendleton, L. D. Gilbert and A. D. Chappell of Wilton spent Tuesday in Birmingham.

Mr. Inzer Reid, Dr. Cox and Miss June Reid spent Sunday afternoon in Birmingham.

CIVIC CLUB NOTES

Attendance was unusually good at Wednesday's meeting. This is a good indication of the interest of Montevallo business and professional men in furthering the progress of public affairs which are the objectives of the Civic Club.

W. M. Allen reported for the committee on the telephone question. He stated that the committee has found that any change in our phone system from the present, either to an automatic or dial system, would entail higher costs to the subscriber. Therefore, the committee would not recommend any steps by the club until the sentiment of the individual phone users could be ascertained.

The question of Shelby County's participation in the three-way paving program for roads was discussed. The roads committee was asked to see the members of the Board of Revenue and urge them to appropriate one cent of the county gasoline tax for participation on the east and west highway through the county.

Attractive entrances into Montevallo over the highways was again discussed. In response to a request from the Study Club, President Giddens appointed a committee composed of Dr. Reid, Luther Shaw, and Mr. Lebaron, to serve with a committee from the Study Club, in working out suitable plans for this beautification and improvement.

The club expressed an interest in working with the citizens in support of a movement to improve equipment of the high school football team. Mr. Ike Nathews led the discussion of this question, urging that something be done about it immediately to prevent injury to the players through faulty and inadequate playing equipment.

Prof. Tidwell sanctioned what was said by Mr. Nathews, and expressed the thanks of the school for the increased interest being shown by the community in the athletic program.

A play was announced to be given on Friday night, October 18th, the entire proceeds of which will go to the athletic association of the high school.

Prof. Tidwell also announced that contract is soon to be let for erection of an auditorium at the high school.

Miss Eleanor Reenie, of the Speech Department, of Alabama College, was introduced by President Giddens, for the entertainment number on the program. Miss Rennie used her time in telling a most interesting story, prefacing her number with the observation that men usually are as much interested in being entertained as in being impressed. After she had finished her story, I believe the club members would have voted that her program was both entertaining and impressive.

Who Owns The Telephone Company

MORE than eight hundred thousand people own the securities of the Bell Telephone System and most of these folks are small investors. No person owns as much as one-fifth of one per cent of the outstanding stock. The largest single stockholder, an insurance company, has less than one per cent and the average holding is only twenty-eight shares per stockholder.

Nearly half of the stock of the Bell System is owned by women, about two hundred and ten thousand of whom are housewives. There are about ninety thousand clerks and salespeople who have invested their savings in this business and thirty thousand manual laborers.

There are other thousands of farmers, merchants, professional men and others in every State of the Union who have placed their money and faith in the telephone industry. Trust funds for educational institutions, churches, orphanages, and homes for the aged, whose funds must be carefully guarded, have invested large amounts in this business.

No other company is owned by so many different people as is the Bell System.

It is this vast army of small investors who own the telephone business and it is these folks who have, by their sacrifice and saving, supplied the capital to build for you the world's finest and best telephone system. They own the telephone company.

Anything affecting the financial stability of this business directly affects them and the army of telephone workers who are devoting their lives to furnishing you the very best service possible during good times and bad, at a cost to you as low as possible, consistent with financial safety.

Today the Southern Bell company is able to earn only three and seven-tenths per cent on the money invested in the State to furnish you telephone service.

NEW STRAND THEATRE OPENS NEXT MONDAY

Mr. Eddie Watson announces ready for the opening of the Strand Theatre on next Monday, following the complete rebuilding of the house which is more than double the capacity of the former place.

The programs will begin at 6:40 and 8:35. There will be no increase in the price of admission.

Mr. Watson is glad to welcome his many friends and patrons to his new show place, which everyone will concede is the most attractive and up-to-date theatre in this section of Alabama. During the past week the building was inspected by a representative of the State Fire Marshal, and was given the stamp of approval. This means a guarantee to the public that all prescribed safety measures against fire have been carefully observed in the construction of the building. The projection room has been given special attention, and is so constructed that it is completely safe-guarded against all dangers to the patrons of the show.

The people of Montevallo and surrounding community are glad to have the announcement of the re-opening of the Strand. Mr. Watson has a series of bookings that will guarantee the finest kind of entertainment throughout the coming season.

SAVED FROM MAD DOG

Decatur, Ala.—A timely rescue by two deputies probably saved a group of women and children from serious injury from a rabid dog here Saturday.

Deputies Aaron Walton and W. E. Kilgore were riding in a patrol car and passed a vacant store building where the dog was lunging and snapping at several women and children huddled in a group. The officers left their car and Kilgore fired at the dog but missed.

The animal ran across the street but whirled and dashed back through the group of people and up a flight of sairs leading to rooms over the store building.

Several children had taken refuge in the upstairs hallway and as officers followed the dog it was attempting to attack the children. Kilgore fired three times, all of the bullets taking effect and the animal fell dead. Examination of the head at the laboratory here revealed the animal was suffering from rabies.

At the State Y. W. C. A. Conference at Howard College October 18 and 19, Alabama College will be represented by Misses Isabel Henderson, Hazel McClendon and Sara Kyser. Miss Henderson is president of the state organization.

The GUATEMALAN EXHIBIT

The Division of Practical and Fine Arts is sponsoring an exhibition of textiles and costumes, and of modern textiles derived from the native Guatemalan art. This exhibit was received from the National Alliance of Art and Industry, New York. It was collected by Ruth Reeves, textile designer, under the auspices of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

It is considered the finest textile exhibit displayed in New York since 1927. Its only presentation in the South is at Alabama College, where it will remain through October 27th. It is in Rooms 106 and 107, Bloch Hall; in the corridor of the second floor, Bloch Hall; and in the exhibit case in the Library.

This exhibit is so varied, so full of color and vitality that it is most stimulating. There is a wide range of patterns, colors and textures.

The entire exhibit cannot be shown at all hours during the week due to classes in Rooms 106 and 107, but it will be fully displayed at the following times:

Wednesday evenings, October 16th and 23rd—6:30 to 9:30.

Saturdays, October 12th, 19th and 26th—9:30-5:30.

Sunday afternoons, October 13th, 20th and 27th—1:00 to 5:30.

If the above dates are not convenient for attendance, the exhibit will be displayed any evening or at other convenient hours of the day if application is made at the Home Economics office during the day; or in the evenings to Miss Eddy at the College Arms Apartment or to Miss Kennedy at Miss Brooke's home. Students and faculty members are urged to attend and to invite their friends and relatives.

HUNTING PROHIBITED ON ACCOUNT OF FIRE DANGERS

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 14.—Following a conference with R. F. Hemingway, federal forest supervisor here, Conservation Commissioner I. T. Quinn announced that no hunting will be permitted in the Alabama National Forest until the fire hazard in North Alabama has been reduced.

"Due to the extreme fire hazard brought on by continued drouth the federal forest service thinks it inadvisable to grant any hunting privileges in the Alabama National Forest until the fire menace in North Alabama has been reduced," Commissioner Quinn said.

This means no squirrel hunting will be permitted in the forest when the squirrel season opens in the rest of the state on October 15. Hunting of fur-bearers for sport, on which the season opened October 1, also must be discontinued in the forest until the ban is lifted.

Fires have been raging in a half dozen North Alabama counties for several days, causing damage estimated in the millions. The 145,000-acre national forest covers parts of Winston, Lawrence and Franklin counties and, although fires have been reported in Winston, the flames thus far have not invaded the forest.

Pleasant Church, in Lauderdale County. Mr. Morris, a native of the county, was held in high esteem by a legion of friends. In addition to his daughter, another, Mrs. Owen Haddock, of Florence, and three sons survive.

Sports Fans Follow The American Boy

Boys and young men of this city who wish to improve their tennis service, their basket-shooting eyes, their forward passing talent, or their crawl stroke, can enlist the aid of the nation's foremost coaches and players by subscribing to THE AMERICAN BOY magazine and following the sports interviews and fiction stories that appear each month.

"When I was in high school," says a famous decathlon champion, "I read a track article in THE AMERICAN BOY that gave me my first clear-cut idea of the western style of high jumping. At practice I laid the open magazine on the grass and studied it as I worked out. That afternoon I increased the height of my jump three inches."

That was a long time ago, but today thousands of future champions just as eagerly follow THE AMERICAN BOY.

"This year," states Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor, "our staff writers have gone to the two greatest football teams of the country—Minnesota and Pittsburgh—for first-hand tips on strategy, blocking, tackling, passing, and the fine points of play. They have interviewed Jack Medica, the world's fastest swimmer, and his coach, Ray Daughters. Gone to Eastern High School of Washington, D. C., Eastern Interscholastic basketball champions. In the past they have followed the Grapefruit Circuit of the major leagues in Florida, sat on the bench at the Rose Bowl, sought out the famous runners, divers, All-American ends, tackles, and backfield men, to bring their story of how to play the game to the young men of America.

"In addition to our fiction, adventure, exploration, hobby counsel, and vocational help, we shall continue to encourage young men to improve their game in every line of sport."

Send your subscrption to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Bvld., Detroit, Mich. Enclose with your name and address $1 for a year's subscription, $2 for three years, and add 50 cents a year if you want the subscription to go to a foreign address. On newsstands, 10c a copy.

AFTER THE RAILS ARE ABANDONED

Arkansas City, like nearly every other city in the country, has had its experience with railroads being forced to be allowed to abandon lines because of lack of business. Here is an editorial from the Grain and Feed Review, Minneapolis, Minn., which gives an interesting slant on this problem:

"Some eighteen months ago the Omaha Railroad abandoned its branch line from Sioux City, Iowa to Wynot, Neb., a distance of about forty-five miles. The line had been operating at a substantial loss for some time prior to its abandonment and because of its proximity to Sioux City, most of the business which it would have normally carried was diverted to trucks. When the petition for abandonment was presented by the railroad to the Interstate Comerce Commission, that body granted a stay of one year to determine whether or not the people living in terrtory tributary to the line wanted railroad service or not. After the year of grace had expired the I. C. C. granted the petition of the railroad and the tracks were torn up.

The truckers assured the townspeople and the farmers that they would be entirely able to fill their transportation needs. They pointed out that the bulk of the transportation service was already in their hand and that they could handle what little remained.

Now, let us see what happened in this Sioux City, Wynott territory. First of all, the grain rate by rail to Sioux City and the East was three cents per hundred from the furtherest point on the line. Now the rate is ten cents per bushel to Sioux City. Coal was laid down at the furtherest town for twenty cents per ton, while at present truckers are offering to deliver coal to close-in points for two dollars a ton. Farm values have depreciated from fifty to seventy-five per cent. Some farmers are fifty miles from a railroad. Homes in the towns erected at a cost of $4,000.00 are begging to buyers at levels as low as $500.00, and there are no buyers. Lastly, the Omaha road paid $28,000 each year in taxes and this sum had been shifted over to the remaining taxpayers.

This is not a nice picture, yet if the rural merchants and rural communities do not awaken, it is a scene that is going to be enacted in scores of towns that today are thriving trading points."

We do not want this to happen in Alabama.

VOLUME 3, NUMBER 28 MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1935 SUBSCRIPTION $1.00 PER YEAR

Survey Is Made Of Postoffice Lot

INITIAL STEP TOWARD DRAFT OF PLANS FOR THE NEW BUILDING

An engineer, with transit, compass, spy-glass, and all of the innumerable and puzzling gadgets used by his craft, has been "taking the measurements" of the Cox property in Montevallo this week, preparatory to institution of the initial steps toward construction of our new postoffice building.

Interviewed by The Times editor Tuesday, we asked the engineer if there were anything about his operations which he might be permitted to tell the people through the town newspaper. "Nothing at all," he replied. "I am taking the specifications of this property under instructions of the United States Treasury Department."

We understand he will not stop with what he may be able to observe on the surface of the property. It is said he will dig a big hole about the middle of the lot, to see what he may find underneath.

Mrs. Alice Yeager, our local photographer, was engaged Tuesday to make pictures of the property.

Doubtless it would be safe to assume that the report of the engineer will go at once to the Treasury Department at Washington, where it will serve as a guide for planning experts in making the specifications of the bulding. Then, we hope, without delay, will come the letting of the contract, soon to be followed by actual work of construction.

Most likely in about a year from now we will be making plans to dedicate Montevallo's new government building.

$25,000 Approved For High School Building

Announcement has been made of the approval of application for a Works Progress Administration loan of $25,000 for the construction of six new class rooms and a combination auditorium-gymnasium at the training school of Alabama College.

The contract for this addition to the campus facilities has been completed. This is the first step of the plan to house the entire eraining school in one building, according to W. F. Tidwell, high school principal here.

Jack Hayes, Ball Player, Here With His Business for Winter

Owner of Hayes Chevrolet Company Views the Future With Optimism and Says Chevrolet Will Lead the Way

Mr. Jack Hayes, member of the Chicago White Sox baseball club, finished the playing season a few weeks ago, and returned to his home in Clanton. He has spent the past few weeks "visiting around" and renewing acquaintance with his many friends. Being a graduate of the University of Alabama, from where he jumped directly into the big league baseball with the Washington Senators, Jack most naturally has a large list of friends and admirers all over Alabama.

Now that he has about finished his vacation, Mr. Hayes says he is ready to get down to business for the winter season. He has spent several days the past week in Montevallo, where he owns the Hayes Crevrolet Company. In an interview with The Times editor Monday night, he said:

"I want you to tell the people of Montevallo and Shelby County that I am glad to be back with the opportunity during the next few months of giving my time and attention to the business of the Hayes Chevrolet Company. I want to express to all of our patrons and friends the appreciation of our entire organization for the pleasant business relationships we have enjoyed with you during the past year.

"Looking toward the future, I am greatly encouraged by the prospects. My hopes are high for a bigger and better business in the immediate future. I believe we have gone through with the worst of the effects of the depression, and I think we should have renewed courage to go ahead."

Naturally, of course, Mr. Hayes mentioned the new 1936 Chevrolet, which will be shown at his place Saturday, November 2, for the first time. He said "With such a great automobile as General Motors is giving us for 1936, we feel that nothing can keep us from achieving greater sales and greater popularity with the motoring public. We will be in position to serve our customers better during the coming year than ever before, and we want you to know that we will be right here on the job to see that you continue to get the greatest value and the most pleasure for your automobile dollar by keeping ahead of the procession with Chevrolet."

Mr. Hayes, with his manager, Mr. Barney Burnett, went to Birmingham Wednesday, carrying their entire force of Chevrolet salesmen to witness the private showing of the new Chevrolet to dealers and salesmen at the Municipal Auditorium. The public will be privileged to see the new car on Saturday, November 2. Look for it at Hayes Chevrolet Co., in Montevallo.

ALBERT SPALDING

NOTED VIOLINIST TO BE HERE OCTOBER 28

In Program on Artist and Lecture Series of Alabama College At Palmer Hall

Albert Spalding, noted American violinist, will be presented in concert at Alabama College October 28, at 8 p.m. He is to appear here in the third number on the Artist and Lecture Series. In addition to students, faculty and people of Montevallo, a large attendance of visitors from all parts of the state are expected, according to Dr. W. H. Trumbauer, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Spalding plays every year from sixty to ninety concerts in this country and almost as many abroad. He has achieved greatness as a composer as well as a performer, having written over sixty violin compositions, more than twenty-five piano numbers, thirty songs, three quartets, four orchestral compositions and numerous transcriptions and arrangements.

His remarkable career began when he started playing the violin at the age of seven. His principal teachers were Chiti, the Florentine master; Buitrago, in New York; and Lefort, in Paris. Spalding graduated from Bologna Conservatory at fourteen with the highest honors accorded since Mozat. Since his professional debut at the Nouveau Theatre in Paris, he has ascended rapidly to the position of the outstanding violinist in this country.

His program in Palmer Hall will be one of the features of the Artist and Lecture Series, which includes more than thirteen numbers this season.

Mrs. Charlotte Peterson was in Birmingham Saturday.

Will Rogers Picture At Strand Thursday-Friday

A full house of eager and admiring patrons greeted the new Strand Theatre at its opening Monday night. The reception was pleasing to everyone and the unanimous verdict of all was "Thanks to Eddie Watson, we have in Montevallo a picture theatre as fine as the best, even in the large cities. Nothing like it in any small city I have ever seen."

Following the showing of the main film, Lucien Giddens spoke as president of the Civic Club and presented Dr. C. T. Acker and Dean T. H. Napier, who spoke on behalf of the town and college, respectively, in recognition of the occasion of the opening of the new theatre.

This week Mr. Watson adds greatly to the impressiveness of his opening program of great shows by announcing the greatest of all, Will Rogers, in "Steamboat Round the Bend." This greatest picture of the greatest star in filmdom is showing today and tomorrow, Thursday and Friday.

Armistice Program Is Being Formed

LEGION HOPES TO MAKE IT ANOTHER BIG OCCASION IN MONTEVALLO

At a joint meeting of the Legion and Auxiliary members of Hendrick-Hudson Post, at the Hut last Wednesday night, it was determined that these organizations will again sponsor an Armistice Day program and celebration in Montevallo this year.

Post Commander, Dr. H. W. James, appointed the following as a committee to begin at once arrangements of preliminary details: W. M. Wyatt, chairman; J. L. Appleton, H. D. Gilbert, A. E. Baumgartener, Reese Woolley The Auxiliary Unit pledged their hearty cooperation in the movement.

It is remembered that on last Armistice day Montevallo put on a program that was considered one of the best in the state. The Legion hopes to even surpass last year's program this time. All citizens and organizations, it is hoped, will lend such assistance as they may be able to give.

The meeting at the Hut last Wednesday night was a joint affair with Legionaires and Auxiliary members. A steak fry was immensely enjoyed at the beginning of the evening, followed by a business session and speaking.

Legionnaire Percy M. Pitts, of Clanton, commander of the Chilton County Post, was the speaker invited for the occasion. Mr. Pitts delighted his large audience with an explanation of the national objectives of the Legion for the coming year, as enunciated by the recent national convention at St. Louis.

Dr. J. M. Hough, of the State Department of Health, dropped in to attend the meeting. He is an outstanding Legionnaire, who has had much to do with shaping the organization's work in the field of child welfare.

In a speech of a few minutes Dr. Hough explained the child welfare program.

STRAWBRIDGE DANCERS ON ARTIST PROGRAM

Edwin Strawbridge and his group of dancers were presented on the Artist Series at Alabama College on Saturday night.

While a student at Lafayette College, Strawbridge took an active part in college dramatics and this led him into professional dancing. The lightness and grace of movement combined with unusual technique made his program here delightfully interesting.

Strawbridge has given programs throughout this country and a number of times abroad, and was invited by the Greek government to lead the Delphic chorus in the revival of the rlassic tragedies in Athens.

His original dances are set to the music of Dubussy, Bartok, Smetana, Ravel, Santoliquida, Loulenc, Prokofieff and other noted composers.

Piper Trounces Montevallo By Score of 13-0

Piper handed Montevallo its third straight defeat last Friday. Piper gained the lead early in the second quarter and Montevallo never threatened seriously during any of the remaining time. In scoring this touchdown Piper recovered a fumble on the Montevallo ten-yard line and J. Thompson carried the ball across the goal line. Terpo kicked the extra point.

In the third quarter, Piper tallied again when F. Thompson blocked a Montevallo punt on the ten-yard line picked up the ball and raced across the goal line for the touchdown. Terpo's kick for the extra point was low.

For Piper, all three Thompsons played excellent ball. For Montevallo, Tittle, Findley and Wood starred.

The line-up is as follows:

Piper — End, D. Findley; tackle, J. Potts; guard, F. Thompson; center, Pinson; guard, Gardner; tackle, B. Potts, end, S. R. Thompson, backs, Terpo, Monroe, C. D. Warren and J. Thompson.

Siluria Vs. Montevallo

Montevallo journeys to Siluria next Friday, October 25, to meet Thompson High. Montevallo has already defeated Thompson once this year and they want to beat them again. However the Thompson boys will have something to say about that. One of their boys was heard to remark that they intended to defeat Montevallo if they lost every other game on their schedule. That means that the Thompson eleven will be alert and ready to take advantage of any breaks that come their way. It also means that Montevallo will have to play heads-up football in order to make it two wins in succession over Thompson.

YORK READY TO DEFEND AMERICA

Pall Mall, Tenn.—Sergt. Alvin C. York said Tuesday he is through with foreign fighting, but if the United States is attacked, the World War hero declared he will be "sitting right there on the seacoast with my rifle."

It was fire from his rifle in Argonne just a little more than 17 years ago—October 8, 1918 — that caused Gen. Pershing to describe him as "the greatest civilian soldier of the war."

The official records say that "Practically unassisted," the tall, red-headed Tennesseean routed a machine gun battalion, killing at least 25 Germans and capturing 132 prisoners, including three officers.

"Ethiopia is entitled to some assistance from her sister nations around her and some of them should step into the conflict," said York, "but it's no affair of ours. I think we ought not to interfere in any other nation's troubles so long as they let us alone.

"I don't want any more European fighting and I don't think any of the boys who were over there last time want to go back, but I'm absolutely ready to enlist if somebody attacks this country and I think all the other boys are, too.

"I would be ready to meet them (the invaders) when they got off the boats and would be sitting right there on the seacoast with my rifle waiting for them."

Not only is the 47-year-old sergeant prepared to fight again, but he is willing for his four boys—the eldest, Alvin, Jr., is 14—to join the colors should the United States be threatened with invasion. But he wants none of them to serve in any overseas conflict.

A firm believer in preparedness, York favors such a strong national defense that no foreign power would dare to attack this country.

Asked his opinion about a Massachusetts law requiring school children to salute the flag, York said:

"I don't think anything about that. I don't think they ought to have a law requiring anybody to salute the flag—everybody living under it ought to be glad to salute it without a law."

LIVING COSTS UP, SURVEY REVEALS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An advance in the living costs of wage earners and low salaried workers is reported Monday by the Labor Department.

After a survey of 32 cities covering the four-month period ending July 15, the department said the items purchased by this consumer group had increased 2.7 per cent above their June, 1934, cost and 8 per cent above June, 1933.

As compared with the period ending March 15, the department said food, rent and household furnishing [illegible] up a [illegible] while clothing and miscellaneous [illegible] dropped slightly. It reported the most marked change as a 4.9 per cent decline in fuel and light costs. Food costs increased in 20 of the 32 cities.

25% REDUCTION IN RESIDENTIAL ELECTRICITY COST IN TWO YEARS

The United States Department of Labor continues to put out figures showing the steadily mounting costs of living. The only items showing apreciable declines are fuel and light.

It is interesting to know that in Alabama the average rate paid by the residential customer of the Alabama Power Company has declined 25 per cent. Here is at least one bright ray in the encircling gloom. This drop in rate costs is also being reflected in increased demands for other electrical services.

Spring Creek News

Mr. Harvey Nabors and Mrs. B. R. Alexander visited in Selma the past week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wallace and little son, Charles Grady, of Enon, and Lilly Queen, Rebecca and Odell Grady visited Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Ingram Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Allen and family spent Sunday in Wilton.

Jack Lee visited Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bailey of Riddledale Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Knowles have taken an apartment with Mr. and Mrs. Will Allen. We extend them a hearty welcome into our community.

Mr. and Mrs. Herlie Ingram, Mrs. S. J. and Mae Ingram visited Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hayes of Dargin Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Lem Ingram and family are again making our community their home. We welcome them back as of old.

Rev. B. I. Allinder, of Bessemer, filled his regular, also last appointment with us Sunday. He has been pastor of Spring Creek church for the past eleven years. He was forced to give up his work due to ill health. It was with sad hearts that we saw him go, because no other pastor could have been more faithful or loyal than he. His vacancy is to be filled by Rev. LaFollette, of Gadsden.

The Sunday school and church members surprised Bro. Allinder with a bountiful "pounding" immediately after service Sunday morning. The many packages, boxes, baskets, etc., were carried to his car by the children who used their little wagon for the purpose. The happy face of our beloved pastor would have shown us his thanks without his expressed gratitude.

Sunday evening at 6:45 our Society of Christian Endeavor met with the Montevallo Christian Endeavor Society at the Presbyterian church and put on a program there. Rev. Cox and wife gave a hearty welcome upon arrival. The spirit of welcome and good fellowship was felt by all throughout the meeting. Iona Ingram was leader for the evening and presented the program on "The Terrible Effect of Alcohol on Body and Mind." She was assisted by the majority of the C. E. members. The Montevallo C. E. Society accepted an invitation to come to our church and present a program on Sunday, November 3, at 2:30 o'clock, and as has been stated before, Bro. Cox will preach for us on that date, and each first Sunday afternoon immediately after C. E.

Word was received Sunday night from Selma of the death of Buster Kendricks, son of Mr. Vest Kendricks. He had been ill for some time with pneumonia. Our community wishes to extend sympathy to the family and the many relatives here among us.

Miss Flora Roach and Mae Ingram visited Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Burgin last Friday.

R. C. CAMPAIGNS TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS

Program Inaugurated in Local Chapters to Cut Down Farm and Home Accidents

The American Red Cross has launched a nation-wide campaign to eliminate hazards in the home and on the farm that now take an annual toll of nearly 35,000 lives, according to a recent statement by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations.

"Every Red Cross chapter is being asked to play a part in this campaign," Mr. Fieser said. "Hazards in the various communities will be pointed out. The children in our schools throughout the country will be given a list of the home hazards and asked to enroll parents or relatives in the fight against them."

Nearly five million men, women, and children were temporarily disabled in the homes of America last year by accidents, officials of the National Safety Council have revealed. Most of the accidents in which persons were killed and injured could have been prevented, according to this safety agency, this fact alone largely motivating the Red Cross drive for accident elimination.

Active cooperation of social, civic, educational, veterans', and other groups has been secured. Red Cross inspection forms or home check lists will be distributed to homes where there are no children with the help of these organizations.

Due to inaccessibility and lack of compensation coverage, little or no pioneering has been done in the field of farm safety, the Red Cross states. However, more people were accidentally killed in agricultural pursuits last year than in any other occupation, making the need for safety education and farm home inspection apparent.

Other agencies now active in the accident-prevention field point to the fact that, because of its nearly 13,000 chapters and branches, the Red Cross has a unique opportunity to successfully promote a project of this nature.

Home accidents injure many more than do automobile accidents; they kill nearly as many, claiming an average of about 80 lives daily. In terms of dollars and cents, for the practical minded, home accidents cost more than $1,000 per minute.

Accidents of all types are Public Enemy No. 4. Only three diseases cause as many deaths each year, heart disease, cancer, and cerebral hemorrhage.

"The home is not the place of safety it is commonly supposed to be," said Mr. Fieser in commenting on the new Red Cross service to the community. "The Red Cross, as a part of its chartered obligation to prevent death and alleviate suffering, is conducting this humanitarian program to cut down the mounting toll of avoidable personal injury and death in the homes of the country."

The annual Red Cross roll call, running from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, is one of the means of backing such a campaign. All citizens of the United States are offered the opportunity to join and assist in the work of the organization.

Red Cross Has Busy Year; Statistics Impressive; Services Varied

Figures gathered at random from the year's report of the American Red Cross reveal the magnitude of the work being carried on by that organization.

Red Cross workers assisted 54,305 veterans; 587 Red Cross Public Health nurses paid 921,455 visits to 186,326 patients; 98,441 first aid certificates were issued while 46,693 persons were trained in life saving. Volunteer workers produced 3,102,843 surgical dressings, with 80,901 volunteers being on active duty throughout the year.

First Aid Treatment Taught Thousands By Red Cross

More than 187,000 certificates showing completion of first aid courses were issued last year by the Red Cross. This shows a gain of 56,000 certificates over the previous year. Approximately 64,200 boys in C.C.C. camps throughout the country passed first aid tests. Since the Red Cross first entered the field of first aid teaching, being one of the first organizations in the world to do so, almost one million persons have been trained in handling emergency treatment.

The annual report of the Red Cross further reveals that more than 327,000 copies of the Red Cross Aid Handbook have been sold at home and abroad.

The Red Cross has assisted 54,305 veterans in clearing their cases through the U. S. Veterans' Bureau this past year.

Last year 3,837,941 persons became members of the Red Cross. The annua roll call takes place each year betweer Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day

Junior Red Cross members increased by 402,000 enrollments during the year which has just passed. Junior members carried on an exchange of correspondence with junior members in 62 other countries having Red Cross Societies.

BROTHER HELD IN DEATH

Maplesville, Ala. — Two Chilton County men were under arrest Monday and a third, a brother of one of those under arrest, was dead as the result of a shooting affray at the home of Mrs. Laura Moates near here Sunday.

Coroner Martin, of Chilton County, said Mrs. Moates accused her son, Claude, 44, of fatally wounding his brother, John, 35, with a .22 caliber rifle at the door of the Moates home during an argument over an old family disagreement.

Claude surrendered here to Deputy Sheriff Smith and swore out a warrant for Lum Rosenberry, who allegedly fired at him with a shotgun after John Moates had fallen fatally injured with a bullet in his chest. Claude, reloading his rifle after Rosenberry missed with the shotgun, wounded him in the arm.

As the argument became heated Mrs. Moates was quoted by the coroner as saying John pulled back his coat and invited Claude to: "Go ahead and shoot me." The woman, who lived with Claude, said he fired.

Education Week November 11-17

PROMINENT EDUCATORS WILL SPEAK EACH DAY HERE

Montgomery, Oct. 24 — Featuring a statement from George Washington and Franklin D. Roosevelt relative to the necessity of public education for a democracy, the Committee on Public Relations of the Alabama Education Association yesterday released a 32-page handbook of suggestions for observing American Education Week, scheduled for November 11 to 17.

The observance of American Education Week has been sponsored by the American Legion and state and national educational groups since the close of the World War, the need for it having been emphasized by the large number of illiterate soldiers who enlisted at that time.

In addition to a proclamation by Governor Graves, officially designating the period of November 11 to 17 as American Education Week, the handbook carries statements from Dr. Francis Inge of Mobile, commander of the Alabama Department of the American Legion, from State Superintendent of Education, Keller, and from P. M. Munro, president of the Alabama Education Association, urging the citizens of the state to study the schools during the week named.

The handbook suggests a program for each day of the week of November 11 to 17, and, in addition, carries the latest data concerning the school situation in Alabama. Included in these data are the recent educational appropriations, a digest of the new minimum school program act, a statement of the amount of revenue estimated available for schools during the present fiscal year, and tables and charts deling with school terms, teachers salaries, and current expenses in Alabama during the past five years.

The Committee on Public Relations of the Alabama Education Association, under whose auspices the handbook is published is composed of W. J. Jones, Camden, chairman; Dr. H. W. James, Montevallo; Rosa Lee Walston, Auburn; L. E. Little, Clanton; and A. B. Wells, Montgomery.

County Approves Three Way Paving on Highway

Montevallo citizens were delighted to learn last week of the action of the County Board of Revenue of Shelby County in approving county participation in the three-way program for hard surfacing the east and west highway through Shelby County from the Bibb County line on the west to the river on the east.

It is hoped that full sanction for this project may get the approval of all necessary state and federal government agencies without delay.

Action of the County Board is reported to have authorized allotment of one cent of the county's gasoline tax money to finance its part in the program. One third the cost is to be provided by the State Highway department, and one-third by the federal government.

All Interests Invited In Armistice Program

The committee of Hendrick-Hudson Post of the American Legion, designated to make arrangements for the Armistice Day celebration in Montevallo, requests that all organizations in the community make preparations to be represented in the parade in any manner desired and suitable to the occasion.

College Glee Club Ready For Tours

FIRST ENGAGEMENT AT HOME WILL BE SOME TIME IN DECEMBER

Extensive tours through Alabama and Georgia are planned to give the Alabama College Glee Club its largest schedule in several years, according to H. D. LeBaron, director.

In December a concert will be given in Palmer Hall, faculty and local musicians cooperating in this program which will include several choruses from The Messiah.

Beginning November 8 and continuing through the month the club will make a series of tours within the state prior to the home concert.

The entire club is divided into three groups and those appearing in concerts are selected on the basis of interest and attendance, as well as on ability to sing and at reading music. The Associate Club, from which the concert group is chosen, is composed of upper-classmen only; while the freshmen have a separate organization and meet with the others only once a week for rehearsals. Special Occasions For Girl Scouts Anniversary

Tuesday, designated as handicraft day in this Girl Scout week, was observed by the Montevallo Troop one, when a group of Girl Scouts was directed in the interesting art of tie-dying by Miss Martha Allen, of the high school faculty.

Thursday, hostess day, will be observed by one patrol of Troop One. A Halloween tea will be given.

Today, October thirty-first, marks the seventy-fifth birth anniversary of Juliette Lowe and the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of Girl Scouting in America, for it was on her own birthday in 1912, that Mrs. Lowe introduced the first Girl Scout troop in America, by setting up this troop in Savannah, Ga., her old home.

Juliette Lowe, with a heritage of wealth and prestige, was favored with a broad education gained from prominent schools of her day and travel. After marriage she went to live in England, where she met and learned Sir Robert Baden Powell, the founder of Boy Scouts, and his sister, Miss Agnes. Later she knew Mrs. Baden-Powell, and from all three became interested in Girl Guilding which later became Girl Scouts. She worked with the movement in Scotland, before coming back to establish same in her own America in October, 1912.

PATROL THE PATROLMEN

John Temple Graves, of "This Morning," in the Birmingham Age-Herald, most fittingly says of the Alabama highway patrol:

"Ralph Hurst reports that the new state highway patrol will start with about 90 men. Here's hoping they are 90 whose tempers and instructions will make them always the protectors they need to be and never the persecutors and politicians they might be. Motor travel in this statee requires patroling, but it is important that somebody keep a sharp and scientific patrol on the patrolmen."

These words of Mr. Graves are inspired by an accurate observation, if not experience, with some past performances similar to the new highway patrol to be started out in Alabama right soon. There are many other citizens looking at the venture with the same hopes as the writer of "This Morning."

THE DEATH OF JUDGE GRUBB

The death of Judge W. I. Grubb, of the United States District Court, of Birmingham, is lamented by the people of Alabama.

In Birmingham, where he was best known, the newspapers have poured out a most voluminous and sincere tribute to the great jurist who took his patriotic place as a citizen of the city.

Already much guessing and prophesying is advanced as to the one who will get the appointment as his successor. This question will doubtless stir up a storm of wire-pulling and maybe hairpulling among the politicians of the state.

There is no official position we know of which can attract the desires of the politicians more than a federal judgeship; and there is no official position which should be more carefully and completely safeguarded against the manipulations and influences of politics.

THE COLLEGE YEARBOOK

The Alabama College Yearbook of 1935 has been granted first class rating by the All-American Yearbook Critical Service. It is the second successive year in which the annual publication here has received high recognition.

The 1935 Yearbook was the work of Miss Jessie Forrest, editor, and Agnes Postell, business manager, assisted by the following staff: Misses Marion Boznhard, Jean Forrest, Grace Porter, Nell Taylor, Elizabeth Seibert, Flora Lee Borden, Alice Roberts, Isabel Henderson, Hazel Cotton, Nell Hines, BeBe Fant, Carolyn Reddoch, Evelyn Ware, and Dorothy Liles.

The 1935 edition of "Technala" was the only college yearbook of colleges and universities with enrollment of 500 to 1,000 to make the All-American rating. Out of a possible 1,000 points for perfection, 1935 "Technala" was rated 725 by the judges.

The 1934 edition of "Technala" was produced by a staff under direction of Marjorie Goff, editor-in-chief, and Frances Koch, business manager. Out of a possible 1,000 points for perfect rating, the 1934 Yearbook was accorded 915 points by the judges.

It is indeed gratifying to the many friends and supporters of Alabama College that the Yearbook officers have been able to set a record that places their work in the All-American honor rating for two years in succession.

Montevallo Smothers Siluria 18-0

Montevallo cracked the win column again last Friday afternoon with an 18-0 triumph over Thompson High of Siluria. After a slow start the Montevallo Bulldogs opened up in the second quarter and scored two touchdowns.

The first came when Lee passed to Green in the end zone from Thompson's three yard line. There was some controversy over this touchdown. The referee, at first, declared the touchdown was no good because the passer was not five yards behind the line of scrimmage. However, the play was found to be alright after looking it up in a rule book. The new rule permits a forward pass from any point behind the line of scrimmage, whereas the old one required the passer to be five yards back.

Siluria chose to receive and the second Montevallo touchdown came immediately after the kick-off. when Thompson, after failing to make a first down, punted to Montevallo's forty-yard line. Green then kicked to the Thompson safety man on the Thompson fifteen yard line, who allowed the ball to get away from him after touching it. Hartley, M.H.S. halfback fell on the ball in the end zone for the second touchdown, making the score 12-0.

The final tally came when Hartley passed to Green on the Thompson. ten-yard line. Green then ran the remaining ten yards for the last score.

Thompson never threatened seriously. Their passing attacks were bottled and they were unable to penetrate the Montevallo forward wall or circle the ends with very much success.

The shining lights of the Thompson team were Lacey in the backfield and Wyatt in the line.

For Montevallo, Findley, Green, Wood and Little starred in the line and Weems and Hartley in the backfeld. The alert play of Captain Wood was the feature of the game.

Knick-Knacks

The current popular song, "I'm On a Seesaw," would be quite an appropriate theme song for some of the nation's leading football teams . . . Alabama's Crimson Tide now has a genuine Kentucky Colonel to lead them, none other than Jimmy Walker, their captain. This honor was conferred on him on October 16, 1935 . . . During the Princeton-Yale game last year, the referee failed to understand the name of a Princeton substitute back and asked over. Kelly, quick-witted Yale end retorted, He's probably reporting for me, I've been playing in Princeton's backfield all afternoon."

Montevallo vs. Isabella

Fresh from their 18-0 victory over Thompson, Montevallo will endeavor to keep on the winning side of the score when they meet Isabella here on Friday.

From a statistical standpoint, Montevallo's 25 points better than Isabella. Thompson defeated Isabella 7-0 and lost to Montevallo 18-0. Therefore figuratively speaking M.H.S. is the best team by 25 points. As is usual, the school will be dismissed at 1:30 so that everyone may see the game. The cheerleaders will be on hand and school spirit is running high after the one-sded triumph over Thompson.

Now You Can

BUY ALL 3 AT ONCE

NOW even modest homes can enjoy the comfort and convenience of electrified kitchens. The Economy Purchase Plan makes it possible to buy an Electric Refrigerator, an Electric Range and an Electric Water Heater all at the same time, with monthly payments so low that almost anybody can afford them. You might want to include an electric water pump too.

Of course, you needn't buy them all at the same time if you would prefer to buy them one at a time. You may already have an Electric Refrigerator and Electric Pump and may want to add the Electric Range and Water Heater and other equipment a step at a time. You can also do that under the Economy Purchase Plan.

AN ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

—makes it possible for you to keep milk, cream, eggs, meat and other foods fresh and appetizing for days—leftovers need not be fed to the chickens. You can make appetizing, inexpensize frozen desserts frequently—every day if you like—it costs so little to operate an Electric Refrigerator.

Consider These Advantages

AN ELECTRIC RANGE

—helps keep your kitchen clean—is great for roasting meats without waste—bakes biscuits and cornbread to a queen's taste—is fine for preserving and canning—makes all food taste better—gives you more time OUT of the kitchen — costs surprisingly little to operate.

AN ELECTRIC WATER HEATER

—operates automatically and gives you all the hot water you want—when you want it—where you want it. Makes it convenient to take a nice refreshing bath every day if you like—makes dishwashing and churning easier and helps you keep the house clean with less work.

AN ELECTRIC PUMPING SYSTEM

—will bring running water to the house, the barn, the milking shed, the poultry house, the yard—any place you want running water. It does away with pail totin'—saves time—gives you time to rest or do other things.

Investigate These Devices!

Dr. Steckel Presided At Auburn Meeting

Dr. Minnie L. Steckel, personnel director at Alabama College and President of the state association of deans of women and advisers to girls, will preside at the annual fall meeting of the college section of this group, at Auburn Tuesday. Miss Zob Dobbs, dean of women and social director at Auburn, will be hosess in Smith Hall to those attending.

The speakers will include Dr. Eoline W. Moore, of Birmingham-Southern College; Miss Dobbs, Miss Mabel Sims of the Young Junior High School at Dothan; Miss Bessie Welch, of Judson College; Miss Boyer Garrett, of the State Teachers College at Troy; and Mrs. F. M. Church, of Athens College.

The program will be concluded with a business meeting Tuesday afternoon. All college deans of women, social and personnel directors of colleges and normal schools in the state have been invited to participate in the session.

All interests and organizations in Montevallo are uniting in the preparation of an Armistice Day celebration and parade that will be outstanding as one of the really big events of the year for this community. It is generally accepted that last year's Armistice celebration here was the best ever held. But hopes and plans are that this one will be even better than that.

A committee of the American Legion and Auxiliary have been busy during the past week outlining plans. All of the business houses in town have been invited to enter floats or decorated automobiles in the parade. Practically every place has said they will enter.

The public schools are planning to enter the students in the parade in a body. Alabama College will join in the concluding exercises to be held at Palmer Hall.

Following the general outline and route of last year, the parade will form at the High School, march down through the business section of town, and terminate at Palmer Hall, where the program will be concluded.

The main feature of the program will be an address by Mr. P. M. Munro, of Selma, president of the Alabama Education Association. Dr. James, Commander of Hendrick-Hudson Post, state that a number of appropriate musical number on the program at Palmer Hall will be furnished by the College.

The parade will form and begin marching at ten o'clock, and it is expected that the entire procedure, the parade and the program at Palmer Hall, will consume about two hours time.

Mrs. Walter Mulkey and Mrs. Kate Shivers spent Saturday in Selma.

Mesdames R. A. Reid, M. P. Jeter, Sr., J. I. Reid, Fred Frost and Lena Duran spent Wednesday in Birmingham.

Misses Sue and Mary Hilda Peters spent the week end in Birmingham.

New Officers Elected By Alumni Association

The new officers of the Alabama College Alumni Association named at the home coming program Saturday are: Mrs. F. H. Chappelle, Birmingham, president; Mrs. Charlotte Peterson, Montevallo, vice - president; Miss Ethel Harris, Montevallo, secretary; and Miss Martha Allen, Montevallo, treasurer. Mrs. Chappelle, a graduate of 1916, is a former president of the Birmingham chapter of the Alumnae Association.

In addressing the alumnae and the seniors of the college at the general assembly Saturday morning, President A. F. Harman welcomed the visitors to the campus and called attention to the visible evidences of progress at the institution, mentioning particularly the new campus gates, given by the classes of 1937 and 1938, the paving program which is to be completed through a grant recently made by the federal government, and the increased athletic facilities offered through the airport and hangar, which are soon to be available for use as tennis court, soccer field and gymnasium. He referred also to certain less tangible developments including the revised curriculum. He outlined needs and ideals for further expansion in the facilities and program, calling on the alumnae for their continued interest and cooperation.

The large number of alumnae present from all sections of the state were entertained at a play, a concert and lecture number, a luncheon and a tea. Miss Josephine Watson, of the class of 1930, presided at the business meetings. A special reunion of the class of 1925 was held.

WAVE THE FLAG ON MONDAY

If you have a United States Flag, arrange to display it on next Monday, Armistice Day. If you haven't a flag get one.

Armistice is one of the greatest of America's great list of patriotic anniversary holidays. It marks the triumph of American ideals upon an occasion and a world conflict in which thousands upon thousands of our citizens now living stood face to face with death.

Other thousands of our brightest and ablest young manhood in that conflict, laid down their lives for a world cause in which the principles of free Americanism were threatened with obliteration from the face of the earth.

Our flag, Old Glory, represents every sacrifice, every service, every victory, every hope and every fear that is commemorated by Armistice Day.

Fling out the folds to the breeze next Monday. Every business house and every home should display the Stars and Stripes on that great historically significant occasion.

DON'T KNOCK YOUR TOWN

Before you start to knocking and criticizing your home town, first go about and see how many towns you can easily find that are not nearly as good and attractive as your home town.

Think of a place where there are three so-called restaurants or cafes, and not one of them can serve you a cup of coffee at six o'clock in the morning; and when you went into each of them, asked for coffee and were denied, you were glad they didn't have it, because of the unsightliness of the places.

You may find such a condition as this in a town in Alabama larger than Montevallo. Many other appearances also indicate about the same as the restaurant situation.

NEW MONTEVALLO ORDINANCE

Publication is being made by the officials of the Town of Montevallo of a general ordinance empowering the Town to administer punishment for violations of any of the laws of the State of Alabama covering misdemeanors.

Mr. Gardner, the Town Clerk, states that publication of this ordinance is being done in order to give the town officials powers of punishment for law violations which, perhaps, they lost about two years ago when the ordinance book of the town was misplaced and has never been found.

"I don't know what we would have done up to now, said Mr. Gardner, "if we had carried a case into the courts and a lawyer had demanded that we show him our ordinance book. But publication of this general ordinance will give us power to handle any misdemeanor cases without any legal backfire."

PEA RIDGE CLUB MEETING

The Club for homemakers of the Pea Ridge community met at the church Thursday afternoon for the fifth meeting of the series of twelve lessons to be given for the group. In the absence of the president, the secretary, Mrs. Booth opened the meeting by roll call.

The discussions for the day on the selection of children's clothing. Selection of materials which will laundry easily, wear well and look attractive because of color and design was stressed through a study of samples of materials. Designs by which children's clothing is made may contribute to or hinder the child's development toward independence. Several examples of good and poor patterns for childrens clothing were studied. After the discussion was over, peanuts were served by Group III of the club.

Each Thursday afternoon the club meets at the church at two-thirty. The program for Thursday, November 7 will be on the cleaning of silks and woolen materials. All homemakers of the community are invited to come.

Montevallo Downs Isabella 19-6

Montevallo rung its second successive victory last Friday when they defeated Isabella 19-6. The Bulldogs gained the lead early in the first quarter and were constantly driving into Isabella territory throughout the game. After taking the ball on their own forty-yard line and driving it to the Isabella three-yard line, M. H. S. scored when Weems plunged over the line on an off tackle play.

The second touchdown came in the second quarter when Lee took a punt on his own 30 yard line and behind nice interference ran seventy yards for a touchdown.

The last score came in the third quarter after another sustained drive had placed the ball on the five- yard line. Harrison, the M. H. S. fullback, bucked the ball across the line for the final touchdown. Then he bucked the ball over for the extra point, thus making the score 19 to 0.

Immediately after this Isabella scored when Lecroy passed to White who ran thirty yards for a touchdown. Isabella presented the best backs that has played on the Montevallo field this year, in Lecroy, a small stocky boy playing his first year of football, ran the ends, plunged off tackle and hit the center of the line with very little help from his teammates. He was undoubtedly the best player on the field.

For Montevallo Little and Cahoon dominated the line play and Villadsen stepped out in his new role as halfback, and Lee did some nice running and passing.

Montevallo Vs. Clanton

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The Sr. I English class had a grand surprise planned for them last week by their practice teacher. They were studying "The Prisoner of Chillon" so their teacher brought one of the French girls down to talk to them. The French girl, Ann Ebrard, lives near the prison and gave a very interesting description of it.

Ann Ebrard and Suzanne La Clavere both have visited the French class and their talks were enjoyed by all.

Miss Coke has been called to her home because of the illness of her father. Her classes have been taken over by Mrs. Hardy, Miss Allen, and practice teachers.

In past years, the clubs have been meeting every two weeks for a half hour. This year the plan has been changed—clubs meet once a month for an hour. Each club is able to accomplish more by this arrangement and much work has been going on between meetings.

This Years Aims of The Student Government

In the year preceding this one, the main functions of our high school student government have been the promotion of scholarship and student activity. This year a third objective has been thrust forward—it is sportsmanship.

Previous to this year, this all-important factor has been mentioned more or less as only an ideal to be attained. This year we are not only mentioning it as a principle necessary to top-ranking schools, but we are also taking definite steps toward establishing it as a slightly more tangible problem. Already the honor club of the school, the Arista Club, sponsored by Miss Stella Stephens, has inserted into its rules of entrance a clause requiring a test for sportsmanship in the individual member.

The student council has entered wholeheartedly into the plan of better sportsmanship. President Ulmer Wilson has appointed various standing committees who have a special assignment, the collecting of money for the ball game school spirit, creation of spirit for the school activities in towns. All of this hustling has already shown marked advancement. It is something the future organization will never be satisfied with what those members before them have done, but will strive to better it.

Beginning November 11 the Montevallo High School will celebrate National Education Week. The Sr. III Economics class under Mr. Tidwell is in charge of this program.

During the week a series of talks will be made each morning at roll call to each class room. These talks will follow the outline for the Education week.

Funds Asked For Aid Of Cripples

DRIVE WILL BE MADE BY THE GIRLS OF HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT

Beginning this week the Home Economics Girls of the Montevallo High School will sponsor a drive for funds to be used in the treatment of cripple children of Alabama. This project will be carried on locally in cooperation with a state-wide program by the vocational agriculture and home economics pupils in various schools of the state. Many of these schools have already registered splendid successes in their efforts to raise funds for this worthy cause.

These figures give some idea of the urgent need of the movement now to be attempted: At present there are 9,000 cripple children in Alabama. If these children were placed in the arms of their mothers, and mothers stationed six feet apart, a line of ten miles in length would result. Walking at the rate of two miles per hour it would take these mothers five hours to pass in review.

The appalling number of cripples could be reduced if corrective treatment could be given to these children. At present there two convalescent homes for the children who have been given treatment in hospitals and who need further care and supervision by doctors. These homes are located at Birmingham and Mobile.

The present need for equipment in these homes is very urgent. If the project undertaken by the home economics pupils of the state is successful, the equipment for which it will be spent will greatly increase the efficiency of these convalescent homes. This additional equipment would make possible a more complete recovery for more cripple children of the state.

Plans have been made for the drive by the Montevallo Home Economics Girls which will give an opportunity for the citizens of the town and community to contribute. The first of these plans will be an effort to sell subscriptions to magazines. Cookies will be made for sale, and various contests will be held, which will be announced in the weekly editions of this paper. Cooperation from the merchants and townspeople will be greatly appreciated by the girls.

Circus Is Coming To Montevallo Under the Auspices of P. T. A.

On Monday, November 25th just about the time most of the people of Montevallo are thinking of getting up, the long line of trucks of the Mighty Haag Shows will begin arriving here, and start work pitching their vast city of tents on the show grounds where they will give two complete performances.

The Haag Shows this year will bring to Montevallo more wild animals, horses, ponies and trained dogs than ever before exhibited. This year the Haag shows are featuring such well-known acts as the Tan Araki Japanese Troupe in a new act, Johnson Duo of Wire Walkers, Zeldo Troupe of head balancers, Fisher Family of Acrobats and Haag's Herd of performing elephants largest and best trained in the country presented by Miss Ruby Fisher, who takes her life in her own hands twice daily when she places her head in the mouth of one of the elephants.

There will be a street parade at 1 p.m. followed by a number of free exhibition on the show grounds. Performances start at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., but doors will open one hour earlier so as to give everyone ample time to visit Haag's Gold Concert Band.

Admission will be at popular prices and the public is assured of a whole evening of splendid entertainment.

Toward the close of his message Dr. Keller considered the progress of education over the years in Alabama, a progress in training and strength of teachers as well as in instruction., as he pointed out the duty of making education available and significant to the many rather than just to the few.

In our school every day is visiting day. Since you have not seen us as often as we would like, at work and play in our school life, we are designating Tuesday, November 19th as visiting day.

This is an invitation to you and your friends to spend all or any part of the day in our school. We begin work at 8:30 a.m. and the children leave at 2:30 p.m. We would like for you to visit while the children are here, then talk with the teachers until 3:15. After that attend the P.-T. WELCOME TO OUR RANKS, BROTHER

A most worthy addition was made to the ranks of Alabama journalism on the first of November when Mr. Spurgeon S. Keller, of Abbeville, laid down his duties as County Agent of Henry County, and took over the steering wheel as editor and publisher of The Abbeville Herald.

He will be accorded a most hearty welcome into the brotherhood of universal suffering, sacrifice, service and rich reward.

For seven years Mr. Keller has been county agent of Henry County. He has made a record as one of Alabama's outstanding leaders in agricultural extension work. He will be able and well-fitted through his newspaper to continue his fine service to the people of Henry County.

In addition to his many fine qualities as a man, a citizen, and a leader in community life, Spurgeon Keller is further distinguished by being a brother of Albert Keller, our present honored and honorable State Superintendent of Education.

The newspaper fraternity of our state will be genuinely honored and greatly advanced in its ideals by having the fine personality of the new publisher of the Abbeville Herald as one in our ranks.

FARMERS UNION MEETING

It is certain that Alabama sooner or later is going to take definite note of the recent rapid growth of the Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union in the state and the meetings being held in so many counties to protest against burdensome features of the AAA. These meetings are being held generally not only in North Alabama, but in South Alabama and their purport is generally the same. Resolutions in each case are adopted condemning the AAA as at present administered, condemning the activites of the agricultural extension service in connection with the law, and condemning the Bankhead act and its effect particularly upon the small farmer. Invariably these meetings, after hearing addresses by the leaders and officers, also adopt resolutions endorsing the Frazier-Lempke act. This is the act which would throw greater protection around the mortgaged farm and would forbid the foreclosure until a definite period of time had been given to the owner to meet his obligations with nominal payments during five years.

Several years ago the so-called Farmers Union became a potent force in Alabama because of the numbers and character of the farmers composing it, but not such has been heard of it until the last few weeks when organization efforts appear to have been meeting with extensive success. —Alabama Journal.

QUINN ANNOUNCES NEW WILD LIFE PROJECT IN ALABAMA

Conservation Commissioner I. T. Quinn has announced that the U. S. Bureau of Biological Survey has assigned Harold S. Peters, formerly attached to the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, to Alabama Polytechnic Institute to direct a new cooperative wildlife project in Alabama.

Mr. Peters' appointment was with the approval of the state Conservation Department, the Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the American Wildlife Institute and fulfills a promise made by Chief J. N. Darling of the Biological Survey during his December visit to this state to provide Alabama with a trained biologist to conduct a course in game management and do research work in the wildlife field.

The biologist will be attached to the Department of Entomology and Zoology at Auburn, but will utilize the Biology Department, the Agricultural Extension Service and its Experiment Stations in his work. Commissioner Quinn considers Alabama very fortunate in obtaining the services of Mr. Peters.

Among his more specific duties, Mr. Peters will make a study of external and internal parasites of game birds and animals; a food habit study to determine the effects of the food habits of certain species of wildlife upon other forms; a study of the predatory habits of certain birds and animals, and conduct demonstrations with the purpose of determining the factors which regulate minimum and maximum production of a given species of wildlife on a definite area.

A game management project, including all of the foregoing, will be initiated by Mr. Peters, which eventually will develop a course in game management at Auburn for the purpose of training young men for positions in the field of wildlife management.

Mr. Peters' work with the federal bureau has been confined chiefly to external parasites of wildlife and he has worked in all of the eastern and southern states from Maine to Florida and across to Texas. He spent four months this year working with H. L. Stoddard and the Cooperative Quail Study Association in southern Georgia and northern Florida and in 1930 was entomologist with an expedition of the Smithsonian Institution in the southern Bahamas, Cuba and Cayman Islands.

Similar courses in game management, to be set up in at least eight other state land grant colleges, will have the active support of the Biological Survey, which is prepared to supply instructors and cooperate with the states in financing this new development.

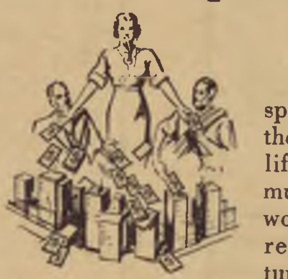
The Human Element Back of Your Telephone



But for the human element back of your telephone, the millions of dollars worth of telephone equipment in the State would be only so much inactive machinery.

It is the army of telephone workers who give life to the vast network of wires, switchboards and other equipment, making of it one of the State's most used and useful instruments of modern business and social life.

These workers are selected with extreme care as to their fitness for the job and the majority of them have had years of experience and training in their respective lines of work. They are loyal folks, all striving for the same end—that you shall continue to get the best and most dependable service possible at the lowest cost consistent with the financial safety of the business.

Collectively, they and their families form a very large group of substantial citizens, who contribute in many ways to the welfare and support of the State. Their earnings are spent mainly for the necessities of life, in the communities where they work and live. This regular expenditure of money aids materially in the support of merchants and other business institutions throughout the State.

Because their life work in the telephone business is service to the public, it is natural for telephone people to be interested and active in civic, church and other organizations which work for the upbuilding and betterment of the communities in which they live.

The telephone industry is one of the State's largest and most necessary institutions, but its value is not measured alone in money. Of equal importance to the investment in land, buildings and equipment are these loyal people whose lives are dedicated to a necessary public service, which through years of perseverance and labor, they have developed to the present high standard of quality and dependability. These folks are the Telephone Company.

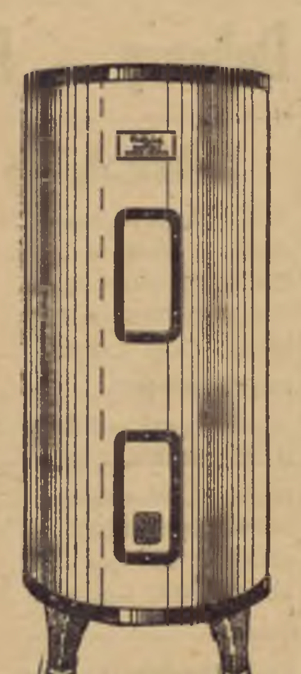
THAT'S NEWS!



WE DON'T claim to have the complete answer to the problem of keeping children clean, but we do say that having hot water ready ALL THE TIME—the way you have it with an automatic ELECTRIC Water Heater — will make a world of difference. Frequently the children will solve the cleanliness problem themselves.

★ ★ ★

Automatic ELECTRIC hot water saves time and eliminates annoyance dozens of times a day, with dishwashing, laundering, house-cleaning and baths all needing hot water. (The cost is only a few cents a day at the most—a small price for making cleanliness so easy.)

★ ★ ★

Electric Water Heaters—like Electric Ranges and Electric Refrigerators—may be bought for only a modest amount "down," the balance payable on the popular ECONOMY PURCHASE PLAN.

Bridge Project Is First Of Its Kind

STORY AND PICTURES TAKEN FROM BIRMINGHAM NEWS OF OCTOBER 24

Special distinction in the vast construction program that is in progress over the state is claimed by Montevallo as the result of an unusual project under way here. It is the grade separation overpass being built over the Southern Railway tracks and Shoal Creek, which will give Montevallo an entirely new entrance highway.

The distinctive feature of this project is the fact that the work is one of the first of its kind in the nation under President Roosevelt's monster grade separation program launched a few months ago.

Furnishing employment for some 40 to 50 men and entailing an outlay of approximately $87,000, the overpass leaves the Montevallo-Calera Highway about a half mile out of town and will sweep in a graceful curve over the railroad tracks and the creek to connect with a street leading di- district. The overpass itself will be rectly into thee heart of the business 650 feet long and 20 feet wide. Built entirely of concrete, it will be 60 feet above the creek.

Already two of the massive concrete supports have been completed and work on pouring concrete in another was under way when the project was visited this week in company with Mayor E. S. Lyman, Jr. The forms for half a dozen other supports are being built and the work will be carried forward as rapidly as possible.

New Strand Theatre

Of perhaps equal interest to Montevallo itself is another project nearing completion here, although this one involves private enterprise. This is the new Strand Theatre being built by Eddie Watson, which will give Montevallo a picture house with features not found in any other theatre in the state.

The new theatre is a strikng example of modernstic architecture with gleaming white stucco, set off by black trim featuring the exterior appearance. The theatre will be completed in a few days and provides a seating capacity of about 600, with mechanical equipment especially designed to give true fidelity of sound and vision. The building and equipment represent an investment of approximately $35,000. D. O. Whilldin, of Birmingham, designed the structure.

The first interior feature that attracts the visitor is a handsome foyer. Modernistic supports for the comfortable cushioned seats and a broad expanse of walls relieved by attractive glow lights are other features to attract attention. These plain walls have a utility purpose to serve in that they are made up of the latest type of accoustical board to promote true sound reproduction throughout the house.

College Improvement

Alabama College is getting a large share of the construction work in Montevallo, with two projects under way and another ready to start.

A crew of some 30 workmen is engaged at present constructing a brick hangar on the airport back of the college. On an inspection tour of this and other projects at the college in company with Lucien Giddens, registrar, and the genial grounds superintendent, W. M. Jones-Williams, it is learned that this hangar itself will offer the unusual feature of beieng equipped for use as a gymnasium by college students.

A smaller construction project under way on the campus is a solarium for use of the biology department. This structure is being added to the rear of Bloch Hall and is nearing completion.

The third college project, although this work is not yet under way, will be the completion of paving driveways that wind through the campus. This work was started under CWA, and was carried forward under ARA. The remainder of the $20,000 program will be completed under the PWA. All of the paving is being laid of brick.

New Postoffice

Montevallo is also to have a new postoffice building soon, although postmaster P. C. Wilson was not able to give details of the cost and building design. Purchase of a site at the corner of Main and Vine Streets has been approved and formal announcement of the appropriation for the building is expected within a short time. Although no official figures have been announced, the general belief among Montevallo residents is that the building will cost about $60,000 and be among the most attractve structures of its kind in the state.

Christmas Seal Sale Starts Thanksgiving

PLANS HAVE BEEN OUTLINED BY MRS. JETER, COUNTY CHAIRMAN

Mrs. M. P. Jeter, chairman of the Christmas Seal Sale for Shelby County, has her plans outlined for beginning the campaign on next Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, and continuing until Christmas.

Envelopes containing sheets of Christmas Seals, are being prepared for mailing by Mrs. Jeter to a selected list of Shelby County citizens. With the seals Mrs. Jeter is sending a letter bearing the following message:

"Dear Friend:

"You can help to make someone a present of the most precious possession in the world—Health. The enclosed Christmas Seals offer you this opportunity. Won't you accept them? They are messengers of health and happiness.

"They are $1.00 per sheet, and the seals you buy will help make your community a healthier, happier place in which to live.

"Please respond as quickly as possible since there are a number of cases of tuberculosis in Shelby County needing immediate attention. Delay may mean disaster. Your response will determine the extent of relief we are able to give, since the funds for this important work come from seal sales alone.

"Send the money or check for the seals you buy to Mrs. J. L. Appleton, Treasurer, Montevallo."

On Monday, November 25th just about the time most of the people of Montevallo are thinking of getting up, the long line of trucks of the Mighty Haag Shows will begin arriving here, and start work pitching their vast city of tents on the show grounds where they will give two complete performances.

There will be a street parade at 1 p.m. followed by a number of free exhibition on the show grounds. Performances start at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., but doors will open one hour earlier so as to give everyone ample time to visit Haag's Gold Concert Band.

We do not want to cut off any of our subscribers without first giving them full opportunity to pay up. And we much prefer that they pay up and remain on our list. We want to keep every subscriber we have, and get many more besides.

Beginning on January the first, we will place our subscription list strictly on the cash in advance basis. All subscribers who are not paid in advance on that date will be dropped from the list.

After January the first our policy will be to accept only cash in advance subscriptions, sending the paper to the subscriber for the time paid for, and stopping the paper when the time is out if not promptly renewed.

We hope our subscribers will take notice of this statement and arrange to pay up their subscriptions between now and the first of January.

McCord Makes Protest Of Committee's Action

Judge Leon McCord, Democratic National Committeeman, yesterday called on the State Democratic Executive Committee to rescind its action electing four uninstructed delegates to head Alabama's delegation to the 1936 convention, and asked the delegates to join him in the request.

The four delegates are Gov. Graves, Senators Black and Bankhead, and John D. McQueen, chairman of the state committee, which elected the four men under a double-barreled resolution that endorsed the Roosevelt Administration but did not give the delegates any definite instructions.

The commttee, acting under full authority gave the four delegates one full vote each, and provided for the election by the people of 36 additional delegates with one-half vote, making up Alabama's reduced voting strength of 22 votes as compared with 24 in 1932.

Bible Anniversary Will Be Observed on Sunday

This year Christians around the world are celebrating one of the most significant events in all Christian history. The Bible was first printed in English in 1535, four hundred years ago.

Next Sunday evening at 7:30 there will be a service in Palmer Hall in celebration of this four hundredth anniversary of the English Bible. Dr. Percy P. Burns, Dean of Howard College, will deliver the address of the occasion.

The College and all the churches of the community are cooperating in this celebration. It is a community-wide service. Everyone is invited to attend.

It is most fitting that we shall come together to consider the meaning of the printing of the Bible in the English language, its influence upon the life of the English-speaking people and upon the world during these four hundred years.

At 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning, November 27, a special convocation will be held in Palmer Hall at which the English Bible Anniversary celebration will be continued. At this service three art students will speak of the influence of the Bible on Art. Also, Mr. Lucien Giddens will speak on "The Influence of the Bible on Western Law." A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this service.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE

The community Thanksgiving service will be held at the Methodist Church at 7 a.m., Thursday of next week. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Augustus J. Cox, pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

U. D. C. Met Thursday At Home of Mrs. J. Alex Moore

The U.D.C. met Thursday at the home of Mrs. J. Alex Moore with Mrs. Moore, Mrs. F. W. Rogan, Mrs. Harvey and Mrs. F. F. Crowe as joint hostesses. The program consisted of a most interesting paper on "Southern Women in War and Peace," by Miss Tutwiler. In addition to historical facts she read excerpts from letters written by members of her family during the war between the states. Miss Sadie Weir accompanied by Mrs. Charlotte Peterson, sang "Ben Bolt" and "Listen to the Mocking Bird." Mrs. Louise Coleman read "Pomgrantes" and Mrs. Harris read "My School Room." Gov. Graves Delays The Highway Patrol To December First Montgomery, Ala. — Lawrence Lee, legal adviser to Gov. Bibb Graves, announced Monday that the chief executive had ordered delayed until December 1 mobilization of the new highway patrol to be financed through the sale of automobile drivers' licenses.

"Not enough cash," Lee said, was the cause of the delay of organization, which originally was scheduled for November 10 and then delayed until this week as license funds failed to arrive as rapidly as expected.

Lee said Monday the comptroller's office had reported $30,000 turned in to date by probate judges, who are charged with collecting 60-cent fees from owners and 30-cent fees from other drivers. This amount will be required for the purchase of equipment, he said, estimating that the cost would be approximately $500 per man.

The state already has contracted for 25 automobiles, 40 motorcycles and 90 uniforms for the patrol, which will be headed by Walter K. McAdory, head of the old law enforcement department during the first Graves administration.

The siren at Aldrich mines Tuesday morning had a good sound, even if it did disturb our early morning nap.

Montevallo is indeed glad that the coal mine strike has been ended, and the mines are again in operation. Business around here had about all the strike it could afford, and then some.

We hope that the settlement reached between the union and the mine operators is such that the workmen can be fully and adequately compensated for their labor; and that the mine operators will be able to market their products in competition with the operators in other coal fields of the country.

Citizenship training of Girl Scouts goes forward at present with such activities as the Red Cross Roll Call, Christmas Seal Sale, National Education week, Book Week, etc. For book week, which will be observed from November 17 to 23, is suggested exhibits and parties. One party idea is a book week circus.

Dr. A. H. Collins, Commissioner of Public Welfare of Alabama, spoke at convocation exercises at Alabama College Tuesday afternoon at 3:30. His subject was "The American Program of Social Security."

Formerly connected with the public school system of Montgomery County and more recently a professor of Education at Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Dr. Collins is widely known in state educational circles. He is a member of the state text-book Commission.

ONIONS IN YOUR EYES

Did you ever slice an onion and have the fumes get into your eyes and cause tears to flow? And would you believe that a very simple thing like holding a match in your mouth while you slice the onion will prevent the unpleasantness to the eyes?

Well, try it and see. And if it don't work, go jump on Red Woolley at the Montevallo Cafe. He is my authority for the effectiveness of the scheme. I have not tried it myself.

Red was slicing an onion Monday afternoon. He was at the same time trying to tell me what to print in his advertisement, and all the while tears were drenching his cheeks.

J. T. Davis, the baker, said, "Red, if you will hold a match in your mouth while you slice the onion, there will be no tears."

Red put the onion down, dried his eyes, placed a match in his mouth, and started slicing again. There were no more tears. "I did not believe it," he said, "but it actually works."

"There are tricks in all trades," remarked J. T., "and what a baker who has served in Uncle Sam's army doesn't know isn't worth knowing."

Vincent Triumps Over Montevallo

Vincent remained among the undefeated high school teams of the state when they won over Montevallo 12-0. Vincent scored its first touchdown early in the first quarter after a drive from their own thirty-yard line. Embry carried the ball off tackle for the first score. The attempt for conversion of extra point failed.

In the second and third periods Montevallo outplayed Vincent but lacked that extra spark that is necessary to score. Tate in the first half, Montevallo drove the ball to the six-inch line. On the first play they carried the ball over but an offsides penalty set them back to the five-yard line and before they could score the half ended.

Early in the third quarter Villadsen, M.H.S. halfback, broke loose for a thirty-yard run and would have scored if he had had a man to run interference after he passed the line of scrimmage.

In the fourth quarter Vincent took the offensive again. A sustained drive from their own thirty-five yard line to Montevallo's ten, again placing them in scoring position. Beaver took off tackle and scored Vincent's final touchdown. They again failed to convert the extra point, thus making the final score 12-0.

Embry was the outstanding man on the field. He was the main cog of the Vincent backfield. Bell and Willis shared honors in the line play of the Yellow Jackets.

For Montevallo, Green, Wood and Findley starred in the line and Villadsen in the backfield. Green smeared every Vincent play that came around his end and continued his good work as a punter. Villadsen continued his great offensive and defensive work in the backfield.

Montevallo vs. Columbiana

Montevallo has an open date this Friday, their only one of the current season. This will give them two weeks to prepare for their annual day-before-Thanksgiving game with Columbiana. If Montevallo has a traditional rival on the gridiron, it is Columbiana. This, coupled with the evenly matched strength of the two teams should make the game a knock down and drag-out affair.

Montevallo Defeats Clanton 13-6

The M.H.S. Bulldogs hung their third straight victory last Friday, November 8th, when they won over Clanton 13-6.

Montevallo gained the lead early in the first quarter, when they received a Clanton punt on their own forty-yard line and drove it to the Clanton five-yard line. This drive was featured by the running of Villadsen and Harrison. After the ball reachthe five yard line, Villadsen scored on an off-tackle plunge. Harrison then went over for the extra point, making the score 7-0.

This ended the scoring for the first half. In the third quarter, Clanton scored when a pass from the fifty-yard line netted them trity-five yards, thus placing the ball on the M.H.S. fifteen. In two plays Williamson, the Clanton quarterback, scored a touchdown.

Montevallo scored their final touchdown in the fourth quarter after an end-around-end run for a gain of thirty yards by Winslett had placed the ball on Clanton's twenty-five yard line. Lee faded back and passed to Green, who crossed the goal line standing up. Clanton penetrated the Bulldog's territory only once. That was when they scored.

Williamson was the most outstanding man on the Clanton team.

For the Montevallo team, Wood, Blackburn, Findley and Winslett starred in the line and Villadsen and Harrison in the backfield.

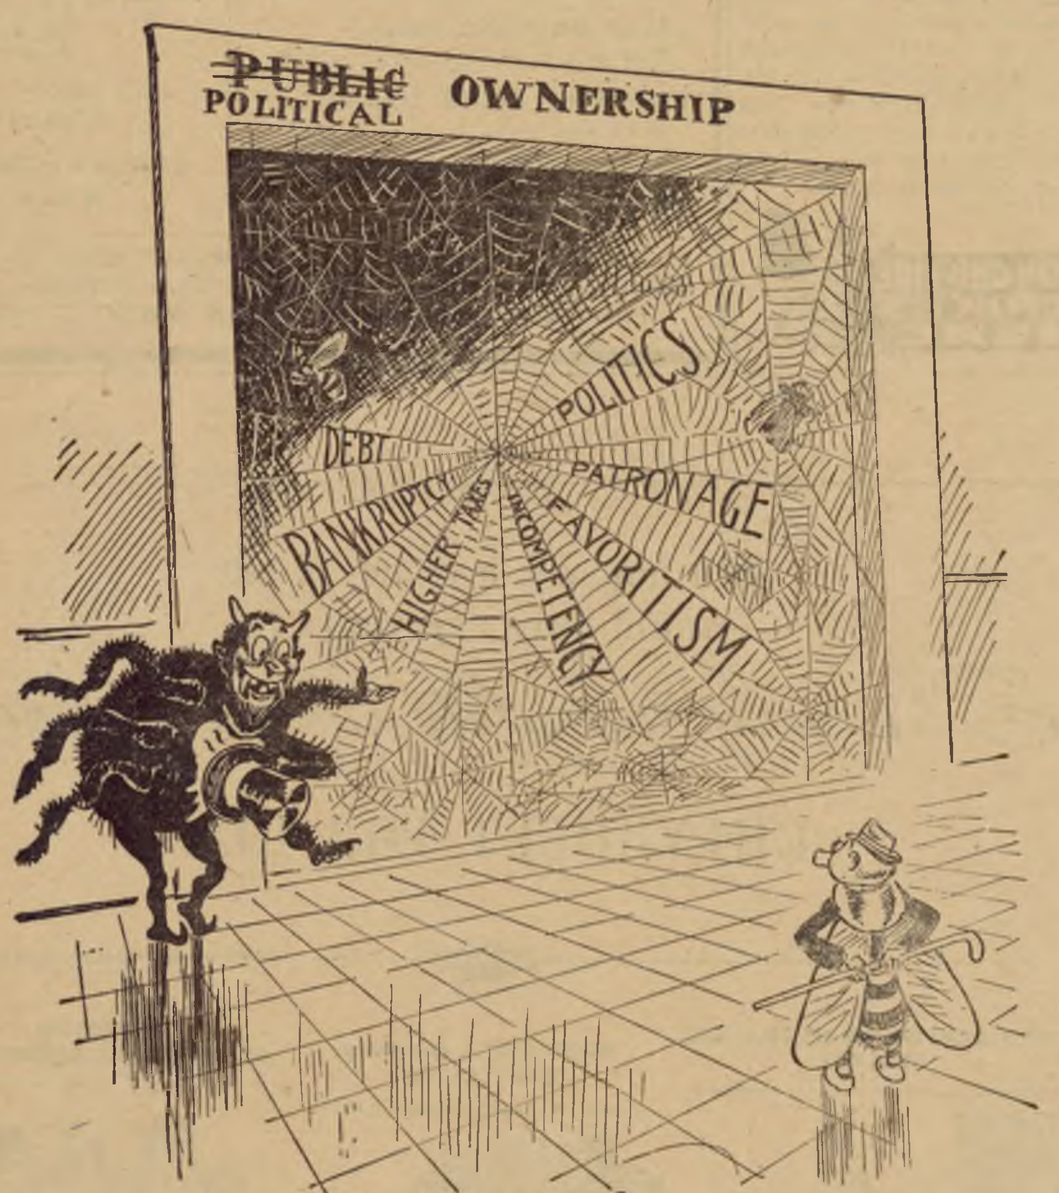
"COME INTO MY PARLOR"

. . . said the Spider



"COME into my parlor," said the Spider to the Fly, making attractive offers the while. The Fly, recalling previous narrow escapes, replied, "You entice me greatly, Sir Spider, but I fear you would put me in bondage."

Whereupon the Spider offered the Fly a contract in which would be included all the promises of a rosy future and freedom from care.

"Very pretty, very pretty," said the Fly, "but spiders have a reputation of being careless with their promises to flies. I think I'll take my chances rather than put myself under the domination of a Spider."

ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP IN ALABAMA

Rosy promises and dazzling inducements are offered by politically inspired promoters of public power enterprises. Assuming the honesty and sincerity of some public power enthusiasts, can they give any guarantee that their political successors in office will have similar high ideals?

After they gain their end of gobbling up the light and power business, what is to prevent officials in charge of public power plants from increasing rates, or taxes, or both? (Taxes already show a heavy increase.)

Alabama Power Company, under regulation by public bodies, has a record of steadily reducing its rates. The average rate per kilowatt hour paid by its customers for all residential uses has declined from 7.9c in September, 1926, to 3.6c in September, 1935.

During the same 9-year period the taxes paid by the company to federal, state, county and municipal governments have increased from 6.4c to 14.4c per dollar of total money taken in.

While taxes have gone UP 180%, average rates for electricity in the home have gone DOWN 54.4%.

The librarians, Miss Campbell and Mrs. Hubbard, have arranged exhibits in the library representing various books. Students have made posters, book marks, and many other contributions to book week. There are several very new books that were placed in th library this week.

Clubs held their monthly meeting last Wednesday at 9:00 o'clock. The Montevallo students have always taken a large interest in clubs. Each year there are various clubs for the Junior and Senior students who are interested in dramatics, photography, traveling, art and other things. This year since we do not have a glee club, the singing club is added to the list. The monthly meetings are looked forward to by each member. Many interesting programs are given in which the members take part in some of the activities of the clubs.

The F. H. A. club of Montevallo High School held its monthly meeting Wednesday, November 13. Frances Reid, club president, was in charge. An interesting program was rendered, under the leadership of Laura Garrett. Plans are being made by the club to appropriate a sum of money to be used for the benefit of the cripple children of Alabama. The goal has been set by the club at $25. This money will be raised by selling cookies, candy, and by selling magazines. Any help given by the local merchants and the people of Montevallo will be greatly appreciated by the club.

On Wednesday, November 13th the Junior High School Dramatic Club met for the second time this year. As we had no business, we immediately started the program. This consisted of two plays. The first play was called "A Quiet Evening." The characters were James Battles, Virginia Frost, Janie Wooley, Donald Vaughan, Brewer Carpenter, Norris Nathews, Frances Bailey and Marjorie Harrison. The other members composed the audience.

The second play was a comedy and it was called "The Lamp Went Out." The persons in this play were Willie Pearle Seale, Frances Baer, Kathleen Coyle and Frances Lemly. Both plays were enjoyed by all and we look forward to many more.

The singing Club of the high school met Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in the study hall. They began by singing "Long, Long Ago," which was suggested by Mrs. Hardy, the sponsor of the club and accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Clayton. They sang various songs suggested by the members of the club. About ten minutes before the hour was up the members stopped singing and the pianist played popular music until the bell rang. The members hope to learn more new songs in future meetings.

The airports approved by the comptroller general, he explained, previously were sanctioned but later dropped—and now are reinstated. Actual launching of these projects depends upon the state WPA office determination as to their relative worth in the works program.

HOME CARE OF THE SICK

For the past few weeks the Home Economics II Class, have been studying home care of the sick.

One interesting phase was about the ways in which we could make the patient more comfortable. Often the patient would be more comfortable if the cover were high enough that it didn't touch her. To provide for this comfort some of the girls made a "bed cradle" out of barrel hoops, wrapped with strips of old sheets. Sometimes a patient likes to sit up in bed and read or write. A wooden box of medium size was used to place on the bed. Both sides were knocked out. The ends were sawed off to the right height, and then it was painted white. We also made a strong bed pocket by folding newspapers. This was pinned to the bed.

We also studied about making the bed and giving the patient a bath. Mrs. Doyle came to the home economics building and demonstrated a bed bath, one of the girls acting as patient. Mrs. Doyle also showed us how to change the linen with the patient in bed.

The department will be doing many more interesting things during the year. So watch for further articles. —Geraldine Lawley, Nellie Colburn, Minverree Smith.

Highway Patrol To Begin December 1

WARNING IS GIVEN TO THOSE WHO DO NOT POSSESS A DRIVERS LICENSE

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 26.—Gov. Bibb Graves said definitely Tuesday that the new state highway patrol will begin functioning December 1st nd that those who have not yet purchased driver's licenses "are going to have to pay up, with costs."

The governor said the drivers license fund, out of which expenses of the patrol will be paid, totaled $53,000 on November 25 and that sufficient money would be on hand by the first of next month to employ part of a contemplated force of approxiately ninety.

"On December 1 we will put on as many men as the funds justify," the chief executive said. "The first business of the patrol will be to make those who have not bought their licences buy them. We must do this to protect the people who have bought them."

He said cost of equipping a motorcycle officer will be about $450 at the outset, and expenses, including salary, gasoline and other items, will be about $2,750 annually.

Gov. Graves and some 250 other prominent Alabamians will attend the celebration in Atlanta Friday in honor of President Roosevelt, saying he had asked all members of the Legislature and the State Democratic Executive Comittee to attend as his guests.

He said he planned to attend the Howard-Southern football game in Birmingham Thursday and would try to go to Atlanta that night.

The governor Tuesday officially approved a recommendation of the state tax, effective December 1, reducing tonnage taxes on coal and iron—a step the governor agreed to take when working for the recent settlement of Alabama's coal miner strike.

The iron tonnage tax was reduced from 4 and one-half cents a ton to 3 cents and the coal tax was sliced from 2 and one-half cents to one and one-half cents by the executive approval.

Pay Your Subscription To Montevallo Times

According to the subscription records of The Montevallo Times, as they were delivered into the hands of the present publisher by Mrs. Harrison, there are many persons on the list of subscribers who are behind with their subscription payments.

We do not want to cut off any of our subscribers without first giving them full opportunity to pay up. And we much prefer that they pay up and remain on our list. We want to keep every subscriber we have, and get many more besides.

Beginning on January the first, we will place our subscription list strictly on the cash in advance basis. All subscribers who are not paid in advance on that date will be dropped from the list.

After January the first our policy will be to accept only cash in advance subscriptions, sending the paper to the subscriber for the time paid for, and stopping the paper when the time is out if not promptly renewed.

We hope our subscribers will take notice of this statement and arrange to pay up their subscriptions between now and the first of January.

Drive For Funds Is Made By Home Ec.

LOCAL STORES COOPERATING IN WORTHY CAUSE FOR CRIPPLE CHIILDREN

At the last meeting of the home economics club the Junior and Senior High School girls decided to work toward a fund for the benefit of the crippled children throughout Alabama. Their first plan was to make and sell cookies. It was decided that the Senior III Foods class would undertake this project for a week.

The group was organized in order to manage finances. Ella Ree Saunders was elected business manager, Marie Orr was elected treasurer and Ina Mae Grady and Virginia Haynes were appointed to see that the cookies were delivered.

An appeal was made to the other Home Economics classes to contribute supplies from home. The response to this was very satisfactory. The following stores made special contributions:

Elliots, Montevallo Cafe, Montevallo Cash Store, Lucas Grocery, I. G. A., McGaughy, Montevallo Feed & Grocery Co., and Jeters. This cooperation was greatly appreciated.

During the week cookies were supplied to the cafeteria each day and for the dance sponsored by the college athletic association. Special orders were also filled.

The results were better than the girls expected. During this time they made a net profit of $10.00.

The girls plan to sell Xmas seals as their next project. At present they are working to get subscriptions to magazines. Remember that the success of this program being carried out for the benefit of the crippled children depends to a great extent on your cooperation with these girls.

QUINN REPORTS TURKEYS AND DEER MAKING COMEBACK IN MANY AREAS NOW

I. T. Quinn, Alabama commissioner of conservation, said today that a state-wide field survey of wild life indicated deer and turkeys had reproducd rapidly during the spring and summer while both doves and quail more than hold their own in number.

Ducks and doves held back by mild weather during early and midfall are reported coming in faster than last year as late November cold snaps swept the country.

Quail—Good crop but dry fall tended to make them seek swamps and lowlands, which may result in the birds being hard to find.

Deer—Deer hunting should be up to its usual high standard in Sumter, Choctaw, Washington, Baldwin and Mobile Counties. National Forest in Winston, Lawrence and Franklin Counties well stocked. Animal more than holding its own and is spreading to "foreign counties.".

Doves—Enjoyed big hatching season but moved to peanut fields of South Alabama early. Mild weather kept migration at low ebb during the early season. Good hunting expected end of season.

Turkeys—Restoring of wild turkeys continues at an almost phenomenal pace, especially in southern lowlands and northern forests.

THE NEW WORLD

That there has often been a profound gulf fixed between personal piety and social reconstruction is one of the strangest and saddest paradoxes in the experience of man. One would surmise that when someone consciously consecrates himself to God, changes in all his relationships —business, social, racial, national, etc., must inevitably follow. Yet it is a well-known fact that one of the tenderest, most moving of our Christian hymns was written by a man whose conscious never was troubled over extensive operations in the African slave trade. There was apparntly no connection between his devotion to God and his highly-profitable business. But we know that 'love to God' and 'love for one's neighbor' are inseparable. Today there are numbers of men whose personal integrity is unimpeachable, but who do not or will not face the fact that they live on the backs of others, and that the system which they so ably administer grinds out an inexorable harvest of human misery. The effects are so far removed from the causes, responsiblity is apportioned out over such a complicated network, that few realize, and fewer want to realize the social consequences of their personal activities.

The real personal religion has an immediate transmittance into the world at large. That this is so is being demonstrated on every hand by the mounting cases of social reconstruction—in homes, businesses, hospitals, Schools, churches, prison and politics. In every case where one of these departments of life has actually changed in its emphasis and form the social change grew out of the personal change of one or two people whose lives were bound up with that department.

An executive in one of our largest industries summed up that developmnt, in the statement that when first he gave his life to God he had seen what God wanted to do to him in business, and that now the vision had enlarged into what God wants to do through him to business. There in a nutshell, is the carryover from personal conversion to social reconstruction.

Those of us who have committed ourselves to pioneering in the new world order, the kingdom of God on earth, are realizing, with a renewed urgency, certain fundamental principles.

One's change must be as radical in every sphere of his activity as his own personal life. If a man is in business, for instance, he must ask himself certain hard questions and answer them in action. "What are the social effects of my particular business? Is it thriving on human misery? If so, is my protest to be by resignation, or is the positive protest of remaining and changing the business? Again, the whole question of the use of money, on however small and personal a scale, is fraught with economic consequences. Where does my money come from? Out of the pocket of some other human being? Have I thought through the answers?

And, as one pioneer in these and other fields under God's direction, he must associate his discoveries and experiences to others and enlist them in the same adventure, in whatever sphere of life they move. We must not only create experience, we must also relate it fully to the different areas of life.

God's purposes are nothing less than world-transformation.. In that plan, He has a significant part for anyone who will adhere to these conditions.

PLAY AND HAPPINESS

Every normal child wants to play. To children play is not a mere wasting of time but it is life. To make a child a better social being capable of living cooperatively and peacefully with his fellow beings is certainly an important aim of education.

Supervised play is just as important to the normal development of a child as any other phase of school work. Our school is so organized that every child has the opportunity of participating in a well-balanced, all-round, sane, interesting, safe and healthful program of physical education.

That the children have fun is evidenced by their keen interest in the various activities. The competition is a natural outcome of team organization—it is not stressed too much. The children have such fun seeing which "cooperative group" wins a race.

The fourth grade boys have two teams—the Golden Arrows and the Lone Eagles. They are trying to see which team can first reach the goal set for them.

Montevallo Wildcats and Montevallo Cubs are the two sixth grade boys teams. At present they are interested in a newcomb tournament, stunts and tumbling, athletic events, relays and mass games.

The girls have two teams: Athenians and Spartans. At present the class room work is being centered around a study of early Greece and Rome. They are including as many activities played at the time in their play program as possible.

In the third grade the four teams are having a cross country race. The motorcycles, seaplanes, stream - lined trains and aeroplanes cover a certain mileage every day.

In all scoring skill, participation, interest and sportsmanship are considered. All grades go outdoors whenever possible. Health is a primary consideration.

PEA RIDGE CLUB MEETING

Last Thursday afternoon the Pea Ridge Club Ladies met at the home of Mrs. Booth for a demonstration on the use of sweet potatoes in the menu. Since most families are well supplied with sweet potatoes at this time of the year, it proved to be a very practical lesson. One of the menus demonstrated was potato and apple souffle, made by this recipe:

1 c sweet potatoes mashed.
½ c sugar.
1 c sweetened apple sauce.
⅛teaspoons cinnamon.
½ teaspoon salt.

Mash potatoes well; add well beaten egg yolk and sugar. Stir in the apple sauce and cinnamon. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into mixture. Put into a well buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with grated orange peel and bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. Serve hot or cold.

The next club meeting will be with Mrs. Booth on Tuesday, November 26 at 1:15 instead of the regular Thursday meeting at two-thirty All ladies of the community are invited to attend.

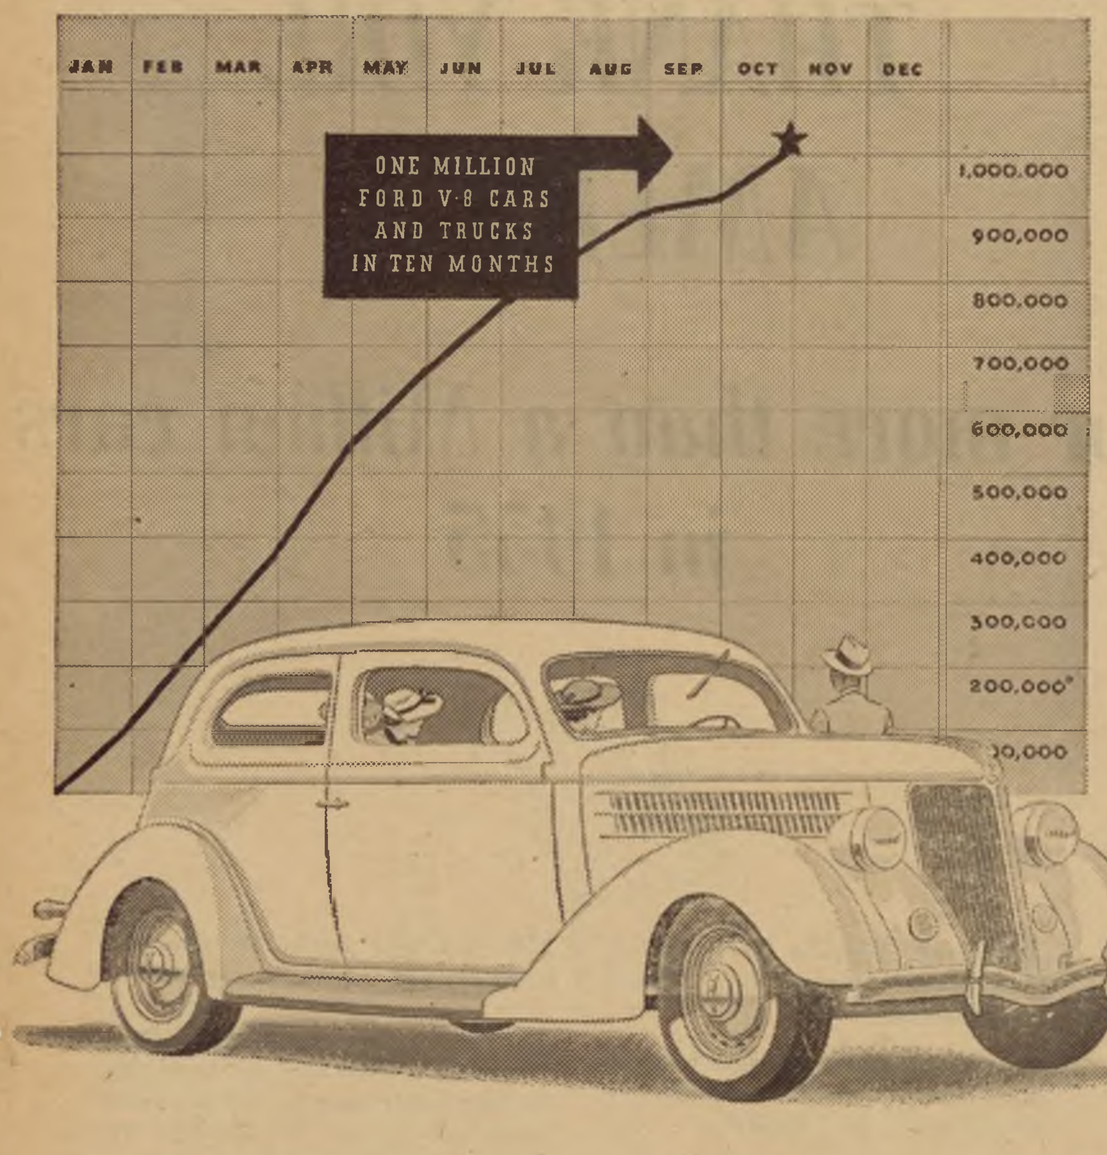
V·8 LEADERSHIP



ON OCTOBER 31 of last year, Henry Ford announced his intention to build a million Ford V-8s in 1935. We are pleased to report that this goal was reached in exactly ten months instead of a full year.

One million cars and trucks is an impressive total. But figures by themselves mean nothing. It is what they represent that counts. Selling a V-8 at a low price has brought a new kind of automobile within reach of the people. Producing it has provided steady work for hundreds of thousands of men in the Ford plants, in associated industries and on the farm.

These million Ford V-8 cars and trucks have helped to make things better all around. In the first ten months of 1935 the Ford Motor Company paid out, in the United States alone, $140,119,326.00 in wages and $523,111,389.00 for materials.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

There could be no doubt in anyones mind but that book week was celebrated in the high school. Attractive posters were displayed on bulletin boards and special effort was made to decorate the library to call the students attention to books. The various departments of the school assisted in making and arranging the display.

Miss Hardy's Junior I occupational class worked on a project "How Man has Kept Records." Joseph Argo and Hubert Beard put picture writing on rock to show the records the early caveman left. Clay tablets such as were used by the Assyrians and Babylónians were made by Eddie Bunn and Marie Allen. Calvin Harrison and Lester Fitts showed the type of picture writing done by the Indians. An example of a wax tablet used by the Greeks and Romans was made by Edward Sellers. A roll such as the Egyptian used was made by Luther Adams and William Pickett. Odean Hughes printed a lesson on an old slate to show how school children years ago prepared their lesson. The other members of the class assisted in gathering the materials needed.

Miss Allen's Class of boys in clay modeled animals to illustrate the book "The Jungle Man and His Animals". The members of the class were J. W. Ward, Howard Cook, Jimmy Harrison, Fred Lucas, Tom Pilgreen and Lee Lucas. Brewer Carpenter modeled an amusing head of Dr. Doolittle out of clay. The Senior I English class made a map of good stories of the United States, each student locating his favorite book. Elizabeth Harrison did the art work on the map. The Junior I's and Junior II's are continuing the project of making a large size map of good stories in art class, under the direction of Miss Allen. These maps will be a permanent decoration for the library and the halls.

Government Class Plans Forum

The unified American government class, under Miss Barksdale's supervision, held a mock session of the cabinet members with the president last week. The class had a discussion about the security bill, strikers, Ethiopia and other topics of present interest.

With Miss Barksdale's suggestion, the class has decided to hold a forum every two weeks and discuss various subjects. It will be a round tablediscussion on local, sounty, state national and international affairs.

Rings

By Thanksgiving Day the Seniors will probably be wearing their new class rings. The rings came last Thursday and will soon be distributed among the students who bought them.

Five members of the bookkeeping class, Floyce Murphy, Mary Kate Harrison, David Lessley, Fred Frost and Ernest Clark accompanied Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bagwell to Birmingham last Friday.

The purpose of this was to study the school banking system. They made a visit to Ensley and Phillips High Schools and were given material in which was needed to carry on a school bank.

Thanksgiving Day

"What have I got to be thankful for?" asked Tom on Thanksgiving morning. About the time he said this a fairy came along. She touched him with her wand and he could not see. Then Tom shouted "Oh, I have got something to be thankful for, I have eyes. But what else have I got to be thankful for?"

The fairy touched him with her wand again and he was deaf. "Oh, he shouted again, I have ears to be thankful for?"

The fairy touched him the third time and he couldn't walk. Tom said with a sigh, "Everyone has lots to be thankful for."

Again the fairy touched him and he could see hear and walk.—Lorene Carden, Jr. I.

Montevallo High School home economics girls have begun their drive for the cripple children's fund with a local contest for magazine subscriptions. Each contestant is working for subscriptions which give a certain number of points for each year taken. The quota, $25.00, for Montevallo could be made by sending in fifty one-year subscriptions to McCall's and enjoy a good magazine along with the satisfaction of knowing you have helped with a worthy cause. Each girl who is soliciting subscriptions has an official card which should be presented before a subscription is received. The card is your guarantee that she is an official representative in the contest. The following girls are making progress toward winning the prize for subscription points: Ine Mae Grady, Maribeth Hodges, Laura Garrett, Clara Lee, Martha Carr, Annie Brewster, Myra Gene Comer, Blanche Busby, Helen Ingram, Dora Lee Anderson, Fannie Mae Collum, Billie Ruth Fitts.

The following prizes will be offered by the local merchants in town who are cooperating in a splendid manner with the drive:

First prize, one pair hose given by Klotzman's, second, 1 manicure set, given by Cowart Drug Co.; third, 1 compact, given by Wilson Drug Co.; fourth, 1 pair hose, given by Baer Dry Goods Co.; fifth, 1 handkerchief, given by Hick's Variety Store.

Rev. John A. May, evangelist, after a five weeks evangelistic trip to the Louisiana conference, returned last Friday, November 22nd, where he held five revival meetings, and saw over two hundred backsliders claimed and sinners converted to God. Four of the above meetings were in the churches with pastors and one was at a CCC camp, where 236 young men were stationed. When over one hundred of these boys, who were non-church members, surrendered to God, Capt. Smiker said, "That is the greatest demonstration I ever saw."

NEVER TREAT A COUGH LIGHTLY

Never send a boy to do a man's work. That's why we say to you, go today to Wilson Drug Co., and get a bottle of that famous, smooth, creamy, creosoted Emulsion known to pharmacists as Bronchuline Emulsion. It's medicine for grown-ups for coughs that hang on and never seem to let go. No sweet syrupy concoction that simply plays with a cough—no dope or habit forming drugs—it quickly strikes at the source of the trouble. Get a bottle and enjoy a good night's rest.

BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday is "Loyalty Day" in our church. Every member of the church is urged to be present ot the morning worship service at 11:00 o'clock. The hour will be given to the discussion of the opportunities, problems and needs of the church. The discussion will be open to all. Come prepared to say anything that may be on your heart—make a confession, make a complaint, offer any criticism or suggestion.

A real Baptist church is a real democracy in which every member has as much right and authority as any other. There are no class distinctions. No one is inferior to another except as his personal qualities or his choice makes him so. No one is insignificant except by choice. No one member or group has any ruling acthority. The church governs itself by majority vote and the weakest member's vote counts as much as that of the strongest member.

It follows, then, that if all have equal privileges all have equal responsibilities. No member should ever say "their" church or "your" church, but always "our" church. Baptists claim to be sound New Testament Christians in doctrine and polity but some of them are terrible heretics in practice. The most deadly of all heresy is that of indifference and inactivity. It is far more important to be "orthoprax" (acting right) than to be "orthodox" (thinking right). The two should go together.

The point is that every member has a definite responsibility to support the church. Otherwise, membership is meaningless to the individual and is hurtful to the church. If you are not helping your church, you are hindering it. "He that is not for me is against me," said Jesus. Are you for or against the church? Where will you be on "Loyalty Day?" Shall we see you at church—your church?

The Baptist Training Union Will meet at 6:45 p.m.

There will be no evening service because of the welcome service to Rev. O. R. Burns at the Methodist church.

Week of Prayer

The women of the Baptist church will observe the annual "Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions" next week, December 2 to 6. The meetings will be held at the church each afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The programs will be full of information and inspiration. Everyone who can is urged to attend the meetings, whether members of the Missionary Society or not.

On Wednesday evening at 7:30 the young people will give a program in the auditorium of the church. A special invitation is extended to all the members of the church and anyone else who will to attend this service.

The Royal Ambassadors will meet meet at the pastor's home at 6:30 on Thursday evening, December 5, for a special program in observance of the "Week of Prayer."

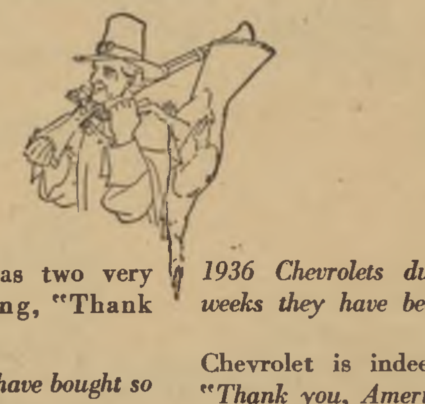
CHEVROLET
The Complete Car

THANK YOU, AMERICA,

for more than a Million cars in 1935



This year Chevrolet has two very good reasons for saying, "Thank you, America."

One reason is that people have bought so many Chevrolet cars that production for the year will reach 1,040,000.

And the other reason is that they have placed a record number of orders for new 1936 Chevrolets during the first few weeks they have been on display.

Chevrolet is indeed happy to say, "Thank you, America," and to pledge continued adherence to the manufacturing and service policies which have won and held this friendship.

STATE LEGION OFFICIALS VISIT

HELD SPECIAL MEETING HERE ON TUESDAY NIGHT, DECEMBER 3

Hendrick-Hudson Post of the American Legion held a very interesting special meeting at the Hut Tuesday night upon the occasion of an official visit to the Post by Dr. Marion Inge, of Mobile, Commander of the Alabama Department, and D. Trotter Jones, of Montgomery, Department Adjutant. Pete Jarman, former Secretary of State, and one time Commander of the Alabama Department of the Legion, was also a guest, and as always, heartily welcomed in any gathering of Legion and Auxiliary members.

There was a good attendance of ex-service men and the ladies. Dr. H. W. James, Post Commander, presided, and introduced the visiting speakers. Commander Inge made a most wonderful address outlining the scope and purposes of the Legion as an institution designed for the broad program of patriotic service to community, state and nation.

Adjutant, Trotter Jones, devoted his address to an interpretation of the objectives of the Legion as set up in the State and National Conventions this year.

Former Commander, Pete Jarman, very deeply impressed the audience with his wonderful conception and illustration of the great importance of all ex-service men becoming members of the Legion as the most valuable contribution to the successful accomplishment of the Legion's program.

At the conclusion of the addresses a brief social period was enjoyed with the ladies of the Auxiliary serving drinks and cake.

It was determined that Hendrick-Hudson Post this year will keep up its far-famed record of going over the top in membership. For the past four years this accomplishment has made the Post one of the outstanding units in the National Department.

The following local visitors were welcomed to the meeting: Dr. Brooks, Miss Myrtle Brooke, and Miss Ewing, of Alabama College; Mr. W. F. Tidwell, principal of the Montevallo High School; and Mrs. Charotte Peterson.

Orr, director of the training schools. Lucien Giddens, president of the club, presided. More than fifty members and guests were present.

The Thanksgiving holidays closed at Alabama College Monday morning with the beginning of classes at 8 o'clock. The students and faculty, with few exceptions, have been away since last Wednesday noon for the holidays.

Mrs. Fred Frost and children, Fred, Virginia and Myra, visited Mrs. Frost's mother, Mrs. Bearden, of Columbiana, last week end.

Bama Skippers At Strand Saturday

TO MAKE DEBUT INTO THEATRE AT LOCAL HOUSE THIS WEEK

The Bama Skippers are booked as an added feature at the Strand Theatre on Saturday of this week. This stage appearance is the Bama Skippers' debut into the theatre, although they have done exhibition work in several towns in South Alabama. The band has taken particular care in arranging this week's program and is anxious to offer music that will appeal to everyone. In a series of appearances at the Strand the band will offer a soloist and novelty for each program, Miss Billie Hill of Saginaw being the guest for this Saturday.

The Bama Skippers are rapidly earning a reputation throughout the State of Alabama as a good organization and have played return engagements in all parts of the state with unfailing regularity. Their playing has won many friends, and the name of the orchestra is becoming well-known.

This orchestra has been in existence for three years, and now consists of eight instruments. Changes have been made due to three boys leaving for college, and replacements are made as needed. The boys who are away at school, Warren Brown, Julian Hardy and James Hardy, all say that their instruments have continued to serve them well, not only for amusement but financially as well.

The present band consists of eight musicians as follows: Eddie Mahaffey, 1st sax; Clifford Fulford, 2nd sax; Douglas Broyles, 3rd sax; Marcus Vincent, drums; Charles Mahaffey, 1st trumpet; Taylor Hardy, 2nd trumpet; John May, bass and Mrs. E G. Hardy, piano.

The orchestra hopes that an interest can be created among the boys of the town and vicinity that will lead not only to financial gain but also individual training that will be of service later on.

Pay Your Subscription To Montevallo Times

According to the subscription records of The Montevallo Times, as they were delivered into the hands of the present publisher by Mrs. Harrison, there are many persons on the list of subscribers who are behind with their subscription payments.

We do not want to cut off any of our subscribers without first giving them full opportunity to pay up. And we much prefer that they pay up and remain on our list. We want to keep every subscriber we have, and get many more besides.

Beginning on January the first, we will place our subscription list strictly on the cash in advance basis. All subscribers who are not paid in advance on that date will be dropped from the list.

After January the first our policy will be to accept only cash in advance subscriptions, sending the paper to the subscriber for the time paid for, and stopping the paper when the time is out if not promptly renewed.

We hope our subscribers will take notice of this statement and arrange to pay up their subscriptions between now and the first of January.

FIGHTS AHEAD IN CONGRESS RACES

THREE NEW REPRESENTATIVES TO GO TO WASHINGTON SURVEY SHOWS

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 23.—Alabama's nine congressmen will face the fight of their political lives in the congressional elections next May, with odds even that three new representatives will go to Washington next year, a survey of the state revealed today.

With the Democratic primaries still five months away, the field is full of powerful candidates, several of whom have already weeded out their weaker members to combine forces against the incumbents.

Only Representative Joe Starnes of Guntersville, fifth district, and Henry B. Steagall, of Ozark, in the third, have clear paths to re-election, political observers agree.

Representatives Lister Hill, of Montgomery, second; Sam Hobbs, of Selma, fourth; William B. Bankhead, Jasper, seventh; and George Huddleston, Birmingham, ninth district, are facing their bitterest opposition in several campaigns, but are expected to be re-elected, depending on the change of attitude this winter.

It is generally conceded that Pete B. Jarman, former Secretary of State, will be the next Congressman from the Sixth District. Reports have reached the capitol that William B. Oliver, the incumbent, of Tuscaloosa, may not run for re-election because of illness. In the last election, Oliver defeated Jarman by a narrow margin. He won only 957 more votes than Jarman out of 7.550 in his own county. Jarman is said to have been quietly campaigning ever since the last election and his friends have plastered the district with "Jarman for Congress" signs.

SPEAKING OF CONGRESSIONAL TIMBER

Pete Jarman was a visitor to Prattville for a short while yesterday afternoon and received a warm welcome from his many friends.

Pete is one of the most popular men in Alabama's public life. For eleven years he was a state examiner and worked in many counties of Alabama. As evidence of the friends he made during that time, in 1930 he was nominated Secretary of State in the first primary over two opponents.

In 1934, in a race for Congress from the sixth Alabama district against Hon. W. B. Oliver, of Tuscaloosa, Mr. Oliver was elected with approximately 2,000 majority out of 23,500 votes. It is generally understood that Mr. Jarman will again be a candidate for congress from his district next year. —Prattville Progress.

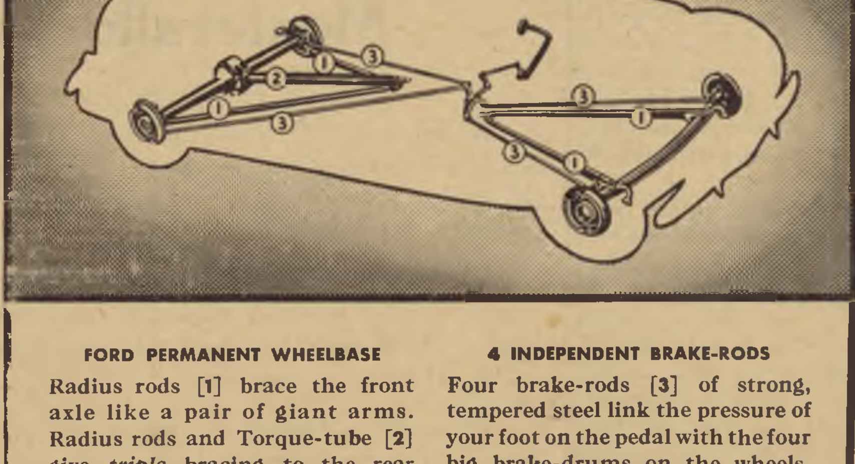
THERE ARE NO SAFER BRAKES MADE

than the Super-Safety Brakes of the 1936 Ford V-8



FORD PERMANENT WHEELBASE

Radius rods [1] brace the front axle like a pair of giant arms. Radius rods and Torque-tube [2] give triple bracing to the rear axle. This means that the front and rear axles of a Ford car are always held equi-distant—in perfect alignment. On this permanent wheelbase any braking system now in common use could be used. Only with this Ford-type wheelbase, can mechanical, Super-Safety brakes be used to the fullest advantage.

4 INDEPENDENT BRAKE-RODS

Four brake-rods [3] of strong, tempered steel link the pressure of your foot on the pedal with the four big brake-drums on the wheels. They do this positively, surely, under all road conditions. Note especially that no one Ford brake has to depend on the other three. Failure of one—practically impossible—would still leave you three perfectly-operating brakes.

NO other car in America has the same basic design as the Ford V-8. Because of this design, the Ford could use any type of braking system now in common use. (Diagram at left shows why.)

With the whole field to choose from, Ford stands by mechanically-operated Super-Safety brakes as safest, surest, and most positive for the Ford V-8.

This is the type braking system used on many of America's costliest cars and most racing cars. Because of unique chassis design, Ford can use it to better effect than any other car built today.

All in all, no safer brakes are made than you get with the 1936 Ford V-8. Drive it today—and see for yourself.

Rufus Willis Cobb, Governor of Alabama, From Shelby

By John A. Darden, Goodwater, Ala.

The life and character of Governor Rufus Willis Cobb are most interesting and colorful, and they appeal to us as worthy of emulation and example. Governor Cobb, while a statewide character to say the least of it, yet he may justly be claimed by three counties—St. Clair, where he was born and educated, Shelby, where he lived most of his life and from whence he was called to become Governor of our state, and Jefferson County, where he spent his declining years and died.

Governor Cobb was born at Asheville, St. Clair County, Ala., February 25th, 1829, and died at Birmingham, Ala., November 26th, 1913, age 84 years. He was Alabama's 25th governor. He was educated at Asheville Academy, and at the University of Tennessee, graduating from the latter in 1850. He read law at Asheville under Hon. John C. Thomaston, and was admitted to the bar of St. Clair County in 1855.

When the Civil War broke out Lawyer Cobb entered the Confederate Army as Captain of Co. "C", 10th Alabama Infantry, Forney's Brigade, and went with his regiment to Virginia, remaining there until 1863, when he was transferred to Gen. Joseph Wheeler's Calvary. In all places he served with bravery and distinction.

After the war, Mr. Cobb located at Marion, Ala., where he resumed his law practice. In 1867, Mr. Cobb moved to Columbiana, Shelby County, forming a partnership with Hon. B. B. Lewis for the general practice of law, which continued until Mr. Lewis was elected president of the University of Alabama. In 1873, Mr. Cobb moved to Helena, Shelby County, where he was president of the Central Iron Works.

His political life began in 1872, when he was elected to the state senate from Shelby and Bibb County District. In 1876 he was elected state senator from Shelby, Jefferson and Walker County District, under a new apportionment, and was elected president of the state senate during his second term as state senator.

In 1878, Mr. Cobb was nominated and elected governor by the Democratic Party, and reelected in 1880. His administrations were marked by peace in all activities of the state.

In 1888, Governor Cobb was prevailed upon to accept the office of Probate Judge of Shelby County, which office he filled with ability, fairness and integrity. This was his last political office.

Soon after his term as Probate Judge expired, Governor Cobb moved to Birmingham, where he lived until his death in 1913. His home is located on First Avenue and about 68th Street—Woodlawn.

Governor Cobb was a Baptist, a Mason, being a member of both branches, being a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason.

Governor Cobb had the distinction of being the only man who was ever Governor of Alabama, and at the same time being Grand Master of the Masonic Order of Alabama.

It can be truthfully said of Governor Cobb that he was a patriot, statesman and a Christian citizen worthy of emulation of the youth of Alabama, and a high example of citizenship and statesmanship.

Governor Cobb was married twice. The first time at Knoxville, Tenn., where, in 1850, he married Margaret McClung, who died in 1865. To this marriage two children, John W. and Doar, the latter becoming the wife of Richard Fell. The second marriage occurred at Montevallo, on December 31st, 1866, to Miss Frances Fell, to which marriage two children, also, were born—Edith, who married Charles M. Campbell, of Birmingham, and a son, Richard, who moved West.

Miss Lucyle Black was the dinner guest of the R. W. Taylor family in Clanton Thanksgiving.

Mrs. Lewis Faucett of Northport was the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Black and family, the past week end.

FORD BUILDS MILLION CARS IN TEN MONTHS

Henry Ford has made good his promise of a year ago to build a million Ford cars in 1935!

That was the biggest news at the San Francisco Auto Show and Ford dealers were happy over the achievement of the Ford Motor Company because it evidenced the nationwide popularity of this Ford automobile which led all competitors in sales by a wide margin in the year just coming to a close.

In fact, according to local Ford dealers, Ford has done better than he prophecied. He has built a million cars in ten months time. Total production for the full year will probably run to 1,180,000 cars.

The millionth Ford rolled off the assembly line at the factory Thursday afternoon, October 31st. While Henry Ford and Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor Company, looked on, a black Fordor sedan came down the assembly line. It looked like all other cars of its model but under its hood was engine number 2,336,770. It was the millionth Ford unit made in the United States since January 1st, this year. It left the production line at 2:44 o'clock and was taken at once for shipment to the company's showrooms in New York.

Farm Debt Board For Shelby County

COMPOSED OF W. L. CHRISTIAN, A. B. BRISTOW AND W. A. FULTON

Charles A. McKinnon, regional farm debt adjustment specialist for Alabama with offices in Auburn, today said the state organization to handle voluntary debt adjustments between farmers and their creditors has been completed with re-appointment of practically all county committee members appointed last year by Governor Bibb Graves.

This unit is a part of the rural resettlement division of the Resettlement Administration, headquarters of which in this region is in Montgomery. The Shelby County Committee, members of which serve without pay, are W. L. Christian, A. B. Bristow and W. A. Fulton. Their activities are tied into the state office of Mr. McKinnon through Arthur Stephenson, district farm debt adjustment specialist.

Assistance to the creditor and to the farm debtor in general is the purpose of this work, Mr. McKinnon said, and these are effected through cooperation of the Resettlement Administration and A. A. Lauderdale, county agent. Prevention of unnecessary foreclosures is brought about by voluntary agreements between creditors and debtors, who are brought together by the county committees to prevent expensive litigation.

"A farm-debtor is insolvent when he is confronted with the hopeless task of attempting to carry a debt that is beyond his capacity to pay," C. I. Cowden, regional chief in charge of farm debt adjustment, said in a recent address. "Insolvency can be dealt with effectively in only one of three ways: bankruptcy, foreclosure, or voluntary adjustment."

Court action, Mr. McKinnon said, has often resulted in dispossession of the farmer as owner or eviction as tenant. Often the creditor has found that he has dispossessed a worthy farmer without helping himself.

"The county committee has not been set up to help deadbeats or to encourage farmers to dodge honest debts," Mr. McKinnon pointed out. "Throughout Alabama they are made up of local men who know conditions on both sides of the fence. Their aim is to help honest, efficient farmers to adjust their debts so they may continue as a help to their communities and to help creditors to clear their books of frozen accounts and put more money into local business channels."

Shelby County farmers who are burdened by debts they cannot handle or the creditors may apply for the services of this committee to any member of the county committee or to A. A. Lauderdale, county agent.

Meetings of the county committee are held in the office of W. L. Christian at 10:00 a.m. on the second and fourth Fridays of each month.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Givhan were in Birmingham Monday.

Mrs. Nellie Peterson and Miss Mary Peterson are leaving Friday for several weeks visit in Chicago, Ill.

Master Zane Nathews spent last week end in West Blocton.

We do not want to cut off any of our subscribers without first giving them full opportunity to pay up. And we much prefer that they pay up and remain on our list. We want to keep every subscriber we have, and get many more besides.

Beginning on January the first, we will place our subscription list strictly on the cash in advance basis. All subscribers who are not paid in advance on that date will be dropped from the list.

After January the first our policy will be to accept only cash in advance subscriptions, sending the paper to the subscriber for the time paid for, and stopping the paper when the time is out if not promptly renewed.

We hope our subscribers will take notice of this statement and arrange to pay up their subscriptions between now and the first of January.

Budget Is Slashed To Match Revenue

SCHOOL AND HEALTH APPROPRIATIONS GIVEN BIG CUT IN THE NEW SET-UP

In spite of hired experts and months of study, the recess committee of the Legislature dealing with revenues and appropriations failed by $4,732,955.56 per annum in balancing revenues with appropriations, and State Comptroller Charley Lee, in figures released Monday by Gov. Graves, was forced to make a large cut in the budget for all State activities outside of salaries.

The gist of the action of Comptroller Lee was that the legislature appropriated nearly $5,000,000 more per annum than the taxes will bring in.

Mr. Lee's estimates are made regarding the general fund of the state. He finds that the estimated disbursements, as he calls them, but which are appropriations, will be for the fiscal year 1935-1936 a sum of $12,468,772.33. He finds the estimated general fund receipts for the year, including the cash balance on hand as of October 1, 1935, will be $7,735,816.77.

There are two state functions that will be hit hard by the application of the budget law, education and health. While salaries of employees of the state have not been affected by the budget, except those of school teachers, since the decision of Attorney Gen. Albert Carmichael which held that the Tucker act making school teachers' salaries the same as the salaries of other state employees was unconstitutional, other non-essential expenditures of the state are directly affected. The gist of it is that unless the legislature provides funds from some source the schools of Alabama will close before the middle of February in all counties except two or three.

The education department received its annual $500,000 appropriation from the 1935 legislature. Under the budget proration the department will receive only $132,150. The schools received an appropriation from the legislature of $3,160,516 for a mimimum program. The budget cut of Comptroller Lee makes the schools receive on the minimum program only $835,412.10.

The budget as announced by Comptroller Lee and given out by Gov. Graves is subject to revision on April 1. But it is generally believed that there can be no considerable change on April 1 and that the budget will be only approximately 26 per cent of the appropriations for "non-essentials" made by the last legislature which tried by an act to make the school teachers' services an essential function.

With all of the cuts made by the comptroller, education will receive from all sources in the fiscal year 1935--1936 a total of $7,551,257.57. This includes the current three mill tax, poll taxes, the educational trust fund and the cut from the general fund minimum program of $825,412.10.

Montevallo, Auburn and Alabama get some severe cuts in the budget. Instead of $205,.119.98 for the year And as for Alabama, instead of $393,899.05 for the year, its draw will be only $104,107.51, and Auburn comes Alabama College will get $54,213.21. in for $87,853.07 instead of an appropriation of $332,399.05. The higher institutions of learning are wrecked, as it were, under the budget rearrangement. And all of the normal schools suffer in proportion including Florence, Troy, Livingston, Jacksonville, Montgomery, Daphne and the balance. There is not sufficient money coming in to pay them in spite of the snuff and tobacco tax, the drivers' licenses and all of the other increased taxes.

"This means that the common schools cannot run more than five and a half months," said Dr. Dr. J. A. Keller, state superintendent of education, when notified of the budget announcement. "It means the common schools are coming up $2,500,000 short of their appropriations, and the higher institutions of learning from $600,000 to $1,000,000 short, I haven't had time to figure the last out exactly.

"But it all means we cannot run our schools beyond five and a half months."

How health is affected by the application of the budget may be seen by these figures: There was appropriated for county health work $202,900. Under the budget there will be available only $53,626 for that work.

HOME ECONOMICS GIRLS LEARN REFINISH FURNITURE

That furnishings need not be expensive to be attractive has become a reality to the home economics I girls of Montevallo High School. They donned their painting clothes and found that a little paint on stain could work wonders with an old piece of furniture. The class painted a new cabinet, repainted some chairs, restained an end table and shellacked and waxed a cutting table. In these the problems of painting new furniture, removing the old finish and restaining, shellacking and waxing, and repainting were solved. The pupils learned the principles involved in refinishing furniture and several have applied them in their homes to brighten the corner where they are by making the most of what they have.

State Board Asks Funds For Orphans

BAPTIST CONVENTION ASKS ALL PASTORS AND SUPERINTENDENTS FOR AID

(From Troy Messenger)

Among the many important matters taken up at the Montgomery meeting of the executive board of the Alabama Baptist State Convention this week was a resolution passed urging the pastors and superintendent of Alabama to raise the sum of $25,000 as a Christmas contribution to the Orphans Home in Troy. The orphans home is supported exclusively by free will contributions and officials are expecting their hopes of $25,000 to be realized this Christmas. The following is a copy of the resolution:

"Whereas, the Christmas cash offering constitutes approximately 75 per cent of the cash of our orphans home received from the denomination and,

"Whereas, the Alabama Baptist State Convention has officially fixed the Christmas Season as the time to give cash for the support of the children,

"Be it resolved, therefore, that we, the Executive Board of the Alabama Baptist State Convention, in session in Montgomery, December 10th, 1935, fully realizing the acute need of cash, call upon the churches and Sunday Schools;

"1. To put forth an unusual effort to secure a cash contribution from every member of both the churches and Sunday Schools.

"2. That we approve the goal of $25,000 and that we shall personally make every effort possible, and do call upon all pastors and superintendents of our Sunday Schoos to lead their people to reach that goal.—J. C. Stivender, Chairman Ex. Board. S. J. Ezell, recording secretary."

New Regulations For Relief Workers

TRANSFERS WILL BE MADE SOON TO PREVAILING WAGE PROJECTS

With Alabama's gigantic program of public works about to hit its full stride in numerous contract jobs under the Public Works Administration and the United States Bureau of Public Roads, Thad Holt, State Administrator of the Works Progress Administration today prepared for transfer of eligible WPA workers to these prevailing wage projects.

The Works Progress Administration, he pointed out, has always been a reservoir of labor at lower or security payments and was designed to take up the slack until contract and higher wage construction jobs were opened.

To facilitate transfer of eligible WPA workers Administrator Holt announced a definite procedure for such transfer to Public Works Administration contract jobs under regulation adopted at a conference with A. J. Speer, Alabama director of the National Reemployment Service and H. S Geismer, Alabama director of the Public Works Administration.

The regulations, he said, set forth that workers must be given an opportunity to demonstrate their ability to perform the assigned tasks before any rejection by a contractor.

This action, he pointed out, was taken in accord with the president's order to the effect that as many relief persons as practicable are to be employed on all public works contracts "solely on a basis of their fitness to do the assigned tasks and shall not be discriminated against on any other grounds whatsoever."

Terms under which contractors are awarded contracts likewise stipulate that eligible relief workers shall be given full opportunity to demonstrate their ability to do the work.

Once assigned, therefore, Administrator Holt said, it would be up to the worker to prove his ability. He emphasized that transfer from WPA jobs to contract work at a higher rate of pay does not, within itself, give the worker a right to the higher pay job over all others. It gives him, he said, a preference in opportunity and a chance to prove his worth in the task to which he is assigned.

If refused the opportunity, Administrator Holt said, the WPA worker has a right to receive from the contractor or his representative a definite reason in writing for refusal of such employment since this information is posted against the worker's employment record and he cannot return to WPA without this information.

The procedure to be observed in the transfer of labor from the Works Progress Administration to Public Works Administration contract jobs briefly, is as follows:

1. At least 10 days before the initial requisition for labor for PWA projects, State PWA Director Geismer will make available to Fred R. Smith, state drector of labor management of the WPA and to State Reemployment Director A. J. Speer, a schedule of labor requirements on such PWA projects.
2. If qualified eligible labor requisitioned by the contractor on a PWA projects is not available, then the Reemployment Service Director will certify to the Labor Management Director of Works Progress that such labor is not available. The certification will include the amount and kind of labor and the wage being offered by the contractor on each unfilled requisition that cannot be completed with labor from relief rolls.
3. After it has been demonstrated that workers with necessary skills are not available and cannot be assigned within the vicinity of the work, the state WPA labor management director will then authorize the state reemployment service director to complete the unfilled requisition of the contractor without reference to relief rolls.

TVA REJECTED BY FOUR CITIES

West Tennessee Officials Oppose 20-Year Contract

UNION CITY, Tenn., Dec. 4 (AP)—Officials of three West Tennessee municipalities meeting here last night declared themselves strongly opposed to accepting a standard TVA contract to supply electrical power over a 20-year period.

The three cities represented were Union City, Trenton and Dyersburg, each of which owns and operates its own electrical power plant. Approval of the contract by the trio is necessary for the TVA to complete a power [illegible] West Tennessee towns.

Robert Adams, city attorney of Trenton, said that under the proposed contract "TVA has both ends of the rope and the middle besides."

[illegible]tions revolved about the 20-year clause.

Mayor W. M. Miles, of Union City, expressed disapproval of a long-term contract.

"If we could buy the power from TVA and sell it as we wish," he said, "it would be a different proposition. We, in Union City, wish to maintain our autonomy and sell power [illegible]dling. I never did like the idea of a man selling me something, and then telling me how I should use [illegible]"

Mayor L. D. Hammer, of Dyersburg, said "there is absolutely nothing in the contract that leaves anything [illegible] ity.

"We are left no voice in the matter. None of us are opposing or upholding the TVA, but we are trying to do what is best for the people of West Tennessee, generally."

OBSTACLE FACES NEW TVA HOOKUP

Tennessee Towns Refuse To Abandon Plants

UNION CITY, Tenn.—(AP)—The Tennessee Valley Authority's proposed electric power hook-up of West Tennessee towns faced a barrier Wednesday that apparently threatened its completion.

The snag that has the TVA program for expansion blocked at least temporarily is the refusal of three towns to abandon municipally-owned power plants for the TVA system of distribution.

Union City, Dyersburg and Trenton stood firmly opposed to entering into a 20-year contract whereby they buy electricity from the TVA for resale to inhabitants. A fourth municipality, Covington, also is withdrawing its approval.

Acceptance by these four cities is needed by the TVA to complete a "loop" of towns.

Mayor W. M. Miles, of Union City, who has vigorously opposed a TVA contract, said at a meeting of city officials of Dyersburg, Trenton and Union City that his city wishes to "sell power without government meddling."

Mayor L. D. Hamner, of Dyersburg, expressed the same thought, saying the contract left "absolutely nothing [illegible]

Officials of each of the towns said if they accepted the TVA standard contract they would be forced to increase taxes from 86 cents to $1.50 to cover revenues now obtained from the municipality-owned plants.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

"Louise, how many things do you have on your list that you want for Christmas?" asked Mary.

"Oh, I have nine on mine."

"I have seven on mine."

Just then the door bell rang. When Louise opened the door there stood Evelyn Thompson, a little girl with ragged clothes. She asked if her mother wanted to buy any turnip greens, said she was selling them so her little crippled sister could have a happy Christmas. When she had gone, Louise went back to her seat, and said, "Don't we have a lot to be thankful for?"

"Oh, I suppose so; at any rate we have more than a lot of people. By the way, who was that at the door?"

"Oh, that was Evelyn Thompson selling turnip greens so her little sister could have a happy Christmas."

"Selling turnip greens for a present for some one else and here we sit just making out the list of things we want."

"Why do we have to get so much any way? Why couldn't we give them something?"

"Yes, and I've got lots of toys up stairs that I don't play with, and we could paint them, and some of them would look like new."

"I've got some money we can buy them some nuts and candy with."

In an hour's time the two were hauling toys from the attic.

The day before Christmas Mary and Louise were walking away from the home of Evelyn Thompson, and Louise said "Mary don't you think it is better to give than to receive?"

College Y. W. A. Meets With Mrs. Riddle

The College Y. W. A. met at the home of Mrs. J. I. Riddle Tuesday night, December 10, at 7 o'clock for its annual Christmas program. The parlor was dimly lighted with candles, and bowls of button chrysanthemums and Christmas foliage were placed about the room. Program leaflets, shaped like Santa Claus going down a chimney, contained the following program: Song, "Joy to the World." Devotional, Tommie Lee Holmes. "Make Room for Joy," Mirian Denton. "Make Room for Peace," Virginia Holbrook. Song, "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear." "Make Room for Humidity," Ruth Cobb. "Make Room for Him Today," Kitty Snead. Orchestra, "O, Little Tavern of Bethlehem."

The annual Christmas Banquet of the Studiosis and Music Clubs was held in Main Dormitory Tuesday evening, December 10th. The assembly hall and parlors were decorated with Christmas evergreens, candles and poinsettas. The sacred significance of the season was suggested by the reproduction of an English church at the base of the stairway in the assembly hall.

The Home Economics Department served a delicious buffet supper consisting of turkey and dressing, salads, ice cream and coffee. The Christmas colors were carried out in the dainty mints served with the coffee.

Within the church members of the College Glee Club sang Christmas carols. The speech chorus of Alabama College rendered a number of beautiful Christmas selections, ending the program with "Merry Christmas" wish.

: : : :

Rev. Augustus J. Cox, Minister

Mr. Cox will use as his subject at the 11 o'clock service "The Beautiful Ideal."

A Union service of all the churches of Montevallo will be held at the Presbyterian church at 7:30. This is to be a special Christmas program. Dr. F. D. Person, pastor of the Montevallo Baptist church will deliver a special Christmas message.

At Christmas Time...

ALL ROADS LEAD TO HOME

Go home for the holidays if you can. The clasp of a welcoming hand, the sound of a friendly voice, are gifts of happiness that nobody should forego.

Time or distance, however, may prevent your visiting a few close friends and relatives whom you would so much like to see. Then all you have to do, as many folks have learned, is to let "long distance" bring you and your friends together for a voice-to-voice visit.

It doesn't matter whether you call on Christmas day or not, you will both get a real thrill from your telephone visit any time during the holiday season.

The pleasure you will experience from your visits by telephone is not expensive. For example, by using Station-to-Station service after 7 P. M., you can talk 150 miles for about 50 cents, and other distances for similarly low cost.

Your "long distance" operator will be pleased to inform you about rates to any point, and help make your holidays pleasant by giving quick connections to the friends you want to greet.

VOLUME 3, NUMBER 37 MONTEVALLO, ALABAMA, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1935 SUBSCRIPTION $1.00 PER YEAR

WPA Workers To Go To PWA Jobs

FULL RELIEF LOAD WILL BE ABSORBED UNDER REGULATIONS ANNOUNCED

With contracts awarded on virtually all projects in the $10,000,000 construction program of the Public Work Administration in Alabama, H. S. Geismer, state director said that the Public Works Administration's full complement of the relief load would be absorbed in the transfer of workers from the Works Progress Administration.

Absorption of PWA's share of the relief load, Mr. Geismer said, would mean increased payrolls for the workers and for the communities in which PWA projects are underway. The increase in pay would represent the differences between the "security payments" of the Works Progress Administration and the prevailing wage scale provided in all public works contracts of the type awarded by the Public Works Administration.

Alabama's record of being out in front in the award of contracts on all PWA projects by December 15, except several electric projects that are tied up in court, will be maintained in getting eligible former relief workers on the higher pay jobs as rapidly as possible in accord with the President's announced policy, Mr. Geismer said.

"We ask and expect the cooperation of all contractors in carrying out the President's policy as a part of the contract they have signed," Mr. Geismer said. "We recognize that it is only natural that a contractor would prefer to favor known workers in employing labor for his PWA job, but such a procedure, at the expense of the qualified and eligible worker from relief rolls would, if generally pursued, defeat the purpose of the entire program.

"The former relief worker, of course does not have an absolute right to the job above all other persons, but under terms of the contract he does have the right the preference in opportunity to prove that he can do the job to which he is assigned. He should not be denied the opportunity to prove his ability to do the job."

Mr. Geismer announced that regulations governing the transfer of workers from the Works Progress Administration program to the contract jobs of the PWA were being mailed to all contractors.

The Christmas Rush

By

Augustus J. Cox

We are now in the annual Christmas rush, with its business of going and coming, buying and selling, with its hustle and bustle and holiday-making. People are now crowding the stores and streets. Hotels overflow. You might not think, if you did not know the facts, that we had been suffering for over five years from the debilitating effects of a severe business depression, or rather, oppression.

The first Christmas rush took place in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago. People from all parts of Palestine flocked there. There was a great to-do of going and coming, as men crowded the stores and streets. The inn overflowed. One might not think, if one did not know the facts, that the country had been suffering for years from the debilitating effects of a severe foreign oppression.

Yet those effects showed through the hustle and bustle of the day. There was a constant undercurrent of strain. The very cause of the gathering in Bethlehem was the order that had gone out from Caesar Augustus that "all the world should be taxed." The iron shoe of the Roman Empire. The burdens that men bind on men! All the world should be taxed. Nobody was to escape, not even the woman who carried the Christ-child under her heart, and who only wanted to slip aside into the stillness of the night that He might be born and that she might adore Him.

So today, under the hustle and bustle of the Christmas season there is a constant undercurrent of strain. Sometimes because it comes out in the open, and people hate the very thought of Christmas because it means only increased work, a heavier burden. The idea still seeems to be that all the world should be taxed, strained to the breaking point. The crushing claims of modern life! The burdens that men bind on men! Nobody shall escape, not even they who carry the Christ-child in their hearts, and only want to slip aside into the stillness of the night that He may be born again and that they may adore

That night in Bethlehem the baby was born, in a stable by the way, off the main tsack of life a little, while the world did something else. He was just a reminder of the "real business of the race, which is not make money, but to make life full and sweet and satisfying," a reinder to "those who have fallen under the delusion that action is the only effective form of expression . . . forgetting that action is only a path to being and that joy of life is largely found by the way." The only other people who were there, besides the bright angels who of course could not keep away, were some shepherds who were still simple enough not to be preoccupied with other things. They could understand that which was taking place because they, too, lived off what others took to be the main track of life, and they knew what the world missed: the beauty of still nights trembling into dawn, and of the immaculate march of the stars and of a warm little baby lying in the sweet hay. And so God hid His secret from the wise and prudent, and revealed it unto babes.

And if there are any souls today who are still babes enough not to be preoccupied with other things, they will know where to find Mary's baby on His birthday, just a little to one side of what the world considers life, on the outskirts of the rush and clatter that obscure His beauty. For them Christmas Day, even in 1935, will be a day of victory in the defeat of the world, a day of peace in the conflict of the world, a day of hush in the rush of the world.

A Church To Fill

by Frances Grinstead

OUR family had attended Christ mas services at the church on the brow of the hill.

It is just a "little brown church," but of recent years it has been modernized with a furnace, a basement for church dinners, and work tables and sand piles in the Sunday school rooms. The grown-ups like it better since there are more and bigger oil lamps.

"What else are you doing at your church this week?" asked Uncle Joe as he spread his napkin and looked toward the turkey. Uncle Joe is a New England minister, with his eyes usually set on heaven; but he does like turkey.

"What Else Are You Doing at Your Church?" Asked Uncle Joe.

"Why, nothing else," mother answered. "What would we have at the church besides Sunday services and the Christmas sermon, since we've left off Wednesday night prayer meetings?"

"Tell you what I'd do if it were my church," replied uncle, watching father carve. "I'd keep that place warm from morning till late night all this week, with somebody serving tea to any who might drop in, and something going on throughout the holidays. I heard Dave say last night there's nowhere to go but the movies."

Brother jumped "You wouldn't expect me to go to church every day sir?"

"I'd fix it so you couldn't stay away. Would you turn down a chance at an old-fashioned taffy pull?"

"Then, since your mother doesn't have to get you off to school this week, why shouldn't she go herself?"

"Are you leaving me out, Joe?" asked father, laying down the carving tools.

"Not by any means! This would be a mighty good time to get your county agent to tell you what to raise next year instead of corn and hogs. Or to get your hand in at chess. By the way, I'd have all those big low tables covered with games. I'll bet there are sets of anagrams and cribbage just going to waste in your attic—"

"There are!" cried Dave, "and wouldn't it be fun, mom, to get out our old phonograph to show the fellows? We got some good records."

"Yes, but hurry, so you can wash the dishes while I use the phone. There's going to be so much going on in that church, we'll be falling over each other to get into it."

Late Christmas Dinner

by Gertrude H. Walton

IMPATIENTLY Louise shoved the steaming pans and kettles into the warming oven. Looking down the driveway as she had done for almost two hours, she exclaimed:

"Of course Horton called that he might be late. But what is keeping sister and Hal, and Aunt Jen, Uncle Jim, Betty and Clyde? Six people invited to a Christmas dinner and all of them late! Accident? Surely not all of them in a heap along the roadside unless each bumped into the other hurrying because they are late to our dinner!" Louise was smiling even before a honk sent her outside.

"Horton, please drive me to Larion crossroads. Maybe we'll meet sister and Hal. Maybe they will know why the others are delayed. Sort of a news center at the crossroads, anyway."

"Drive Me to Larion Crossroads. Maybe We Will Meet Sister."

"Pshaw! Don't worry. They probably think you will not have dinner promptly at 1 o'clock—"

"But I told each one that we would have dinner promptly because I thought you boys might wish to hear the program at Baxter. Do you suppose they have all gone to the festival before coming here?"

"That's it, exactly! Let's go, too! Then we can all come home together to a grand Christmas reunion dinner," Horton interrupted.

"Come home to cold turkey, dressing, and potatoes reunion dinner, you mean," Louise snapped.

Hurrying home and eating lunch, Horton, with Louise a bit reluctant, started for Baxter, where a special festival of Christmas music and drama, an annual community affair, for many years, between rival towns, would be presented at the Community Center playhouse. Prizes were awarded to best productions from the two towns.

"The guests must have misunder stood my letter. Whatever it is, they have all 'misunderstood together,' Louise whined.

He seemed unsympathetic to Louise's further peevish questions:

"But not one of our guests are here that I can see. Do you glimpse Uncle's bald head, or sister's fur?"

After the program Horton and Louise watched every means of exit for their guests, then hurried home, arriving at five o'clock. At sight of the left-over dinner, Louise sobbed:

"Never saw such a frost. What on Adam's earth could have happened? What have we—have I done to deserve such snubs?" She was almost suspicious that Horton had something to do with the absence of their guests. She leaped to the jangling of the telephone. Anything was better than silence—or was it?

"Ye—yes—yes—we'll be there—at once!" The receiver clicked.

"Horton, hurry. Someone needs you—at Herald's Corners. Hal called. No, Hal and sister are not hurt, but someone else. You run on and I'll stay to prepare beds."

Horton, Hal, and Louise's sister soon arrived with a man, woman, and small child who had been buried under an automobile after being struck by a hit-and-run driver. When Hal found them, hours before, they were unconscious.

While administering to the injured ones in the spotless beds Louise provided, Uncle Jim and Aunt Jen arrived with Betty and Clyde, son and daughter-in-law, at exactly six o'clock!

"We were determined to be on time for dinner," Aunt Jen called innocently.

"Yes, you are in time—to help nurse these injured strangers," Louise answered, trying not to look discomfited.

"Jim had too bad a cold to go to the program at Baxter. So Clyde said he would drive our car and we would all come together. Clyde could not get away from the store until noon. We thought you would probably go to the program if we were not here to hinder during the afternoon. And we'd get here in time for your six o'clock dinner. Let us help make these injured ones comfortable. Or, we'll get the dinner on the table while you attend them," Aunt Jen rattled on.

"The date of the dinner's coldness seemed not to matter. One thing I've learned, that a cold dinner is no less palatable after eight hours, than for two hours' wait. It's all because of two times—two dates for dinner—12 o'clock—and six o'clock! Two things learned today!" Louise recited to herself the text of the letter sent to her guests, and as nearly as she could remember it was worded:

> "Can you come for Christmas dinner? Come early if the men wish to go with Horton to the program at Baxter. We women will gossip the afternoon away until the men return. Dinner promptly then!"

"Dinner at six—for six late guests! But it all turned out right. The poor people were rescued by Hal's coming in the afternoon. Hal said that since he had the afternoon for driving he would leisurely drive by way of Herald's Corners to see the new viaduct just completed. You and I, dear, attended the program together. Uncle Jim needed a driver. Next time I'll make it plain which dinner hour to expect my guests—at one o'clock or at six o'clock on Christmas!" Louise smiled the next day after the injured strangers were on their way, and the guests had returned to their homes.

His First Christmas

by
Earle Hooker Eaton

RING up the Pole and telephone
Without a moment's pause,
Or by the wireless make it known
To dear old Santa Claus,
That Papa's Boy and Mama's Joy,
And Sister's Precious Mite,
While glad bells clang will gaily hang
His stocking up tonight!

"Ting-ling! Ting-ling! Hello, hello!
Is that you Santa, dear?
Be sure your reindeer hear your 'Whoa'!
When you are passing here.
What's that? You'll come and bring a drum,
A jumping-jack and ball,
And other toys for little boys?
Dear Saint, you're best of all!"

'Tis Christmas morn, and to his shop
Old Santa homeward flies;
'Tis five o'clock, but open pop
The baby's roguish eyes.
We're dead for sleep, but out we creep
And dress at once to get
What Santa kind, has left behind
For Toddlekins, our pet.

From Pole to Pole there's surely not
A babe more pleased than he.
And how he crows, the happy tot,
And gurgles in his glee.
The jumping-jack, the ducks that quack,
The drum, the horns, the ball,
The chicks that peep, the horse, the sheep,
He tries to eat them all!

On this his first glad Christmas lark,
The toys with blocks he pelts,
He makes old Noah wish the Ark
Had landed somewhere else!
A soldier blue he breaks in two,
A puncture gives the drum.
He fills the air with legs and hair,
And then—he sucks his thumb!

The Sand-Man's surely come to town,
And soft is muvver's lap;
Clear up the wreck and snuggle down,
'Tis time to take a nap.
Then rock-a-bye, close each blue eye,
Rest, my darling, rest!
(He's fast asleep, with baby sheep Hugged tight against his breast!)

Christmas Givers
by
Agnes Myers

"LUELLA," said her mother with a warning look, "take your hand out of those raisins and finish paring the apples for my pies."

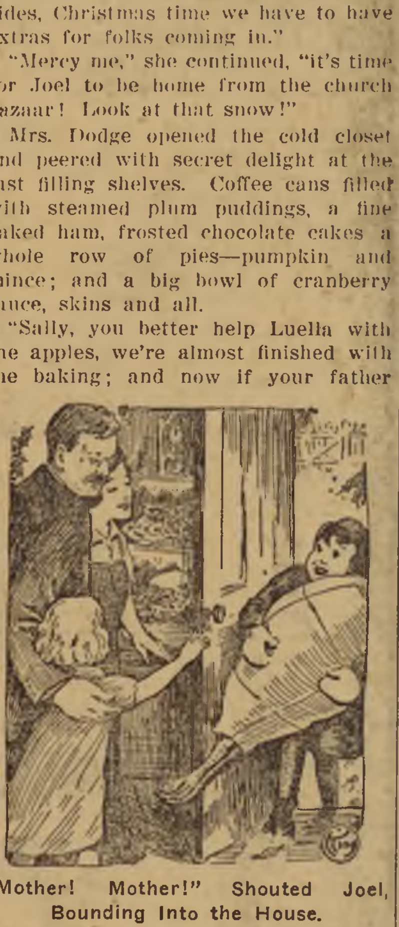
"But, I've done most a bushel already," giggled the guilty youngster.

"S'pose you have! How many pies do you figure you children eat? Besides, Christmas time we have to have extras for folks coming in."

"Mercy me," she continued, "it's time for Joel to be home from the church bazaar! Look at that snow!"

Mrs. Dodge opened the cold closet and peered with secret delight at the fast filling shelves. Coffee cans filled with steamed plum puddings, a fine baked ham, frosted chocolate cakes a whole row of pies—pumpkin and mince; and a big bowl of cranberry sauce, skins and all.

"Sally, you better help Luella with the apples, we're almost finished with the baking; and now if your father would bring the turkey, I could stuff it tonight."



"Mother! Mother!" Shouted Joel, Bounding Into the House.

She glanced toward the kitchen window—

"My stars! Here comes old Emil Cooper! I'll just give him a jug o that new cider and a mince pie, when he's going home."

Mrs. Dodge had a bountiful nature. She anticipated Emil Cooper and the many other hangers-on, who always showed up around Christmas; while the supply of pies and puddings grew less and less as the visitors departed.

"Father's coming!" cried the children and they ran to the door excitedly to meet him, followed by Mrs. Dodge. But a look of perplexity, almost distress, spread over her face.

"Where's the turkey?" she gasped.

"Fact is—" hesitated Mr. Dodge, "I—I gave it to Ned Blake on the way home—for his poor family. Mother—I couldn't, couldn't help it."

"Well," sighed Mrs. Dodge, with a crest-fallen face, "I guess they need it all right—and we still have the ham."

A light quick step sounded on the snowy porch.

"Mother! Mother!" shouted Joel bounded into the house with a bundle larger than himself. "See! See what I have! I won the big 25-pound turkey at the bazaar!"

"Why son!" exclaimed Mr. Dodge "that turkey is twice the size of the one we gave away!"

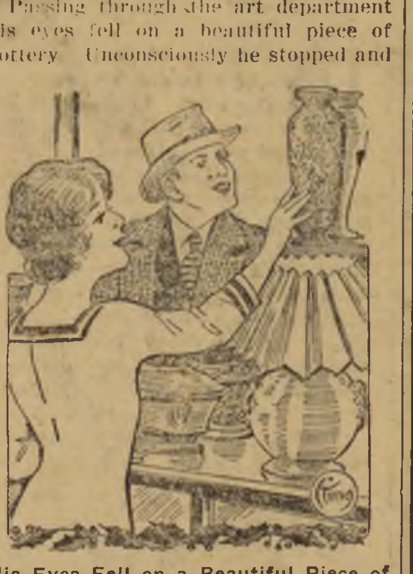
Christmas Shopping
by Katherine Edelman

KENNETH FOSTER hurried through the crowded streets. Everybody looked so happy, so eager, so good natured. He wondered why he felt so out of tune with them all.

From counter to counter he went. He wanted to compare values, to get the best price on everything he bought. He was going to do his Christmas shopping in a sensible way, the way it really ought to be done.

Passing through the art department his eyes fell on a beautiful piece of pottery. Unconsciously he stopped and admired its exquisite art. A sudden thought flashed through his mind. "Wouldn't mother love something like this? Wouldn't she get a thrill out of showing it to her friends?"



His Eyes Fell on a Beautiful Piece of Pottery.

Quickly his resolution to buy nothing but practical gifts vanished into thin air. He would buy the piece for mother. For the rest of the family, and others, he would get the gifts he had planned, but mother must have something to bring that light into her eyes that he loved to see. He was quite sure this lovely pottery would turn the trick. He could almost hear her say, "Oh, Kenneth, I've wanted something like this all my life!"

The purchase thrilled him with a strange satisfaction. He knew that he wouldn't have got the same joy out of buying something ordinary. He wasn't going to sneer any more at people buying "gee-gaws." Christmas seemed to call for something different. There should be practical gifts, too; no Christmas tree was complete without handkerchiefs, sweaters, hose and gloves, and such things, but there should be other things, too . . . Man did not live by bread alone, Kenneth was finding out; other things were necessary.

Suddenly his face broke into a grin. That's the very thing he would do. He would buy every last one of the family something practical, but he would also buy them something that he felt they would love to have: some bit of beauty or frivolity that they would not otherwise get.

The money that he was spending had come to him in a letter from his grandfather a few days before. "Buy Christmas gifts for the family with this," the old man had written. "It is quite a sum for a young fellow to spend alone, but I am sure that you will do it wisely. And I want your report of what you bought after the holidays are over."

Kenneth had felt sure that his grandfather would want him to buy sensible things, but now, he felt differently. Something inside of him seemed to say that the way he was going to spend the money now was exactly as his grandfather wanted him to. What a letter he would have to write—surely he could put all the new found joy that he was experiencing into every line.

For now Kenneth was really in tune with the spirit of Christmas. There was not a shopper on the streets as happy as he was. Every counter seemed to have taken on new interest; shopping was really a pleasure, the biggest thrill that he had known in a long time.

He hurried to the book counter. Jane was going to have those leather-bound volumes of essays that she had wanted for so long. And Jimmie—Jimmie was going to get that motion picture machine he had been talking about. Gee, he could see Jimmie's face on Christmas morning; wouldn't he get a thrill out of showing the thing to his friends. And dad, well, dad was going to get a new set of golf clubs, a brand new bag of drivers, mashies, and putters! And grandfather was going to get a letter about the shopping trip and its results that would lift him right out of his chair!
